Right as dependent on status as citizen, resident, or taxpayer.—One who is not a citizen cannot enforce a public right or compel the performance of a public duty, where he has no special and peculiar interest in the matter. State v. Osborn, 60 Nebr. 415, 83 N. W. 357; People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., 42 Fed. 638. So a person who is not a resident in the territory to be embraced in a proposed new school-district cannot petition for mandamus to compel the formation of the district (Township 14 School Trustees v. People, 71 Ill. 559); and a taxpayer of a county is not beneficially interested in having a vote on county division re canvassed where he does not reside therein (Territory v. Cole, 3 Dak. 301, 19 N. W. 418). See, however, Brooks v. Singer, 162 Ind. 568, 70 N. E. 980, holding that a legal voter of the state at the time the last preceding enumeration of the male inhabitants for legislative purposes was taken may maintain suit to test the constitutionality of an act of the general assembly based thereon apportioning the number of senators and representatives of the state, although the wrong complained of does instituted by the proper public officer;⁴² but that if the general public as distinguished from the state in its sovereign capacity is affected, any member of the state may sue out the writ.⁴³ However this may be, it is unquestionably the law that if a private individual has a special and peculiar interest in the enforcement of a public right or the performance of a public duty apart from the interest that he has as a member of the people at large, he is entitled to protect or enforce it by mandamus;⁴⁴ and even where no such interest exists, yet if the officer whose duty it is to institute the proceedings is absent⁴⁵ or declines to move,⁴⁶ the individual may do so. Although the right or duty sought to be enforced is a public one, yet if the public interest is not injuriously affected by a breach thereof, a private individual cannot enforce it solely in behalf of the public;⁴⁷ and if an individual sues, not in behalf of the public, but solely in his own behalf, he must have a special pecuniary interest in the matter, and a clear legal right to the relief asked, else the writ will not issue.⁴⁸ Where, however, jurisdiction of a writ upon the relation of a private person is assumed because the subject-matter affects the prerogatives of the state a settlement between the relator and the respondent is immaterial.⁴⁹

(II) SUFFICIENCY OF INTEREST. No general rule can be laid down as to what constitutes an interest sufficient to entitle a private individual to institute mandamus proceedings to enforce a public right or compel the performance of a public duty. A great variety of public rights and duties are enforceable by mandamus, and the sufficiency of the interest of a private individual therein to entitle him to this remedy depends upon the nature of the right or duty sought to be enforced in the particular case; in the note below⁵⁰ will be found numerous Potts*, 2 Mont. 242) is "beneficially interested" in having a public duty performed, and hence may apply for mandamus; that a resident and elector of a city who owns property therein which is taxed annually for municipal purposes is "beneficially interested" in the question of the continuation of the city, and hence may petition for mandamus to compel the board of trustees to call an election on the question of disincorporating the city (Frederick v. San Luis Obispo, 118 Cal. 391, 50 Pac. 661); that a trustee of an express trust has such beneficial interest in the trust estate as to enable him to compel the surveyor-general to allow him to contest the application of a third person for the purchase of the land held in trust (Tyler v. Houghton, 25 Cal. 26); that a lumberman has a special interest in having a canal upon which he transports lumber kept open for navigation by the canal company (Savannah, etc., Canal Co. v. Shuman, 91 Ga. 400, 17 S. E. 937, 44 Am. St. Rep. 43); that inhabitants of a parish who are put to inconvenience and injury in reaching the court-house have such an interest in the erection of a new one in a proper place as to authorize a mandamus to compel the construction of the new court-house (Watts v. Carroll Police Jury, 11 La. Ann. 141); that an individual has sufficient interest to compel a water company, a public service corporation, to supply water to him (Robbins v. Bangor R., etc., Co., 100 Me. 496, 62 Atl. 136, 1 L. R. A. 963); that one who has complied with the statute in making a plat of land and has made the streets thereon to correspond with the general plan of the city has sufficient interest to compel the board of public works to approve his plat (Campau v. Detroit Bd. of Public Works, 86 Mich. 372, 49 N. W. 39); that a chattel mortgagee has a special interest entitling him to compel the proper officer to file the mortgage (Pistorius v. Stempel, 81 Mich. 133, 45 N. W. 968); that a person in whose favor a judgment has been rendered by a justice of the peace has a right to have an appeal to the circuit court dismissed for failure of appellant to pay the justice his fee for making a return as a condition precedent to the perfection of the appeal, and hence is entitled to mandamus to review the action of the circuit judge in taking jurisdiction of the appeal (People v. Allegan Cir. Judge, 29 Mich. 487); that a person in possession of a vault under a sidewalk, and therefore charged with the duty of keeping it in repair, has a sufficient interest to entitle him to maintain mandamus against the commissioner of public works to permit him to make the repairs (People v. Collis, 17 N. Y. App. Div. 448, 45 N. Y. Suppl. 282); that a Union veteran having a right to a preference in employment in the civil service has a special interest entitling him to enforce that right (Matter of Sullivan, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 285, 8 N. Y. Suppl. 401); that the writ lies by resident landowners to enforce the act as to fencing and keeping stock (Perry v. Chatham County, 130 N. C. 558, 41 S. E. 787); and that the voters residing in territory which they wish to have excluded from city limits have sufficient interest to entitle them to compel an election on the question of exclusion (Sansom v. Mercer, 68 Tex. 488, 5 S. W. 62, 2 Am. St. Rep. 505). On the other hand it has been held that an elector of a county is not ipso facto "beneficially interested" in an election on the question of the removal of the county-seat (Linden v. Alameda County, 45 Cal. 6); that a stock-holder in various banks cannot maintain the writ to rescind an order of bank examiners fixing their compensation for examinations (State v. Benton, 31 Nebr. 44, 47 N. W. 477); and that a taxpayer has no special interest in having the county clerk pay the fees of his office to the county collector as required by law (State v. Hollinshead, 47 N. J. L. 439, 2 Atl. 244).

As to carriers.—A coal-land owner has sufficient interest to compel a railroad company to furnish cars (Loraine v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 205 Pa. St. 132, 54 Atl. 580, 61 L. R. A. 502); and a merchant desiring to ship goods may compel an express company to receive and carry them (Southern Express Co. v. Rose Co., 124 Ga. 581, 53 S. E. 185, 5 L. R. A. N. S. 619). A citizen of a municipality may apply for a writ to compel a street railway company to comply with conditions as to rate of fares, etc. (People v. Suburban R. Co., 178 Ill. 594, 53 N. E. 349, 49 L. R. A. 650. Railroads generally see infra, this note.

As to criminal proceedings.—It has been held that one who has filed a criminal complaint with a magistrate has sufficient interest to compel him to act thereon. State v. Yakey, (Wash. 1906) 85 Pac. 990. Contra, Fritts v. Charles, 145 Cal. 512, 78 Pac. 1057. And see Mitchell v. Boardman, 79 Me. 469, 10 Atl. 452. Inspection of record to obtain evidence see infra, this note.

As to elections for public office.—A candidate for office has a special interest entitling him to compel a canvass of the returns. Shull v. Gray County, 54 Kan. 101, 37 Pac. 994; In re Contested Elections, 1 Brewst. (Pa.) 67, 4 Phila. 362; Smith v. Lawrence, 2 S. D. 185, 49 N. W. 7. So petitioners nominating a candidate have such special interest in having his name appear on the official ballots as to entitle them to require the secretary of state to certify the fact of his nomination to the various county clerks. Simpson v. Osborn, 52 Kan. 328, 34 Pac. 747. It has been held, however, that candidates cannot, after elections which resulted in no choice, require the proper authority to order another election. O'Brien v. Pawtucket, 18 R. I. 113, 25 Atl. 914.

As to issuance and payment of bonds, orders, and warrants.—One who has sold lands to a municipal corporation may, with the corporation's consent, compel the proper officer to issue bonds to him for the price (People v. Brennan, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 522); and a railroad company may compel a county to issue bonds in payment of a stock subscription (Smith v. Bourbon County, 127 U. S. 105, 8 S. Ct. 1043, 32 L. ed. 73). And municipal bondholders may compel the payment of interest on the bonds. South St. Bridge Com'rs v. Philadelphia, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 596, 7 Phila. 298. A public school-teacher may compel the issuance of a warrant for his salary. State v. James, 14 Wash.

82, 44 Pac. 116. And one who holds an order on a municipal treasurer may compel payment thereof. State v. Bloom, 19 Nebr. 562, 27 N. W. 638; Portland Stone Ware Co. v. Taylor, 17 R. I. 33, 19 Atl. 1086 (order for payment of price of material furnished); State v. Haben, 22 Wis. 660. See, however, Foote v. Noxubee County, 67 Miss. 156, 6 So. 612 (holding that, although the holder of an order on the supervisors for the issuance of a warrant for part of a debt due by the county for building a bridge is to that extent the equitable assignee of the debt, he cannot by mandamus compel the board to make an allowance and issue a warrant in his favor for the amount named in the order); Elser v. Ft. Worth, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 27 S. W. 739 (holding that one who has contracted to sell bonds to a city, which, however, are not to be delivered until payment of warrants issued for the price, cannot compel payment of the warrants, there having been no exchange of the bonds and warrants).

As to issuance of execution.—A judgment plaintiff is specially interested in having the proper officer issue execution according to law. Moore v. Muse, 47 Tex. 210. And see Pistorius v. Stempel, 81 Mich. 133, 45 N. W. 968.

As to liquor laws.—A retail liquor dealer is "beneficially interested" in having a license issued to him, and hence he may compel it (Territory v. McPherson, 6 Dak. 27, 50 N. W. 351); and a liquor licensee who is about to be subjected to an additional license-tax under a statute alleged by him to have been passed in an illegal manner and to cure which someone had without authority made false entries in the legislative journal has sufficient interest to entitle him to require the secretary of state to erase such entries (State v. Wilson, 123 Ala. 259, 26 So. 482, 45 L. R. A. 772). But a private citizen has no special interest in having a police judge issue on his complaint a warrant for search of premises for intoxicating liquors. Mitchell v. Boardman, 79 Me. 469, 10 Atl. 452. Inspection of records relating to intoxicating liquors see infra, this note.

As to payment of judgment against municipality.—It has been held that the assignee of a judgment against a municipality has an interest entitling him to compel payment thereof. Chicago v. Sansum, 87 Ill. 182. See, however, Schuck v. Pittsburgh, 7 Pa. Cas. 583, 11 Atl. 651.

As to public contracts.—A person who would be a competent bidder under a state law for letting a contract has sufficient interest to compel state officers to carry out the law (People v. Board of State Auditors, 42 Mich. 422, 4 N. W. 274); and the lowest bidder for a public contract may compel the letting of the contract to him (People v. Buffalo Co., 4 Nebr. 150), unless the matter rests in the discretion of the proper public officers (Com. v. Mitchell, 82 Pa. St. 343).

So one who is employed to furnish evidence necessary to authorize the county auditor to subject to taxation property improperly omitted from the tax duplicate, and who is to receive for his services a percentage of the tax collected on the restored property, has an interest sufficient to entitle him to compel the auditor to act on the evidence so furnished. State v. Crites, 43 Ohio St. 142, 26 N. E. 1052. Paving contracts see infra, this note. Payment of price of property sold to municipality see supra, this note.

As to public records.—It has been held that any citizen, although having no special interest, may compel the custodian of a public record to allow him to inspect it and to furnish him copies thereof. Com. v. Bair, 5 Pa. Dist. 488; Clay v. Ballard, '87 Va. 787, 13 S. E. 262. See, however, Colnon v. Orr, 71 Cal. 43, 11 Pac. 814, holding that a citizen does not ipso facto have a beneficial interest in the inspection of a public record, so as to entitle him to petition for mandamus to obtain inspection. And see cases cited infra, this paragraph. In any event a citizen is entitled to the writ where he has an interest in the matter. Boylan v. Warren, 39 Kan. 301, 18 Pac. 174, 7 Am. St. Rep. 551; State v. Williams, 41 N. J. L. 332, 32 Am. Rep. 219. And see U. S. v. Hall, 7 Mackey (D. C.) 14, 1 L. R. A. 738, holding that an attorney who has requested, in behalf of a client, a certified copy of an abandoned or rejected application for a patent has such an interest as to entitle him to compel the commissioner of patents to furnish the copy. It has been held, however, that mandamus will not lie to allow the inspection of records by a private individual for the sole purpose of obtaining evidence for the institution of a criminal prosecution. Payne v. Staunton, 55 W. Va. 202, 46 S. E. 927. And see Thomas v. Hamilton, 101 Mich. 387, 59 N. W. 658, holding that mandamus will not lie at the instance of a private individual to compel a druggist to allow relator to examine his record of sales of liquor. But see State v. Williams, supra, holding that a citizen desiring to ascertain whether the provisions of the city charter in regard to licensing saloons have been observed, with a view of securing due obedience to the law, is entitled to an inspection of the letters of recommendation filed with the collector of taxes as the basis for the issuance of licenses.

As to publication of laws and official reports.—It has been held that the proprietor of a newspaper has no such interest in the publication of session laws as to entitle him to compel publication by mandamus. Welch v. Mahaska County, 23 Iowa 199. On the other hand it has been held that mandamus will lie to compel county commissioners to make the necessary report of their financial transactions on the application of publishers of newspapers having the necessary circulation to entitle them to publish the report.

State v. Fayette County, 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. 433, 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 316.

As to railroads.—An abutter has sufficient interest to compel a street railroad company to operate its line. State v. Spokane St. R. Co., 19 Wash. 518, 53 Pac. 719, 67 Am. St. Rep. 739, 41 L. R. A. 515. And by statute in Pennsylvania "two reputable citizens resident in the region traversed by the line" of a street railway company have a standing to compel the attorney-general to institute proceedings against the company to compel it to perform its statutory duties. Cheetham v. McCormick, 178 Pa. St. 186, 35 Atl. 631 [reversing 38 Wkly. Notes Cas. 124]. Issuance of municipal bonds in payment of stock subscription see supra, this note. Railroad aid tax see infra, this note. Railroad as carrier see supra, this note.

As to schools.—Resident taxpayers and voters having children of scholastic age have sufficient interest to compel the appointment of school trustees or directors (Porter v. State, 78 Tex. 591, 14 S. W. 794), and to compel the trustees or directors to perform their duties (Hightower v. Overhauser, 65 Iowa 347, 21 N. W. 671; State v. Columbus Bd. of Education, 35 Ohio St. 368. And see Hancock v. Perry Dist. Tp., 78 Iowa 550, 43 N. W. 527). See also Brophy v. Schindler, 126 Mich. 341, 85 N. W. 1114. Thus such persons may compel such officers to perform their duties with reference to the establishment of schools (Maddox v. Neal, 45 Ark. 121, 55 Am. Rep. 540), the location of school-houses (Eby v. Red Bank School Dist., 87 Cal. 166, 25 Pac. 240), and the removal of school-houses (Heintz v. Moulton, 7 S. D. 272, 64 N. W. 135); and a father may compel the admission of his child to a public school (Cartwright v. Coffeyville Bd. of Education, (Kan. 1906) 84 Pac. 382; People v. Detroit Bd. of Education, 18 Mich. 400; Kaine v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 490. And see Weir v. State, 161 Ind. 435, 68 N. E. 1023). Issuance of warrant in payment of teacher's salary see supra, this note.

As to streets, highways, and bridges.—Abutting owners have a special interest in having the road officers enter into a paving contract (Com. v. Dickinson, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 561), and in having the improvement done in accordance with the petition therefor (Carey Salt Co. v. Hutchinson, 72 Kan. 99, 82 Pac. 721); and also in having the street or road kept in repair (Catlettsburg v. Kinner, 13 Bush (Ky.) 334; Hammar v. Covington, 3 Mete. (Ky.) 494; Com. v. Doylestown, 16 Pa. Co. Ct. 161). But petitioners for a road as such have no greater interest than the rest of the community in procuring its location (Sanger v. Kennebec County, 25 Me. 291. But see Throckmorton v. State, 20 Nebr. 647, 31 N. W. 232), and an individual cannot compel the opening of an established road merely because the public would thereby be relieved of the necessity of passing over his land (Moon v. Cort, 43 Iowa 503); and the writ will not lie to compel the removal of obstructions from an abandoned road, although it affords the only access to relator's farm, the injury being to him only as one of the public (Atwood v. Partree, 56 Conn. 80, 14 Atl. 85). Mandamus to compel the erection of approaches to a bridge will not be granted on the petition of a private relator where the substance of the injury is that customers are kept from relator's mill by want of such approaches (Com. v. Westfield Borough, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. 369); but the writ will lie to compel township officers to rebuild a bridge which has been maintained for forty years, where the river over which it was built divides the farms of some of the petitioners, and some of them live on the side of the river opposite to the school-house, so that their children must needs go a considerable distance out of their way to get to school (Brophy v. Schindler, 126 Mich. 341, 85 N. W. 1114). Street assessments see infra, this note.

As to taxation.—A taxpayer is sufficiently interested in having all the property of the district assessed to petition for mandamus to compel such assessment. Hyatt v. Allen, 54 Cal. 353; Ford v. Cartersville, 84 Ga. 213. With stronger reason a creditor of a city may compel the levy of a tax to pay its debts. Howard v. Huron, 5 S. D. 539, 59 N. W. 833, 26 L. R. A. 493. So a taxpayer has sufficient interest to compel the collection of taxes. State v. Fyler, 48 Conn. 145; Hawkins v. Dougherty, 9 Houst. (Del.) 156, 18 Atl. 951; State v. Gracey, 11 Nev. 223. See, however, State v. Dubuclet, 28 La. Ann. 85; State v. Walton, 24 La. Ann. 115, holding that a taxpayer has no special interest entitling him to compel the administrator of finance to bring suit against delinquent taxpayers in the proper court instead of in another court in which the administrator proposes to sue, although a suit in the latter court will involve the city in debt. And the beneficiaries of a street assessment may likewise compel its collection. Higgins v. Chicago, 18 Ill. 276. A taxpayer has sufficient interest to compel the levy and collection of a railroad aid tax (State v. Clinton County, 162 Ind. 580, 68 N. E. 295, 70 N. E. 373, 984; Decatur County v. State, 86 Ind. 8; Crawford County v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 39 Ind. 192), and holders of bonds issued by a municipality in payment of its subscription to railroad stock may compel the levy and collection of a tax to pay interest thereon (Maddox v. Graham, 2 Mete. (Ky.) 56); but the railroad company cannot compel the levy and collection of a tax to enable the municipality to take stock (Crawford County v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., supra. Compare Harwood, etc., R. Co. v. Case, 37 Iowa 692). One who in good faith attends an advertised sale of property for delinquent taxes at the time named in the advertisement and requests the

f. Joinder.⁵¹ Persons having a joint or common interest in the issuance of a writ of mandamus may join in an application therefor,⁵² and are generally required to do so.⁵³ Persons having several and distinct interests, on the other hand, cannot join in the application,⁵⁴ and accordingly any one may bring a separate treasurer to offer the delinquent property for sale and demands the right to bid therefor has such an interest therein as will entitle him to compel the treasurer to offer the property for sale (State v. Farney, 36 Nebr. 537, 538, 54 N. W. 862); and a person complying with the statutory requirements has sufficient interest to compel the state auditor to convey to him such title as the state may have acquired to lands sold for taxes (McCulloch v. Stone, 64 Miss. 278, 8 So. 236). Public contract in relation to taxation see supra, this note.

Interest as affected by status as citizen, resident, taxpayer, or voter see cases cited supra, same note.

51. Joinder of causes of action see infra, IX, E, 3, e.

Joinder of respondents see infra, IX, C, 2, b.

52. Florida.—State v. Jacksonville Terminal Co., 41 Fla. 377, 27 So. 225, holding that special counsel for the state railroad commissioners may be joined with the attorney-general in a proceeding to enforce regulations of the commissioners.

Iowa.—Eden Independent Dist. No. 2 v. Rhodes, 88 Iowa 570, 55 N. W. 524, holding that a school-district and a teacher may join in compelling the president of the school-board to approve and file a contract between the teacher and the district.

Louisiana.—State v. State Tax Collector, 39 La. Ann. 530, 2 So. 59, holding that several taxpayers having a common interest in the enforcement of an ordinance for the reduction of assessments may unite in seeking like relief from the same injury on the same grounds.

New York.—See People v. Ontario County Suprs., 85 N. Y. 323 [reversing 17 Hun 501].

South Carolina.—State v. Melver, 2 S. C. 25, holding that the seller of corporate stock may join with the buyer in a proceeding to compel the corporation to transfer the stock on its books.

West Virginia.—Payne v. Staunton, 55 W. Va. 202, 46 S. E. 927, holding that several persons who make common application to a clerk of court for inspection of public records and are refused it may unite in mandamus to compel the clerk to allow such inspection.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 290.

Joinder of candidates or nominees.—Candidates for separate offices at the same election may join in a proceeding to compel a canvass of the returns. Lehman v. Pettin-gell, (Colo. 1907) 89 Pac. 48 (candidates for county treasurer and sheriff); State v. Kendall, (Wash. 1906) 87 Pac. 821 (candidates for city council). So nominees for one office may join in a proceeding to have their names placed on the official ballot. State v. Mount, 151 Ind. 679, 51 N. E. 417, (1898) 52 N. E. 407.

Joinder of officers who have been removed.

—It has been held that the members of an official board or the majority of them, having been illegally removed from office by the same order, may collectively compel their reinstatement. State v. Shakspeare, 43 La. Ann. 92, 8 So. 893; Hooper v. Farnen, 85 Md. 587, 37 Atl. 430. Contra, U. S. v. McKelden, MacArthur & M. (D. C.) 162 (semble); Rex v. Andover, Holt K. B. 441, 12 Mod. 332, Salk. 433.

53. Arkansas.—Lee County v. State, 36 Ark. 276, in which case it was held that an application to compel a new county to provide for the payment of its proportion of the debts of two counties contributing territory to such new county should be made in behalf of both such contributing counties, unless a separate proceeding may be maintained by one county alone without prejudice to the other.

Connecticut.—Douglas v. Chatham, 41 Conn. 211.

District of Columbia.—See U. S. v. Chandler, 2 Mackey 527.

Illinois.—Dement v. Rokker, 126 Ill. 174, 19 N. E. 33, holding that in a proceeding to compel state officers to pay money on a contract with petitioners, it is necessary to join all the persons originally interested in the contract as partners, and that a portion of the partners cannot maintain the suit in the firm-name, omitting one of the partners, by alleging that he has sold his interest in the contract to another one of the firm.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Allegheny Valley R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 565, holding that one of three interested municipalities cannot bring mandamus to compel a railroad company to restore a road lying in all.

Texas.—Austin v. Cahill, (Civ. App. 1905) 88 S. W. 536.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 290.

A majority of a municipal board may, without joining the others, sue an officer to enforce the rights of the board. Pearsons v. Ranlett, 110 Mass. 118. Proceeding by part of the members of a public board against the others see supra, IX, C, 1, a.

The provision of the General Practice Act requiring all parties in interest to be made plaintiffs or defendants does not apply to proceedings by mandamus. State v. Fraker, 166 Mo. 130, 65 S. W. 720; State v. Burkhardt, 59 Mo. 75.

Necessity of joining: Beneficiary in proceeding by trustee see supra, IX, C, 1, a. Principal in proceeding by agent see supra, IX, C, 1, a. Public officer in proceeding by individual to enforce public right or duty see supra, IX, C, 1, e, (1).

Relief in favor of person not joined see infra, IX, J, 2.

54. Delaware.—State v. Simmons, 3 Pennw. 291, 50 Atl. 213.

proceeding for relief without joining the others.⁵⁵ A person having no legal interest in the matter and to whom respondent owes no duty cannot be joined as a relator.⁵⁶

2. RESPONDENTS OR DEFENDANTS⁵⁷—a. In General. The party against whom the proceeding is instituted is properly termed respondent;⁵⁸ but in some states he may be termed defendant.⁵⁹

b. Persons Under Duty to Act⁶⁰—(i) NECESSARY AND PROPER PARTIES. The person or body whose duty it is to perform the act sought to be enforced by mandamus is a necessary party respondent.⁶¹ All persons or bodies on whom a District of Columbia.—U. S. v. McKelden, MacArthur & M. 162.

Kansas.—Dobbs v. Stauffer, 24 Kan. 127. And see State v. Reno County, 38 Kan. 317, 16 Pac. 337.

Maryland.—Smith v. Erb, 4 Gill 437.

Mississippi.—See Haskins v. Scott County, 51 Miss. 406.

Montana.—Wright v. Gallatin County, 6 Mont. 29, 9 Pac. 543, holding that several persons whose separate bids for county printing have been rejected cannot join in compelling an award of the contract to them in common.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. Huttel, 4 Pa. Super. Ct. 95, 40 Wkly. Notes Cas. 71, holding that husband and wife cannot join in compelling a constable charged with the execution of a landlord's warrant against the husband to appraise property part of which is claimed by the husband and part by the wife as exempt.

England.—Rex v. Andover, Holt K. B. 441, 12 Mod. 332, 2 Salk. 433; Rex v. Kingston-upon-Hull, 11 Mod. 382, 8 Mod. 209, Str. 578, holding that two persons cannot join in mandamus to a mayor to admit them to their freedom, as each has a distinct right.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 290. See, however, People v. Ontario County Sup'rs, 85 N. Y. 323 [reversing 17 Hun 501]. Compare State v. New Orleans, 52 La. Ann. 1639, 28 So. 163.

Citizens and persons having a special interest in the subject-matter cannot join in an application for mandamus. Dobbs v. Stauffer, 24 Kan. 127. And see Maddox v. Graham, 2 Mete. (Ky.) 56; Haskins v. Scott County, 51 Miss. 406; Com. v. Norristown, 17 Pa. Co. Ct. 187, 12 Montg. Co. Rep. 9.

The holders of separate claims against a state or municipality cannot join in a proceeding to compel or insure payment. Goodwyn v. Sherer, 145 Ala. 501, 40 So. 279; Heckart v. Roberts, 9 Md. 41; Ohlson v. Durefre, 82 Miss. 213, 33 So. 973; State v. Fraker, 166 Mo. 130, 65 S. W. 720; Lengel v. Stump, 1 Woodw. (Pa.) 399. So several persons to whom damages for laying out a road have been separately awarded cannot join in a proceeding to compel payment of the awards. Hoxie v. Somerset County Com'rs, 25 Me. 333 (semble); People v. Morgan, 97 N. Y. App. Div. 267, 89 N. Y. Suppl. 832.

55. Maddox v. Graham, 2 Mete. (Ky.) 56, holding that in a proceeding by bondholders to compel the levy and collection of a tax to pay railroad aid bonds it is not necessary to join either the railroad company or the taxpayers. And see cases cited infra, this note, and supra, note 54.

Bond and coupon holders.—Any one of the holders of a series of municipal bonds or of the coupons for interest thereon may institute a proceeding to compel or issue payment without joining the others. Meyer v. Porter, 65 Cal. 67, 2 Pac. 884 (semble); Maddox v. Graham, 2 Mete. (Ky.) 56; Territory v. Socorro, 12 N. M. 177, 76 Pac. 283; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496; State v. Byrne, 32 Wash. 264, 73 Pac. 394; Thompson v. Perris Irr. Dist., 116 Fed. 769; U. S. v. Kent, 107 Fed. 190. See, however, Douglas v. Chat-ham, 41 Conn. 211. Nor need the proceeding be instituted in behalf of the holders not joined. Thompson v. Perris Irr. Dist., supra.

56. State v. Simmons, 3 Pennew. (Del.) 291, 50 Atl. 213, holding that one who has contracted with a gas company to build gas works and to whom the company guaranteed access to the streets to lay pipes cannot join with the company in an application to compel the city authorities to grant a permit to open the streets for the purpose of laying pipes. And see Doolittle v. Branford, 59 Conn. 402, 22 Atl. 336.

Who should be named as respondent—As between public bodies and officers thereof.—If a municipal duty is imposed on a particular officer or board of officers, a proceeding to compel performance should be brought against such officer or board rather than against the municipality. State v. Towers, 71 Conn. 657, 42 Atl. 1083; Eyerly v. Jasper County, 72 Iowa 149, 33 N. W. 609 (holding that a proceeding to compel a return of taxes illegally collected should be brought, not against the county, but against its supervisors or treas-common duty rests may be joined as respondents in a proceeding for the purpose of compelling the performance of that duty,⁶² and are generally required to be urer); People v. New York, 3 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 502, 3 Keyes 81 [affirming 45 Barb. 473, 30 How. Pr. 327] (holding that the common council, and not the city, should be proceeded against for the enactment of an ordinance); Reg. v. Hereford, 2 Salk. 701 (holding that a proceeding to compel the admission of a person to the town clerkship should be brought against the mayor, not against the town); Mercier v. Roy, 16 Quebec Super. Ct. 510 (holding that where the inspection of town books is desired, the proceeding should run against, not the town, but the custodian of the books). Compare Bearden v. Fullam, 129 N. C. 477, 40 S. E. 204; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 628. But see Rex v. Taylor, 3 Salk. 231, holding that a proceeding to compel the reinstatement of an alderman should run against the corporation, not against the council. However, the municipality may be proceeded against if there is no officer or board charged with the duty of performance. State v. Towers, supra. On the same principle a court cannot be proceeded against for the performance of a duty imposed on its clerk. Daniels v. Miller, 8 Colo. 542, 9 Pac. 18; People v. Gale, 22 Barb. (N. Y.) 502, 3 Abb. Pr. 57, 13 How. Pr. 5 [affirmed in 3 Abb. Dec. 491, 3 Abb. Pr. 309, 13 How. Pr. 260]; State v. Williams, 45 Oreg. 314, 77 Pac. 965, 67 L. R. A. 166. If, however, a municipal board is charged with the duty in question, the proceedings should run against it, rather than against its subordinates. Holtzclaw v. Riley, 113 Ga. 1023, 39 S. E. 425 (cannot run against agent); Hooper v. Farnen, 85 Md. 587, 37 Atl. 430 (cannot run against secretary); Congregation v. Bordentown St., etc., Committee, 56 N. J. L. 48, 27 Atl. 799 (cannot run against committee appointed by city council); State v. Fond du Lac Bd. of Education, 63 Wis. 234, 23 N. W. 102, 53 Am. Rep. 282 (holding that where the superintendent of schools is elected by the board of education and is under its control, a proceeding to compel the reinstatement of a suspended pupil is properly brought against the board, rather than against the superintendent).

As between different public bodies or officers the proceeding should be brought against that one which is charged with the duty of performing the act sought to be enforced. People v. Municipal Civ. Service Commission, 30 Misc. (N. Y.) 519, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 833; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 628; Evans v. Pittsburgh, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,568, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 405. Thus in a proceeding to compel the levy of a tax to pay a judgment against the parish, the police jury (Fisk v. Jefferson Parish Police Jury, 38 La. Ann. 508); in a proceeding to compel the reinstatement of the janitor of a police station, the police board (Sims v. Boston, 191 Mass. 382, 77 N. E. 714); in a proceeding to compel a city to pay fines and penalties to the county board of education, the city or the board of aldermen (Bearden v. Fullam, 129 N. C. 477, 40 S. E. 204); and in a proceeding to compel an appropriation of moneys out of the county treasury, the justices of the county court (Connell v. Davidson, 2 Head (Tenn.) 188) are the necessary parties respondent.

As between corporations and officers thereof.—It has been held that a proceeding to compel the performance of a duty resting generally on the corporation as such should be brought against the corporation (State v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 79 Wis. 259, 48 N. W. 243, 12 L. R. A. 180; Goodwin v. Ottawa, etc., R. Co., 13 U. C. C. P. 254; Upton v. Hutchison, 8 Quebec Q. B. 505 [affirming 15 Quebec Super. Ct. 396, 2 Quebec Pr. 300]); but that where the duty rests on particular corporate officers, they are the necessary parties respondent (Winter v. Baldwin, 89 Ala. 483, 7 So. 734; State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167; State v. Bergenthal, 72 Wis. 314, 39 N. W. 566. Contra, Demorest v. Midland R. Co., 10 Ont. Pr. 82). See further infra, note 69. Parties respondent in mandamus to enforce right of stock-holder to inspect books of corporation see CORPORATIONS, 10 Cyc. 962.

As between different corporations.—A company which has leased a railroad and is building an extension thereof is a necessary party to a proceeding against the lessor company to compel the highways crossed by the extension to be put in good condition. Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Pike County Com'rs Ct., 97 Ala. 105, 11 So. 732.

If respondent is in the hands of a receiver, the receiver is a necessary party. Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 116 Ill. App. 633.

62. State v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., 39 Minn. 219, 39 N. W. 153; People v. Schielein, 95 N. Y. 124.

Joinder of public bodies and their officers.—In a proceeding against a town by a holder of its bonds to compel payment, the town officers whose duty it is to act may be joined as respondents (People v. Getzendaner, 137 Ill. 234, 34 N. E. 297); and the clerk of a court, although acting under the direction of the judge thereof, is properly impleaded with the latter in proceedings by the sheriff to compel the delivery to him of a venire facias for the summoning of jurors (Dickson v. Judge Detroit Recorder's Ct., 136 Mich. 479, 99 N. W. 405); and in proceedings to compel county commissioners to deliver to petitioner the books and papers of the office of county treasurer, their appointee, who is in possession of the office, may properly be joined as respondent (Cecil County Com'rs v. Banks, 80 Md. 321, 30 Atl. 919). A school-district may properly be joined as defendant in a proceeding against its officials to compel the performance of a duty (Barber v. Mulford, 117 Cal. 356, 49 Pac. 206); and a town board of supervisors may be joined in a proceeding against its chairman and clerk to compel them to convene the board, and declare a joined;⁶³ and even where some of those on whom a common duty rests are will-

Joinder of officers of same public body.—

Where the law divides the performance of a certain duty among several officers, each to perform but one act in a series, but all to cooperate in the attainment of a single result and by a continuous succession so as to preserve unity of performance of the entire duty, all may be joined as respondents in a proceeding to compel performance of the duty. State v. Williams, 45 Oreg. 314, 77 Pac. 965, 67 L. R. A. 166. And see infra, IX, C, 2. Thus several officers concerned in the separate but cooperative steps for the levy and collection of a tax may be joined as respondents. Labette County Com'rs v. U. S., 112 U. S. 217, 5 S. Ct. 108, 28 L. ed. 698; McKie v. Rose, 140 Fed. 145 (so holding, although some of them may not have refused to act); Guthrie v. Sparks, 131 Fed. 443, 65 C. C. A. 427; Hicks v. Cleveland, 106 Fed. 459, 45 C. C. A. 429. So the treasurer and supervisors of a county may be joined in a proceeding by a taxpayer to compel the repayment of taxes illegally collected (Eyerly v. Jasper County, 72 Iowa 149, 33 N. W. 609); and in a proceeding to compel payment of a claim against a board of education, its president and clerk may be joined as respondents, where they have duties to perform in regard to payment of claims (People v. Neilson, 5 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 367). If, however, the acts of the several officers are not parts of one entire duty devolved on all collectively, all cannot be thus joined. State v. Cornell, 54 Nebr. 158, 74 N. W. 398. In a proceeding to compel a canvass, all the canvassers may be joined as respondents (State v. Bailey, 7 Iowa 390); and in a proceeding against street improvement assessors to compel them to correct an error in assessing a lot outside of the assessment district, it is proper to join the collector, where he is proceeding to collect the assessment by levy on relator's property (People v. Wilson, 119 N. Y. 515, 23 N. E. 1064).

Joinder of officers of different public bodies.

—The several officers of a city and county who have functions to perform with reference to assessing personal property, levying taxes, and entering assessments and tax levies on the proper books may be joined as parties in a proceeding to compel the performance of those duties. State v. Harbison, 64 Kan. 295, 67 Pac. 844.

Joinder of officer as such and individually.

—In a proceeding to compel a school-board to recognize one claiming the right to teach under a contract, the trustees are properly joined both as trustees and as individuals, they being individually liable for costs, if plaintiff prevails. Pearsall v. Woolls, (Tex. Civ. App. 1899) 50 S. W. 959.

Joinder of private corporations and officers thereof.—Where the president of a corporation is in control of it, he may be joined as respondent in a proceeding against it to compel the performance of a corporate duty. West Virginia Northern R. Co. v. U. S., 134 Fed. 198, 67 C. C. A. 220.

Joinder of causes of action see infra, IX, E, 3, e.

63. Knight v. Ferris, 6 Houst. (Del.) 283; Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 116 Ill. App. 633.

Joinder of public officers generally.—The road overseer is a necessary party to a proceeding against county supervisors to compel the keeping of a road free from obstructions and in good repair. Peck v. Los Angeles County, 90 Cal. 384, 27 Pac. 301. Where the mayor and aldermen of a city rejected the vote of a ward at a local option election and ordered the city clerk not to record the return, they are necessary parties to a proceeding to compel the clerk to record the return. Taylor v. McPheters, 111 Mass. 351. Under a statute which requires the highway commissioner to submit the proposed expenditure for the construction of a bridge to, and obtain the approval of, the township board, where the commissioner has done so and the board has refused its approval, the board is a necessary party in a proceeding to compel the erection of the bridge. Berube v. Wheeler, 128 Mich. 32, 87 N. W. 50. The reclassification by a municipal civil service commission of a position which they have placed in the competitive class cannot be compelled in the absence of the mayor of the city and the state civil service commissioner, as the reclassification could not be made effective without their action. Dill v. Wheeler, 100 N. Y. App. Div. 155, 91 N. Y. Suppl. 686. In a proceeding against a board of inspectors of elections for a recount of ballots under the New York Election Law of 1896, section 84, the poll clerks are necessary parties respondent. Matter of Stiles, 69 N. Y. App. Div. 589, 75 N. Y. Suppl. 278. Where petitioner, a county commissioner, accepted another office, and the county judge appointed another in his place under the misapprehension that petitioner had vacated his office of commissioner, and petitioner sues to compel the judge and his appointee to permit petitioner to act as commissioner, the remaining county commissioners are necessary parties respondent. Gaal v. Townsend, 77 Tex. 464, 14 S. W. 365. See, however, as to joinder of officers, State v. Norvell, 80 Mo. App. 180; State v. Williams, 110 Tenn. 549, 75 S. W. 948, 64 L. R. A. 418.

Joinder of members of public board or court.—All the members of a municipal board must be joined as respondents in a proceeding to compel the performance of a duty imposed on the board. Eufaula v. Hickman, 57 Ala. 338. See also People v. Metropolitan Police Com'rs, 5 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 241 [reversed in 24 How. Pr. 611]. It is not enough to join merely a quorum, although they have once met as such. Deen v. Tanner, 106 Ga. 394, 32 S. E. 368. And see Matter ing to act in conjunction with the others, yet all must as a rule be made respondents.⁶⁴ As a limitation on the rule just announced, it should be observed that even though a common duty rests on several officers, yet where that duty requires them respectively to perform separate, although successive, acts independently of, although in coöperation with, others, those who have performed the particular acts required of them,⁶⁵ or who are willing to perform those acts,⁶⁶ or who have not refused such performance or expressed an intention not to perform when the time for performance arises,⁶⁷ need not be joined with the others in a proceeding to compel the latter to perform the particular acts which the law requires of them. Unless the granting of the writ would prejudicially affect their interests,⁶⁸ persons or bodies who are not invested with power to perform the act sought to be enforced, or who are not required by law to perform it, are not necessary parties respondent,⁶⁹ and of Broderick, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 534, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 99. So if it takes all the judges of a court to do the act desired, all are necessary parties. State v. King County Super. Ct., 4 Wash. 327, 30 Pac. 82. Where, however, by law a board is composed of only one permanent member, who calls to his aid two others as occasion may arise, it is sufficient to proceed against the permanent member alone. State v. Marshall County Judge, 7 Iowa 186.

Joinder of officer in different capacities.—In an application to compel a board of education to issue a teacher's certificate, the county superintendent of schools as such need not be joined; it is sufficient to join him as a member of the board. Keller v. Hewitt, 109 Cal. 146, 41 Pac. 871.

Joinder of public bodies and their officers.—In a proceeding by the holder of corporate bonds against the town issuing them to compel payment of the same, it is sufficient to file the petition against the town alone, without naming individuals, in order to obtain a peremptory mandamus to each of the agencies through which it must act to make payment of the claim. People v. Getzen-daner, 137 Ill. 234, 34 N. E. 297; Chicago v. Sansum, 87 Ill. 182. And see Bay State Gas Co. v. State, 4 Pennew. (Del.) 497, 56 Atl. 1120. See, however, Eyerly v. Jasper County, 72 Iowa 149, 33 N. W. 609. So it is not necessary to join the city council in a proceeding against a city to compel it to disconnect certain territory from it by ordinance. Charleston v. Wiley, 94 Ill. App. 53; Charleston v. Moore, 94 Ill. App. 51.

64. See cases cited infra, this note.

All the members of a public board should be joined as respondents, although some are willing to act. Lyon v. Rice, 41 Conn. 245; Littlefield v. Newell, 85 Me. 246, 27 Atl. 110. And see Eufaula v. Hickman, 57 Ala. 338; Knight v. Ferris, 6 Houst. (Del.) 283; State v. Jones, 23 N. C. 129. However, part of the members of a public board proceeding against the others need not name themselves as respondents. Cooperrider v. State, 46 Nebr. 84, 64 N. W. 372; Heintz v. Moulton, 7 S. D. 272, 64 N. W. 135.

Coordinate governing bodies.—In a proceeding to compel the aldermen of a city to meet the common council in joint convention for the purpose of electing subordinate officers as required by law, the council, being willing to act, need not be joined. Littlefield v. Newell, 85 Me. 246, 27 Atl. 110.

Whether majority of public board may be sued by minority see supra, IX, C, 1, a.

65. People v. Municipal Civil Service Commission, 30 Misc. (N. Y.) 519, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 833; State v. Richter, 37 Wis. 275.

66. Goodell v. Woodbury, 71 N. H. 378, 52 Atl. 855.

67. New Hampshire.—Goodell v. Woodbury, 71 N. H. 378, 52 Atl. 855, holding that in a proceeding to compel a chief of police to institute certain prosecutions as required by law, the county solicitor, whose duty it is to prosecute offenses, is not a necessary party, where he has not refused to act.

New York.—People v. Gravesend, 154 N. Y. 381, 48 N. E. 813, holding that in a proceeding to compel a town supervisor to issue bonds, the town treasurer and clerk, who must join in executing the bonds, are not necessary parties respondent, since the court would assume that they would sign the bonds if the supervisors should be ordered to issue them.

North Carolina.—Boner v. Adams, 65 N. C. 639.

Oregon.—See McLeod v. Scott, 21 Oreg. 94, 26 Pac. 1061, 29 Pac. 1.

South Dakota.—Smith v. Lawrence, 2 S. D. 185, 49 N. W. 7, holding that in a proceeding against a board of canvassers to compel a canvass, the county auditor as clerk of the board or as auditor is not a necessary party respondent, where he has not neglected or refused to perform any duty devolving on him.

Wisconsin.—State v. Richter, 37 Wis. 275. See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 293.

Refusal in advance.—Where two successive acts toward a common end are required to be done by two officers respectively, and mandamus is brought against the one required to act first, the other also may be joined, if he has pledged himself not to perform the act required of him. Guthrie v. Sparks, 131 Fed. 443, 65 C. C. A. 427. See, however, State v. Richter, 37 Wis. 275.

68. See infra, IX, C, 2, c.

cannot be joined as such. The writ should run singly to the person whose duty it is to perform the act required.⁷⁰

Who are unnecessary parties—Public corporations.—A county is not a necessary party to a proceeding by a scrip-holder to compel the county collector to receive the scrip in payment of taxes (Fry v. Reynolds, 33 Ark. 450); nor is a borough a necessary party to a proceeding to compel its officers to discharge their duty (Com. v. Westfield Borough Officers, 1 Pa. Dist. 495). A city is not a necessary party to a proceeding to compel the city auditor to draw his warrant for the salary roll of the police force (State v. Mason, 153 Mo. 23, 54 S. W. 524), or to a proceeding against the city controller to compel him to pay over taxes due the state (People v. Myers, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 479, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 365 [affirmed in 112 N. Y. 676, 20 N. E. 417]), or to a proceeding against the city treasurer to enforce payment of a warrant duly executed by the proper city officers (Savage v. Sternberg, 19 Wash. 679, 54 Pac. 611, 67 Am. St. Rep. 751); or to a proceeding to compel the clerk of the city council to amend his record so that it will show the appointment of petitioner by the council as policeman in the place of a third person (Farrell v. King, 41 Conn. 448). A school-board is not a necessary party in a proceeding to compel a teacher to admit a child to school, although the teacher excluded the child pursuant to a resolution of the board (Tape v. Hurley, 66 Cal. 473, 6 Pac. 129).

Public officers.—A county collector seeking to compel a city treasurer to pay over the proceeds of a county tax collected by him need not join any other city officer as respondent (Shields v. Grear, 55 N. J. L. 503, 27 Atl. 807); nor need any other county officer be joined as respondent in a proceeding by the state auditor against a county auditor to compel him to observe his duties (State v. Yates, 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 686, 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 298); and the fact that municipal officers have conspired to license gaming in violation of law does not require the joining of any one but the chief of police as respondent in a proceeding to compel the chief to prosecute gamblers (State v. Williams, 45 Oreg. 314, 77 Pac. 965, 67 L. R. A. 166). A proceeding to compel the making of estimates of work done by a street improvement contractor and the levying of assessments therefor may be brought against the city without joining the members of the city council or the city engineer (Wren v. Indianapolis, 96 Ind. 206); and although a tax-collector has discontinued the collection of a tax under instructions from the city council, the council need not, it seems, be joined as respondent in a proceeding to compel the collector to collect the tax (State v. O'Kelly, 48 La. Ann. 28, 18 So. 757). A tax-collector is not a necessary party respondent in a proceeding to compel an auditor to enter on an assessment roll the delinquent taxes of the preceding fiscal year (People v. Ashbury, 46 Cal. 523), or in a proceeding to compel a town treasurer to issue a warrant of distress against the collector on his neglect to perform his duties (Waldron v. Lee, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 323). A magistrate who has unlawfully committed a slave to jail is not a necessary party respondent to a proceeding against the sheriff to compel him to release the slave. Ney v. Richard, 15 La. Ann. 603. Where the chief of police of a city may institute prosecutions independently of the police commissioners, they are not necessary parties respondent in a proceeding to compel him to do so. Goodell v. Woodbury, 71 N. H. 378, 52 Atl. 855. A board of county supervisors is not a necessary party respondent, it seems, in a proceeding to compel the chairman and clerk to perform their duties (People v. Brinkerhoff, 68 N. Y. 259 [affirming 7 Hun 668]); and it is not necessary, in a proceeding to compel a county court to levy a tax to pay bonds or coupons owing by the county, that the county trustee should be made a party defendant (State v. Anderson County, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 249). The fact that the county clerk has paid money due the state to the county treasurer does not require that the treasurer should be made a party defendant to a proceeding by the state auditor against the clerk to compel payment of the money. State v. Stanton, 14 Utah 180, 46 Pac. 1109. Where it is the duty of the county commissioners to levy a tax for payment of bonds of a township in the county issued in payment of a subscription to railroad stock, the trustees of the township are not necessary parties respondent in a proceeding to compel the commissioners to levy the tax. Labette County Com'rs v. U. S., 112 U. S. 217, 5 S. Ct. 108, 28 L. ed. 698.

Private corporations.—The owner and lessor of a railroad is not a necessary party respondent to a proceeding to compel the lessee to restore a highway on which it has encroached in constructing a crossing (People v. Northern Cent. R. Co., 164 N. Y. 289, 58 N. E. 138. But see Mobile, etc., R. Co. v. Pike County Com'rs Ct., 97 Ala. 105, 11 So. 732); and it has been said in a proceeding against a corporation as licensee of a corporation owning a patent on a telephone to compel it to establish connections with a telegraph line, the licensor is not a necessary party respondent (State v. Bell Telephone Co., 23 Fed. 539).

Private officers.—In a proceeding to compel a corporation to cause its officers to make and file a certificate as to payments on capital stock as required of them by law, such officers need not be joined. Bay State Gas Co. v. State, 4 Pennew. (Del.) 497, 56 Atl. 1120. And see, generally, People v. Throop, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 183.

Authority and duty to act as prerequisite to issuance of writ see supra, II, F.

⁷⁰ Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Fitzhugh, 61 Ark. 339, 33 S. W. 208; Farrell v. King, 41 Conn. 448.

(ii) STYLE OF DESIGNATION. In proceedings to compel the performance of a duty imposed on a municipal corporation the earlier rule was to name the municipality as respondent by its corporate name,⁷¹ and this rule is still adhered to or recognized in some American jurisdictions;⁷² but the modern rule is to name as respondent or respondents that member or those members of the municipal government whose duty it is to perform the acts required of the municipality.⁷³ It has been held that where a duty is imposed on a public board as such, a proceeding to compel performance may run either against the board by its legal name⁷⁴

Who are improper parties—Public corporations.—A city cannot be joined as respondent in a proceeding to compel the clerk of the city council to amend his record of the council's proceedings with reference to petitioner's appointment to office. Farrell v. King, 41 Conn. 448.

Public officers.—The mayor and council cannot be joined in a proceeding to compel the chief of police to prosecute gamblers (State v. Williams, 45 Oreg. 314, 77 Pac. 965, 67 L. R. A. 166); and where the board of education of a city is an organization separate from the city, and money required for its use is to be drawn from the city treasury by the draft of the president of the board, countersigned by its clerk, the city auditor and controller are not proper parties to a proceeding to compel payment of a claim against the board (People v. Neilson, 5 Thomps. & C. (N. Y.) 367). In a proceeding by the state auditor against a county auditor to compel him to observe his duties, no other county officials are proper parties (State v. Yates, 21 Ohio Cir. Ct. 686, 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 298); nor can the superintendent of public instruction be joined as respondent in a proceeding to compel a teacher to admit a child to a public school (Tape v. Hurley, 66 Cal. 473, 6 Pac. 129). If one of several judges of a court has power to do the act sought to be enforced, the others cannot be joined as respondents. State v. Kings County Super. Ct., 4 Wash. 327, 30 Pac. 82. And see, generally, Boner v. Adams, 65 N. C. 639.

Private corporations, and agents and stockholders.—The corporation is not a proper party defendant in a proceeding to compel a corporate officer to perform his duties (Winter v. Baldwin, 89 Ala. 483, 7 So. 734. See, however, supra, note 61); nor are any of the other officers proper parties (People v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 11 Hun (N. Y.) 1. See, however, supra, note 61); and stockholders merely as such are not proper parties respondent in a proceeding to compel the corporation to perform a corporate act (State v. Home St. R. Co., 43 Nebr. 830, 62 N. W. 225).

Joinder of several persons in the alternative in a motion for the writ is permitted in some jurisdictions. Brophy v. Shindler, 126 Mich. 341, 85 N. W. 1114; Demorest v. Midland R. Co., 10 Ont. Pr. 73.

Sufficiency of designation.—Where the government of a village is vested in a council consisting of a president and councilmen, it is sufficient to direct the proceeding against "the council," rather than against "the president and councilmen." Glencoe v. People, 78 Ill. 382. And although a city is incorporated as "The Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of Pittsburgh," a proceeding may be maintained against the councils "of the City of Pittsburgh." Com. v. Pittsburg, 34 Pa. St. 496. To designate respondents as "the mayor, aldermen and common council" does not imply that the mayor and aldermen are no part of the council, and hence there is a sufficient designation of "the mayor, aldermen et al. de communi concilio." Pees v. Leeds, Str. 640.

or against its individual members as such.⁷⁵ In some jurisdictions it is not only proper but necessary that the proceeding should run against the board as such,⁷⁶ while in other jurisdictions the proceeding must run against the individual members of the board.⁷⁷ If officers are not constituted a board by law, they cannot be sued as such.⁷⁸ Where the duty sought to be enforced rests on a public officer, it is the better practice to proceed against him in his official title without naming him individually.⁷⁹ If a duty is imposed on a private corporation as such, it should be proceeded against in its corporate name;⁸⁰ but if the duty rests on its board of trustees the proceeding should run against the board.⁸¹

c. Persons Interested in Subject-Matter. Individuals or corporations who have a special legal interest in the subject-matter of a mandamus proceeding and whose rights will be collaterally determined by a judgment awarding the writ may properly be joined as parties respondent,⁸² and are generally required to be so joined.⁸³ Thus if a right, title, or interest in or to real property is directly Canada.—Dollery v. Whaley, 12 U. C. C. P. 552, holding that in a proceeding by plaintiff in an action to compel a judge to proceed with the trial thereof, defendant in the action is a necessary party respondent.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 293.

See, however, State v. Doyle, 40 Wis. 220, holding that where a statute requires the license of a foreign insurance company to be revoked without notice to the company, involved, all persons owning or claiming the same must as a rule be joined as respondents;⁸⁴ and if a right, title, or interest in or to a public office is directly involved it is generally necessary to join an adverse claimant thereof as a party.⁸⁵

on violation of its conditions, a mandamus to compel revocation will be granted without requiring the company to be made a party respondent

The state is a necessary party respondent in a proceeding to enforce a contract with the state. State v. New York Guaranty, etc., Co., 38 La. Ann. 337; Louisiana v. Jumel, 107 U. S. 711, 2 S. Ct. 128, 27 L. ed. 448.

The provision of the General Practice Act requiring all parties in interest to be joined does not apply to mandamus proceedings. State v. Fraker, 166 Mo. 130, 65 S. W. 720; State v. Burkhardt, 59 Mo. 75. And see infra, note 96. But see supra, note 82; infra, note 97.

Joinder by representation.—A person or corporation may be virtually joined as a party respondent by representation. Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325; People v. Myers, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 479, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 365 [affirmed in 112 N. Y. 676, 20 N. E. 417]. Thus the holders of municipal bonds have been held to be sufficiently joined by making the municipality a respondent. Austin v. Cahill, (Tex. 1905) 88 S. W. 542 [reversing in effect (Civ. App. 1905) 88 S. W. 536]. But a receiver of a corporation is not sufficiently joined by making the corporation a party respondent. Chicago City R. Co. v. People, 116 Ill. App. 633.

84. California.—Fogarty v. Sparks, 22 Cal. 142, holding that in a proceeding to compel a sheriff to remove an occupant from land under a writ of restitution, the occupant is a necessary party, unless he acquired his rights after lis pendens filed or under the parties to the suit.

Idaho.—Stretham v. Skinner, (1905) 82 Pac. 451, holding that in a proceeding against a water master to compel him to distribute waters in a certain way, all parties to be affected thereby should be joined.

Massachusetts.—Kent v. Essex County, 10 Pick. 521.

Michigan.—Campau v. Detroit, 86 Mich. 372, 49 N. W. 39, holding that in a proceeding to compel a board of public works to vacate a plat, the persons who made the plat and persons who have purchased lots according to the plat are necessary parties.

New York.—People v. Stewart, 77 N. Y. App. Div. 181, 78 N. Y. Suppl. 1054, holding that the owners of buildings which it will be necessary to destroy in the enforcement of municipal building regulations are necessary parties to a proceeding to compel the superintendent of buildings to enforce such regulations.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 293.

Mandamus to compel cancellation of public lease or tax-sale.—Where the cancellation of a lease of public lands is sought, the lessee is a necessary party respondent. State v. Land Com'rs, 7 Wyo. 478, 53 Pac. 292. Where, however, the purchaser at a tax-sale has not received a conveyance, he is not a necessary party to a proceeding by the owner to compel cancellation of the sale. People v. Brooklyn Registrar, 114 N. Y. 19, 20 N. E. 611.

Mandamus to compel execution of tax deed or sheriff's deed.—In a proceeding by a purchaser at a tax-sale to compel the issuance of a tax deed persons who claim an interest in the land are proper parties respondent (State v. Cranney, 30 Wash. 594, 71 Pac. 50); but it is not necessary to join them (Roach v. State, (Ala. 1905) 39 So. 685; Jones v. Welsing, 52 Iowa 220, 2 N. W. 1106). And in a proceeding by a bidder at execution sale to compel the sheriff to accept the bid and execute a deed, the execution debtor and creditor are not necessary parties. State v. Scarborough, 56 S. C. 48, 33 S. E. 779.

Mandamus to compel lease or conveyance of public lands.—In general.—In a proceeding to compel trustees of public lands to make a deed in pursuance of their agreement, one to whom they have conveyed the same lands notwithstanding the contract is a necessary party respondent. State v. Internal Imp. Fund, 20 Fla. 402. So one to whom public lands have been leased is a necessary party to a proceeding by another to compel a lease of the same lands to him. State v. Land Com'rs, 7 Wyo. 478, 53 Pac. 292.

Survey and issuance of patent.—In a proceeding to compel a survey of public lands and the issuance of a patent thereto, persons claiming an interest in the lands must be joined as respondents. Chappell v. Rogan, 94 Tex. 492, 62 S. W. 539; Texas Mexican R. Co. v. Jarvis, 80 Tex. 456, 15 S. W. 1089; Tabor v. General Land Office Com'rs, 29 Tex. 508; Cullem v. Latimer, 4 Tex. 329. And see Watkins v. Kirchain, 10 Tex. 375.

Mandamus to compel removal of obstructions from street.—Persons who have purchased land in the justifiable belief that it has not been dedicated as a street are necessary parties in a proceeding to compel the city to remove obstructions from the land as a street (People v. Bloomington, 38 Ill. App. 125); and persons who are occupying a street under contract with the city council are necessary parties to a like proceeding (Gibbs v. Ashford, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 629, 66 S. W. 858). See also People v. Blocki, 203 Ill. 363, 67 N. E. 809.

85. See cases cited infra, this note.

Mandamus to compel appointment.—In a proceeding to compel the appointment of petitioner to office, one who has already been appointed to the office must be joined. People v. Dobbs Ferry, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 276, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 578 (semble); People v. Scannell, 63 N. Y. App. Div. 243, 71 N. Y. Suppl. 383 (holding, however, that if the incumbent's appointment is only temporary, it is not necessary to make him a party);

However, an individual or corporation whose rights will not be affected by a judgment awarding the writ need not be joined as a respondent;⁸⁶ nor need one be joined whose interest is merely collateral, general, or incidental.⁸⁷

People v. Wendell, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 362, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 587. And see Powell v. People, 214 Ill. 475, 73 N. E. 795, 105 Am. St. Rep. 117.

Mandamus to compel correction of record so as to show appointment.—In a proceeding to compel the correction of a municipal record so that it will show the appointment of petitioner to office instead of showing the appointment of another, that other is not a necessary (Denver v. People, 17 Colo. App. 190, 68 Pac. 114), or even a proper (Farrell v. King, 41 Conn. 448), party respondent.

Mandamus to compel admission to office.—The person in possession of an office is a necessary party respondent to a proceeding to compel petitioner's admission to the office. Kelly v. Edwards, 69 Cal. 460, 11 Pac. 1. And see In re Hart, 159 N. Y. 278, 54 N. E. 44.

Mandamus to compel removal.—If it is sought to remove a person from office, he must be joined as respondent. Powell v. People, 214 Ill. 475, 73 N. E. 795, 105 Am. St. Rep. 117; People v. Wendell, 57 Hun (N. Y.) 362, 10 N. Y. Suppl. 587.

Mandamus to compel reinstatement.—In a proceeding to compel the reinstatement of one who has been removed or ousted from office, the present incumbent is a proper party respondent (People v. Ahearn, 111 N. Y. App. Div. 741, 98 N. Y. Suppl. 492), and, it has been held, a necessary party (Dew v. Judges Sweet Spring Dist. Ct., 3 Hen. & M. (Va.) 1, 3 Am. Dec. 639. Contra, People v. Ahearn, supra). In mandamus to compel reinstatement to an office abolished in bad faith, the appointee of the new office created in the place of the one abolished is not a necessary party; but in mandamus to compel the transfer of petitioner to the newly created position the appointee is a necessary party. Jones v. Willcox, 80 N. Y. App. Div. 167, 80 N. Y. Suppl. 420. Where a disbursing clerk was placed on a suspended list under Greater New York Charter, § 1543 (Laws (1901), p. 636, c. 466), and two vacancies occurred in the position which he was qualified to fill, in mandamus to compel his reinstatement it was not necessary for him to make the survivor of two men illegally transferred to the position of disbursing clerk a party to the proceeding, where he was entitled to claim the position made vacant by the death of the other of two such men, together with the salary incident to that position which had accrued since the latter's death and which the city had not paid to any person. People v. Grout, 45 Misc. (N. Y.) 47, 90 N. Y. Suppl. 861.

Mandamus to compel payment of salary.—In a proceeding by an officer to compel an auditor to issue a warrant for salary, one to whom a warrant for such salary has already been issued as a de facto officer but who is no longer in possession of the office is not a necessary party respondent. Williams v. Clayton, 6 Utah 86, 21 Pac. 398. See also McGuire v. Hurst, 64 S. W. 435, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 846.

Whether title to office may be tried in mandamus proceedings, see supra, VI, C, 7.

W. 590 (holding that where two school-districts as organized embrace common territory claimed by each, the one is not a necessary party respondent to a proceeding by the other to compel the county supervisors to levy a tax in its favor); Harwood v. Quinby, 44 Iowa 385; State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167; People v. Keating, 55 N. Y. App. Div. 528, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 418.

A. 465, holding that in a proceeding to compel the treasurer of one of several towns comprising a bridge district to pay orders drawn on him by the district commissioners, neither the district nor the other towns need be joined.

Indiana.—Ingerman v. State, 128 Ind. 225, 27 N. E. 499, holding that in a proceeding by a contractor against a ditch commissioner to compel the distribution of a fund collected by assessment for the construction of a ditch, the persons whose lands have been assessed need not be joined. Texas.—Austin v. Cahill, (1905) 88 S. W. 542 [reversing in effect (Civ. App. 1905) 88 S. W. 536], holding that the fact that points of law may be determined in the course of litigation that will make a precedent harmful to the interests of certain persons in some future litigation is not a sufficient reason for making such persons parties.

Washington.—American Bridge Co. v. Wheeler, 35 Wash. 40, 76 Pac. 534, holding that county commissioners are not necessary parties to a proceeding against the county auditor to compel him to issue a warrant on a claim allowed by the commissioners against the county.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 293. If a person's interest has been barred by judgment in prior litigation, he is not a necessary party. General Land Office Com'rs

3. NEW PARTIES—a. In General. Persons who, by reason of being interested in the subject-matter of the proceeding, might or should have been joined as parties respondent⁸⁸ may be brought in as such pendente lite;⁸⁹ and it has been held that in a proper case an answer to an order to show cause may be treated as a petition against third persons, and an order to show cause be issued against them as respondents.⁹⁰ In case respondent's term of office expires pendente lite his successor must be brought in as a party respondent if judgment is desired against him;⁹¹ but where, pending a proceeding against a public body, a new and different body is constituted in its place, the new body cannot be substituted as respondent.⁹²

b. Intervention.⁹³ An individual or a corporation on whom no duty rests to perform the act sought to be enforced in mandamus proceedings,⁹⁴ and who has no substantial and peculiar interest in the subject-matter of the litigation,⁹⁵ cannot intervene therein as a party; and even where such an interest exists there can be no intervention at common law.⁹⁶ In some states, however, this rule has been abrogated either directly or indirectly by statute, so that any person or corporation who by reason of interest might have been joined as a necessary or proper party respondent in mandamus proceedings may intervene therein.⁹⁷

4. OBJECTIONS — a. In General.⁹⁸ In those jurisdictions where a proceeding to enforce a private right should be brought in the name of the individual in whom the right is vested,⁹⁹ the unauthorized use of the name of the state is not ground for dismissing the application, but the state's name will be stricken out on motion.¹ In a proceeding instituted on relation of a railroad company against a town to compel it to issue its bonds to the company, it is no concern of the town for whose use the proceeding is prosecuted.² Where the omission of a necessary party respondent appears on the face of the petition no plea is necessary to bring the matter before the court; but the objection may be reached by demurrer or motion in arrest;³ but if an interested person appears and defends, it is immaterial that he was not formally joined as a party respondent.⁴ Where the removal of a municipal officer has been declared illegal in a proceeding between the officer and the city council, the court cannot, in a subsequent proceeding by the officer to compel them to restore him to office, object that one who was appointed by them to the office on relator's removal is not made a party respondent;⁵ and in a proceeding to compel a justice of the peace to issue an execution on a judgment rendered by him, the refusal of the court to make the judgment-defendant a party is not available to respondent as error.⁶ A party who himself brings in another person as respondent cannot object that such person should not have been made a party.⁷ Even where the individual members of a limited right to intervene is expressly authorized in certain cases).

The General Practice Act is construed to authorize intervention in mandamus proceedings in some states. State v. Williams, 63 Conn. 131, 35 Atl. 24, 421, 48 L. R. A. 465; Towle v. State, 110 Ind. 120, 10 N. E. 941 (semble); State v. Pillsbury, 31 La. Ann. 1; Neligh First Nat. Bank v. Lancaster, 54 Nebr. 467, 74 N. W. 858; State v. Mack, 26 Nev. 430, 69 Pac. 862. And see State v. Matley, 17 Nebr. 564, 24 N. W. 200; State v. Patterson, 11 Nebr. 266, 9 N. W. 82; and supra, note 82. See, however, supra, notes 83, 96.

If a person's interest will not be affected by a judgment awarding the writ, he cannot intervene. Harwood v. Quinby, 44 Iowa 385; State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167; People v. Keating, 55 N. Y. App. Div. 528, 67 N. Y. Suppl. 418. And see supra, IX, C, 2, c.

Intervention after award of peremptory writ.—There can be no intervention after judgment awarding a peremptory writ, especially where the act sought to be enforced has been performed. Owens v. Colgan, 97 Cal. 454, 32 Pac. 519.

Persons already represented in proceeding.—One who is already a virtual party by representation cannot intervene. Calaveras County v. Brockway, 30 Cal. 325; People v. Myers, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 479, 3 N. Y. Suppl. 365 [affirmed in 112 N. Y. 676, 20 N. E. 1417]. And see supra, IX, C, 2, c.

Purpose of intervention.—Even where the general right to intervene in mandamus proceedings is recognized, yet intervention will not be permitted for all purposes. Thus in a proceeding to compel the auditor to draw his warrant on the state treasury, the court will not permit a third person to come in and litigate his claim with petitioner on the ground that he has a lien on the debt which the state owes petitioner (Hewitt v. Craig, 86 Ky. 23, 5 S. W. 280, 9 Ky. L. Rep. 232); and in a proceeding by a town to compel the payment of moneys owing it by a county, a town creditor who claims the fund will not be allowed to intervene (In re Porter Tp. Road, 1 Walk. (Pa.) 10). A third person cannot intervene and excuse, by reason of something peculiar to himself, the omission of an official duty on the part of a public officer (Harwood v. Quinby, 44 Iowa 385); and a person who claims an interest in the subject-matter cannot intervene as plaintiff and ask affirmative relief (Winstanley v. People, 92 Ill. 402, holding that the statute allowing intervention in mandamus proceedings authorizes intervention only as a party respondent). And where judgment has been recovered in an action on municipal bonds in favor of the holders, taxpayers are not entitled to be made parties to a subsequent suit to enforce the judgment by mandamus for the purpose of having the judgment opened and relitigating the validity of the bonds. Kinney v. Eastern Trust, etc., Co., 123 Fed. 297, 59 C. C. A. 586.

public body should not be named as respondents in a proceeding against it for mandamus,⁸ the naming of the individual members is not a fatal error.⁹

b. Waiver. The omission, as a party respondent, of one who has a legal interest in the right or duty sought to be enforced and whose rights will be collaterally determined by the judgment if rendered as prayed for cannot be waived by the parties so as to authorize the court to determine the rights of the interested person in his absence;¹⁰ but a party respondent may waive the right to object to a non-joinder so far as he himself is concerned.¹¹ If a defect of parties appears on the face of the petition respondent waives the objection by failure to demur.¹² Misjoinder of relators is waived by answering;¹³ but one who is substituted as a party in place of respondent does not waive the error by answering pursuant to order of court.¹⁴ Irregularity in instituting the proceeding in the name of an individual instead of in the name of the state is waived where respondent files an answer¹⁵ or fails to object in the lower court;¹⁶ and irregularity in instituting a proceeding on relation of a county instead of the county commissioners is likewise waived.¹⁷ By filing an answer or return respondents waive any irregularity in proceeding against them instead of the body of which they are the members.¹⁸

D. Abatement and Revival¹⁹ — 1. DEATH OF RELATOR. Generally mandamus proceedings are to be classed with those personal actions which die with the person;²⁰ but where a writ is prosecuted by a public officer for the public benefit, his death will not affect the proceeding.²¹

4. EXPIRATION OF TERM OF OFFICE OF DEFENDANT — a. In General — (i) No UNIFORM RULE. It cannot be denied that there is a sharp conflict of authority on this question.²⁶ While one line of cases flatly asserts that, if pending the proceedings the term of defendant officer terminates, the proceedings abate,²⁷ another line of cases with equal emphasis denies that under such circumstances the proceedings abate.²⁸ Whichever view may be taken, it will be supported by decisions of respectable courts and sustained by many well-reasoned cases.²⁹ The real question in dispute seems to be whether the proceedings are against the individual or against the office,³⁰ and in answer to this question the rule supported by the great weight of authority³¹ may be laid down as follows: If against the individual the proceedings will abate;³² otherwise they will not abate.³³

(ii) RULE THAT PROCEEDINGS ABATE. The federal courts,³⁴ as well as some of the state courts,³⁵ proceeding upon the theory that the proceedings are

34. In the federal courts the rule that a petition for a writ of mandamus to a public officer of the United States abates by his resignation of his office has been laid down by a series of uniform decisions, and has for years been considered so well settled that in some of the cases no opinion has been filed and no official reports published. Seymour v. Nelson, 11 App. Cas. (D. C.) 58; U. S. v. Butterworth, 169 U. S. 600, 18 S. Ct. 441, 42 L. ed. 873; Smith v. Reynolds, 166 U. S. 717, 17 S. Ct. 998, 41 L. ed. 1186; *Warner Valley Stock Co. v. This rule applies as well after judgment and pending appeal therefrom as before. Seymour v. Nelson, 11 App. Cas. (D. C.) 58; Warner Valley Stock Co. v. Smith, 165 U. S. 28, 17 S. Ct. 225, 41 L. ed. 621.

Judge Strong's reason for this rule.—In U. S. v. Boutwell, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 607, 21 L. ed. 721 [quoted in Warner Valley Stock Co. v. Smith, 165 U. S. 28, 32, 17 S. Ct. 225, 41 L. ed. 621], it is said: "The office of a writ of mandamus is to compel the performance of a duty resting upon the person to whom the writ is sent. . . . If he be an officer, and the duty be an official one, still the writ is aimed exclusively against him as a person, and he only can be punished for disobedience. The writ does not reach the office. It cannot be directed to it. It is, therefore, in substance a personal action, and it rests upon the averred and assumed fact that the defendant has neglected or refused to perform a personal duty, to the performance of which by him the relator has a clear right. . . . It necessarily follows from this, that on the death or retirement from office of the original defendant, the writ must abate in the absence of any statutory provision to the contrary."

Board of State Canvassers*, 32 Mont. 13, 15, 79 Pac. 402 [following U. S. v. Boutwell, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 21 L. ed. 721; Cox v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298, 19 L. ed. 579] (where it is said: "We believe that reason and the weight of authority are in support of the position we take"); State v. Guthrie, 17 Nebr. 113, 22 N. W. 77 [criticizing State v. Warner, 55 Wis. 271, 9 N. W. 795, 13 N. W. 255; State v. Gates, 22 Wis. 210, and following U. S. v. Boutwell, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 21 L. ed. 721; Cox v. U. S., 9 Wall. (U. S.) 298, 19 L. ed. 579]; Rains v. Simpson, 50 Tex. 495, 32 Am. Rep. 609. But see State v. Cole, 25 Nebr. 342, 41 N. W. 245.

Where the delinquency charged is personal the mandamus proceedings abate upon the death, resignation, or termination of office of the officer charged unless otherwise pro-directed not against the government, municipality, or corporation of which defendant is an officer, but against the officer himself, whose personal default warrants the impetration of the writ,³⁶ have decided that the proceedings abate upon the expiration of defendant's term of office³⁷ whether by his own resignation³⁸ or otherwise.³⁹

(III) RULE THAT PROCEEDINGS DO NOT ABATE. On the other hand, proceeding upon the theory that the writ operates on the office rather than on the individual who occupies the office,⁴⁰ and that the proceedings are instituted to enforce the writ against the corporation, municipality, or government through its officer or agent,⁴¹ the great majority of cases lay down the rule that the proceedings do not abate by the resignation, removal, or expiration of the term of defendant officer, and may be enforced against his successor or successors in office.⁴²

Continuing duty theory.—These decisions, some of them in express terms, others by necessary implication, justify this doctrine upon the ground that the proceedings are against the office to compel the performance of a continuing duty, a duty devolving upon the office irrespective of the incumbent; that the responsibility results from the office and not from any individual responsibility of

b. Where Defendant Is a Board or Body. Where defendant is a court or a board consisting of more than one officer or person, the courts have been more uniform in applying the rule that no abatement takes place, where pending the mandamus proceedings there is a change in the personnel of the board, council, commission, or the like,⁴³ provided of course the board has not performed all of its functions and actually gone out of existence.⁴⁴ And the reason for this is plain; for, while the constituent members of the court or board may not be the same, the representative body remains identical;⁴⁵ the personnel of the judges or officers may change, but the court or board retains its identity and is in a sense the same.⁴⁶

In such cases, while the judges, members, or officers may change, the court or board retains its identity, and is, in a sense, the same. . . . This distinction has been often overlooked or denied by courts of the greatest respectability." And in Warner Valley Stock Co. v. Smith, supra, it is said: "The case of a public officer of the United States differs in this respect from that of a municipal board, which is a continuing corporation (although its individual members may be changed) and

c. Revival of Continuance — (i) UNDER RULE THAT PROCEEDINGS ABATE. Mandamus being a legal and not an equitable proceeding,⁴⁷ it would seem that the effect of an abatement as to defendant would be to completely terminate the proceeding, and that it could not be revived or continued against the successor in office.⁴⁸ However, some cases,⁴⁹ it seems, impliedly applying the rule as to abatement in equity merely place the proceeding in a state of suspension from which it may be revived⁵⁰ in the proper manner.⁵¹

(ii) UNDER RULE THAT PROCEEDINGS DO NOT ABATE. In case the proceeding is a proper one to be continued by or against an official successor,⁵² in the absence of statutory provision to the contrary,⁵³ the procedure may follow that employed for the revival and continuance of civil actions generally,⁵⁴ it being the common practice to enter a suggestion of the change of interest on the record, and a rule or order bringing in the new party or parties.⁵⁵ On the other hand some of the cases hold that no revival is necessary against the successor of the officer against whom the proceedings were instituted.⁵⁶ to which in its corporate capacity a writ of mandamus may be directed.”

49. See Ex p. Tinkum, 54 Cal. 201 (holding that the successor in office must be first brought in as a party to the proceedings); State v. Board of State Canvassers, 32 Mont. 13, 79 Pac. 402 (where the writ was dismissed when the successors in office were given no opportunity to perform and no demand was made upon them). Compare New Mexico v. Baker, 196 U. S. 432, 25 S. Ct. 375, 49 L. ed. 540, where in mandamus proceedings against a judge of a territorial court, who after the appeal ceased to be a judge and whose successor consented that the action be revived against him, the court, under the act of congress of Feb. 8, 1899, substituted the name of the successor in the place of the original appellee.

51. Manner of revival generally see ABATEMENT AND REVIVAL, 1 Cyc. 10. In Ex p. Tinkum, 54 Cal. 201, it was said that the change in the incumbent should have been suggested on the records by proper orders, and the action continued against the successor.

Lantry*, 88 N. Y. App. Div. 583, 85 N. Y. Suppl. 193 [reversing 40 Misc. 428, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 261] (holding that the relator is not entitled under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 723, 755, 756, 1930, or 1997, to have the respondent's successor substituted in the respondent's place; that his remedy is to make a demand upon the successor and if such successor refuses to perform, then to institute a mandamus proceeding against him). In People v. Lantry, 40 Misc. (N. Y.) 428, 82 N. Y. Suppl. 261, McCall, J., at special term, said that the official successor need not be substituted as defendant, but that it is the better practice that he be so substituted. See also People v. Welde, 61 N. Y. App. Div. 580, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 869.

5. RECEIVERSHIP. The fact that defendant goes into the hands of a receiver during the pendency of the proceedings is not a ground for abating the same.⁵⁷

6. REPEAL OF STATUTE. The repeal of the statute upon which the right or duty in mandamus depends will put an end to the proceedings.⁵⁸

E. Pleading⁵⁹ — 1. IN GENERAL. As appears in other connections, there are in many jurisdictions rules peculiarly applicable to mandamus proceedings with reference to the title of the proceedings, the form of the application, and the name by which it is known, the form and names of the subsequent pleadings, and various other matters. These rules exist either at common law or by force of statute, and they vary in the different states.⁶⁰ Subject to this statement it may be said that the common-law rules of pleading in civil actions as modified by the codes or otherwise are applicable in mandamus proceedings.⁶¹ As in ordinary actions at law pleadings are essential and cannot be waived.⁶²

2. TITLE OF PROCEEDINGS. The application for a writ of mandamus should be addressed to the court before which it is laid;⁶³ but, in the absence of statutes modifying the common-law practice,⁶⁴ neither the application,⁶⁵ nor the affidavit upon which it is founded,⁶⁶ nor the answer to the application⁶⁷ should be entitled as in any cause, since in contemplation of law no cause is pending until the writ issues, the proceeding being ex parte up to that time.⁶⁸ If the application is granted, the writ issues in the name of the state,⁶⁹ and it is directed to the person or corporation upon whom the duty of acting rests;⁷⁰ and accordingly the subsequent pleadings and papers should be entitled as in a cause. In most jurisdictions the subsequent proceedings are entitled in the name of the state against the respondent in the writ, and the person or officer instituting the proceeding is commonly named as relator.⁷¹

3. APPLICATION — a. In General. The action of the court in mandamus proceedings is invoked by some form of application,⁷² based on papers presenting the facts of the case.⁷³ Mandamus cannot be demanded by way of answer in an ordinary action at law,⁷⁴ but it has been held that in mandamus proceedings against one person he may in his answer demand that the writ issue against another.⁷⁵ The practice in regard to what constitutes the first pleading in the case is not uniform. At common law the alternative writ is not only a process,⁷⁶ but also a pleading, and it stands in place of the declaration in an ordinary action at law.⁷⁷ In many states, however, the application for mandamus is instituted by

73. See cases cited infra, this note.

Necessity of petition.—In Delaware the attorney-general need not file a petition, but may ex officio suggest the case of a violation of a public duty, and ask mandamus. State v. Wilmington Bridge Co., 3 Harr. (Del.) 312. In Alabama when an application is made to the supreme court for a writ of mandamus to an inferior court of record because of matters necessarily appearing on its records, a petition stating the facts on which the relief is asked, while more formal, is not necessary. Ex p. Tower Mfg. Co., 103 Ala. 415, 15 So. 836. In Illinois, however, there must be a petition filed in such a case (People v. Loomis, 94 Ill. 587); and a motion for leave to file a petition for mandamus in the supreme court must be accompanied by a copy of the petition proposed to be filed (People v. Seibert, 167 Ill. 639, 48 N. E. 687). In Missouri, where the statute authorizes mandamus to compel the levy of a tax to pay a judgment against a municipality after execution returned nulla bona, no formal petition is necessary; but it is sufficient to exhibit the judgment, execution, and return. State v. Slavens, 75 Mo. 508; State v. Norvell, 80 Mo. App. 180.

The facts are presented by information in some states. Chance v. Temple, 1 Iowa 179.

Failure to file new petition on substitution of respondents.—A petition having been amended by substituting respondents' successors in place of respondents, and a notice to the new parties having been issued as in a new case instituted by a new petition, the failure to file a new petition, while ground for dismissing the new case, did not relieve respondents' from answering in the pending cause, where they appeared therein. Palmer v. Jones, 49 Iowa 405.

Right to supply lost petition.—Under the Tennessee code a lost petition cannot be supplied by filing another the same in substance where the original had not been filed so as to become part of the record. Baker v. McMinnville, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 117.

United States.—U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,599, 2 Dill. 527.

However, the parties may stipulate that the petition shall be taken for the alternative writ instead of requiring an order for issue of an alternative writ. People v. Rio Grande County, 7 Colo. App. 229, 42 Pac. 1032. And if by consent or waiver no alternative writ issues, the petition or complaint may be taken as the first pleading. Welch v. State, 164 Ind. 104, 72 N. E. 1043; Wren v. Indianapolis, 96 Ind. 206; Pfister v. State, 82 Ind. 382. See also Kell v. Rudy, 1 Pa. Super. Ct. 507.

Ohio.—State v. Dalton, 1 Ohio Cir. Ct. 119, 1 Ohio Cir. Dec. 71. The rule was formerly otherwise. See supra, note 77.

Tennessee.—State v. Marks, 6 Lea 12.

Vermont.—Clement v. Graham, 78 Vt. 290, 63 Atl. 146.

If no alternative writ issues the petition or complaint may be taken as the first pleading. See supra, note 77.

Stipulation that petition be taken for alternative writ see supra, note 77.

79. California.—McCrary v. Beaudry, 67 Cal. 120, 7 Pac. 264, affidavit treated as complaint.

Indiana.—Welch v. State, 164 Ind. 104, 72 N. E. 1043; Wren v. Indianapolis, 96 Ind. 206; Pfister v. State, 82 Ind. 382, all holding that the affidavit may be treated as the complaint where no alternative writ issues.

Nebraska.—Long v. State, 17 Nebr. 60, 22 N. W. 120, affidavit treated as relation.

Nevada.—State v. Gracey, 11 Nev. 223; State v. McCullough, 3 Nev. 202, both holding that the affidavit is regarded as the complaint.

Wisconsin.—Schend v. St. George's German Aid Soc., 49 Wis. 237, 5 N. W. 355, affidavit treated as petition or relation.

80. State v. Jennings, 56 Wis. 113, 14 N. W. 28.

and to be construed by the rules of pleading applicable in ordinary actions at law.⁸²

b. Form and Character of Allegations—(i) IN GENERAL. Generally speaking, the allegations in mandamus proceedings are to be made as in an ordinary action at law.⁸³

(ii) ALLEGATIONS AS DISTINGUISHED FROM RECITALS. In an application for mandamus the facts must appear by direct and positive allegation, a mere recital of the facts being insufficient;⁸⁴ but in the alternative writ the facts are properly stated by way of recital.⁸⁵

(iii) ALLEGATIONS OF FACTS AS DISTINGUISHED FROM CONCLUSIONS AND EVIDENCE. The first pleading in mandamus proceedings, whatever its name or form, should positively state the facts on which petitioner bases his right to relief, and state them in issuable form.⁸⁶ Accordingly it has been held bad pleading on the one hand to allege a mere conclusion of law as distinguished from the facts giving rise to such conclusion,⁸⁷ and on the other hand it is considered improper

82. Connecticut.—Brainard v. Staub, 61 Conn. 570, 24 Atl. 1040.

Illinois.—Springfield, etc., R. Co. v. Wayne County Clerk, 74 Ill. 27; People v. Glann, 70 Ill. 232; People v. Solomon, 46 Ill. 333; Hall v. Mann, 96 Ill. App. 659.

New Jersey.—State v. Sheridan, 43 N. J. L. 82.

New York.—People v. Order of American Star, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 66.

West Virginia.—Doolittle v. Cabell County Ct., 28 W. Va. 158; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 296.

Clerical errors will be disregarded where the intent is clear. People v. Oneida County, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 444, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 712.

In those jurisdictions where the petition and rule constitute no part of the pleadings, the strict rules of pleading are not applied to them, it being in all cases sufficient for the petition to set forth a prima facie case. Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595.

The first pleading is strictly construed against the pleader. Leatherwood v. Hill, (Ariz. 1906) 85 Pac. 405; People v. Swigert, 107 Ill. 494. See, however, Townsend v. Fulton Irr. Ditch Co., 17 Colo. 142, 29 Pac. 453, holding that since proceedings to compel the delivery of water for irrigation are necessarily somewhat summary in their nature, and to be effective the relief must be immediate, the trial courts should be liberal in matters of pleading. Aider of pleading by inference and presumption see infra, IX, E, 3, d. (vi).

83. People v. Order of American Star, 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 66.

84. Greenfield v. State, 113 Ind. 597, 15 N. E. 241. See, however, Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

87. California.—San Luis Obispo County v. Gage, 139 Cal. 393, 73 Pac. 174, allegation that petitioner's claim was rejected "without right and against the facts."

Colorado.—Kephart v. People, 28 Colo. 73, 62 Pac. 946, allegation that there is money in the treasury applicable to the payment of petitioner's warrant, and that it is the duty of the treasurer to pay it.

Connecticut.—Woodruff v. New York, etc., R. Co., 59 Conn. 63, 20 Atl. 17.

Florida.—State v. Finley, 30 Fla. 302, 11 So. 500, allegation that the record, evidence, and proceedings in a proceeding to disbar relator are wholly insufficient to authorize his disbarment, and that the judgment of disbarment is totally void.

Illinois.—Stott v. Chicago, 205 Ill. 281, 68 N. E. 736 [affirming 98 Ill. App. 105] (allegation that petitioner "was duly appointed to the office" claimed by him, the office not being one created by statute of which the court is bound to take judicial notice); People v. Sellars, 179 Ill. 170, 53 N. E. 545 (allegation that property was liable to taxation); People v. Crotty, 93 Ill. 180 (allegation that a good bond was tendered as required by law).

Indiana.—Weir v. State, 161 Ind. 435, 68 N. E. 1023, allegation that an order of transfer "entitled relatrix to attend the schools of the school town" to which she was transferred.

Iowa.—Chance v. Temple, 1 Iowa 179.

Missouri.—State v. Hudson, 13 Mo. App. 61, general averment of compliance with the requirements of a statute.

Nebraska.—Woodward v. State, 58 Nebr. 598, 79 N. W. 164; State v. Thorne, 9 Nebr. 458, 4 N. W. 63 (allegation that bonds were issued "for works of internal improvement"); State v. Thatch, 5 Nebr. 94 (allegation that an election was carried by fraudulent means).

New York.—People v. Democratic Gen. Committee, 52 N. Y. App. Div. 170, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 57 [reversing 31 Misc. 350, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 418] (allegation of a member expelled from a general committee of a political party that the expulsion was illegal and void, and that the committee was without power or to allege evidentiary facts as distinguished from the ultimate fact which they tend to prove.⁸⁸

(iv) ALLEGATIONS ON INFORMATION AND BELIEF. As a rule the allegations of the petition or other application must be positive, and be positively sworn to. Allegations on information and belief, or positive allegations verified on information and belief, are ordinarily insufficient to justify the granting of the writ.⁸⁹

(v) *CERTAINTY.*⁹⁰ An applicant for mandamus must plead his facts with the same certainty, neither more nor less, than is required in ordinary actions at law.⁹¹ The facts must be set forth specifically and distinctly, and in such form that issue may be taken thereon.⁹² The duty to perform the act sought to be enforced, authority to expel him or to deprive him of his office); People v. German United Evangelical St. Stephen's Church, 3 Lans. 434 [affirmed in 53 N. Y. 103 (reversing 6 Lans. 172)] (general allegation of a right to vote for trustees of a religious corporation); People v. Westchester County, 15 Barb. 607 (allegation that injustice has been done relators in assessing their property, or that they have been unjustly assessed, and that defendant supervisors have refused to correct the erroneous assessments); People v. Parmelee, 22 Misc. 380, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 451 (holding that an alternative writ to compel a recount of rejected votes should state facts warranting the conclusion, and not merely state the legal conclusion, that the ballots should have been counted); People v. Columbia Club, 20 N. Y. Civ. Proc. 319 (allegation that relator had been expelled from defendant society unjustly and in violation of the law and of the constitution and by-laws of the society, and "that although entitled to be reinstated as a member of the society," it had "unjustly refused to reinstate" him as such member).

Oregon.—State v. Williams, 45 Ore. 314, 77 Pac. 965, 67 L. R. A. 166 (allegation of neglect to issue bench warrant "as required by law"); Shively v. Pennoyer, 27 Ore. 33, 39 Pac. 396 (allegation that petitioner had made a written application for public lands "in the manner prescribed by law").

Texas.—Cochran v. Patillo, 16 Tex. Civ. App. 458, 41 S. W. 537 (allegation of wrongful suspension and dismissal of pupil); Houston v. Smith, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 120, 34 S. W. 194. And see Wilson v. Bristley, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 200, 35 S. W. 837.

New York.—People v. Grout, 107 N. Y. App. Div. 228, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 1101 (so holding, although the allegations are not denied); People v. Cruger, 12 N. Y. App. Div. 536, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 398; People v. Green, 1 Hun 1, 3 Thomps. & C. 90; People v. Oneida County, 25 Misc. 444, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 712; People v. Norton, 12 Abb. Pr. N. S. 47.

Oklahoma.—Collet v. Allison, 1 Okla. 42, 25 Pac. 516, so holding as to a verification by petitioner's attorney.

Vermont.—Clement v. Graham, 78 Vt. 290, 63 Atl. 146.

In exceptional cases, it seems, the facts may be stated and verified on information and belief (Kephart v. People, 28 Colo. 73, 62 Pac. 946; State v. Lancaster County, 49 Nebr. 51, 68 N. W. 336), where the grounds or source of information and belief are stated (People v. Grout, 107 N. Y. App. Div. 228, 94 N. Y. Suppl. 1101; People v. Cruger, 12 N. Y. App. Div. 536, 42 N. Y. Suppl. 398; People v. Green, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 1, 3 Thomps. & C. 90; People v. Oneida County, 25 Misc. (N. Y.) 444, 55 N. Y. Suppl. 712).

It has been held, however, that greater certainty is required in a petition for mandamus than in ordinary cases. Arberry v. Beavers, 6 Tex. 457, 55 Am. Dec. 791; White v. Meyers, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 47 S. W. 476.

and the right to demand performance thereof, must distinctly appear.⁹³ Accordingly the allegations must be sufficiently definite to inform respondent of what is required of him, and set forth facts sufficient to enable him to proceed and to enable the court to command performance of specific acts.⁹⁴ Consequently if the duty relates to particular property, real or personal, it may be necessary to describe it.⁹⁵ However, certainty to a common intent is all that is required; and

Texas.—Houston Tap, etc., R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317; Cullem v. Latimer, 4 Tex. 329.

93. See infra, IX, E, 3, d, (II).

Certainty as to person bound.—Where two adjoining townships disputed as to which one should rebuild a bridge on the dividing highway, a petition in mandamus against the officers of each township, praying that either one or the other of the townships, or both, be compelled to build the bridge, was not defective as too indefinite. Brophy v. Schindler, 126 Mich. 341, 85 N. W. 1114.

Grounds of refusal as excusing technical exactness.—An allegation that respondent refused to perform the duty on certain grounds has been held to excuse technical exactness in stating why, on other grounds, relator is entitled to the relief sought. King v. State, 50 Nebr. 66, 69 N. W. 307. See, however, People v. State Land Office, 26 Mich. 146.

The statute imposing the duty must be set forth or referred to according to some cases. Smith v. Com., 41 Pa. St. 335. But this is generally unnecessary, since the courts take judicial notice of statutes. See infra, IX, E, 3, d, (VII). And where two statutes are identical so far as the rights and duties of the parties in the particular case are concerned, the petition need not specify upon which one it is based. People v. San Diego, 85 Cal. 369, 24 Pac. 727.

Description of relator.—A complaint in a mandamus proceeding on the relation of the township trustee is not defective because the trustee is described therein as the trustee of the civil township, although the word "civil" might have been omitted without detriment to the complaint. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 510, 65 N. E. 508.

95. State v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 59 Ala. 321 (holding that in a proceeding to compel a carrier to accept and transport cotton tendered by relator, the petition must state the number of bales tendered, so that the court, if it awards the writ, can command the carrier to do a specific thing); People v. Sellars, 179 Ill. 170, 53 N. E. 545 (holding that a petition to compel the county clerk to extend taxes, arrearages, and interest due on personal property omitted by the assessor in previous years should state the amount of such property, its nature and character, and by whom owned); People v. Tracy, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 617 (holding that a writ to remove an intruder from Indian lands must mention the tract). See, however, State v. Jeffersonville First Nat. Bank, 89 Ind. 302 (holding that "ten shares of the capital stock of said bank, then the property of" a person named, in a writ of mandate against a bank and its officers to compel them to permit a transfer of stock, is a sufficient description of the stock); State v. Leon, 66 Wis. 199, 28 N. W. 140.

Description of highway.—A petition or writ to compel the repair of a highway must describe that portion of it which is to be repaired. Com. v. Allegheny Valley R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 565. See, however, Jennings v. Scott, 87 Ill. App. 459; State v. Leon, 66 Wis. 199, 28 N. W. 140, in both of which cases the description was held to be sufficient.

Description of pecuniary claim.—A petition to compel a public officer to allow or to pay a claim held by relator, or to issue a warrant therefor, must describe the claim in such terms as to identify it and distinguish it from all other claims of a similar kind. State v. Cardozo, 5 S. C. 297. And see State v. Dubuque Dist. Tp., 11 Iowa 155. Hence the amount of the claim must be specified. San Luis Obispo County v. Gage, 139 Cal. 398, 73 Pac. 174; State v. Dubuque Dist. Tp., supra; McCoy v. Justices Harnett County, if the facts are so stated that the ordinary mind, disregarding technicality of pleading, may easily comprehend them, it is sufficient.⁹⁶ If petitioner's pleading is uncertain, the court may on motion require it to be made more certain.⁹⁷

West Virginia.—Doolittle v. Cabell County Ct., 28 W. Va. 158; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595, both holding that the petition should be supported by affidavit if filed by a private individual.

In England an affidavit was necessary in cases where respondent was guilty of a neglect of duty (Curser v. Smith, 1 Barn. 59; Reg. v. Cory, 3 Salk. 230), but not in a matter of right, as where relator demanded restoration to office (Reg. v. Cory, supra). See Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393.

Who may make affidavit.—The affidavit may be made by petitioner or any person having knowledge of the facts. Cannon v. Janvier, 3 Houst. (Del.) 27. And see Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393.

Application and affidavit as separate papers.—According to the English practice the application and the supporting affidavit were separate papers. People v. Chicago, 25 Ill. 483. But several American courts have held that this is not a necessary requirement. Golden Canal Co. v. Bright, 8 Colo. 144, 6 Pac. 142 (holding that a verified petition is equivalent to the statutory "petition and affidavit"); People v. Chicago, supra; State v. Johnson County, 10 Iowa 157, 74 Am. Dec. 381. And see State v. Harrington, (Nebr. 1907) 110 N. W. 1016.

Time of presenting affidavits.—The affidavits must be presented at the time of applying for the writ. People v. Shea, 73 N. Y. App. Div. 237, 76 N. Y. Suppl. 682; People v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 47 Hun (N. Y.) 543.

Maine.—Woodman v. Somerset County Com'rs, 24 Me. 151.

Mississippi.—Hardee v. Gibbs, 50 Miss. 802; Swan v. Gray, 44 Miss. 393, holding that the petition must be verified by petitioner where it is not supported by the affidavits of others.

Nebraska.—State v. Harrington, (1907) 110 N. W. 1016, holding that the petition must be verified where no affidavits are filed. Texas.—Shirley v. Conner, 98 Tex. 63, 80 S. W. 984, 81 S. W. 284; Brown v. Ruse, 69 Tex. 589, 7 S. W. 489; Bracken v. Wells, 3 Tex. 88, all holding that the petition should be verified, although the statute does not require it.

West Virginia.—See Mason County v. Minturn, 4 W. Va. 300.

United States.—Poultney v. La Fayette, 12 Pet. 472, 9 L. ed. 1161; Postmaster-Gen. v. Trigg, 11 Pet. 173, 9 L. ed. 676.

In Illinois a verification was formerly necessary (People v. Chicago, 25 Ill. 483), but it is doubtful whether this is the present rule (Hall v. Mann, 96 Ill. App. 659; Rowe v. People, 96 Ill. App. 438. But see P. H.

practice is to move to reject it. If the opposite party takes issue of law or fact thereon, the objection is waived.²

d. Contents.—(1) IN GENERAL. The application for a writ of mandamus, whatsoever its local name and form, should, like the declaration or complaint in an ordinary action at law, state facts which prima facie constitute a cause of action in favor of the applicant,³ and in those jurisdictions where the alternative writ is regarded as the first pleading⁴ this rule applies likewise to it.⁵ If a prima facie case is shown the pleading is sufficient.⁶ Specifically the first pleading should state facts which show that a plain legal duty rests on respondent to per-Murphy Mfg. Co. v. Isbester, 91 Ill. App. 7).

The officers before whom the oath may be taken are prescribed by statute in Tennessee. Whitesides v. Stuart, 91 Tenn. 710, 20 S. W. 245.

The ordinary jurat is sufficient. State v. Wright, 10 Nev. 167. And see Pallady v. Beatty, 15 Okla. 626, 83 Pac. 428. Compare Landers v. Lawler, 84 Cal. 547, 24 Pac. 307.

Who may make verification.—Any competent person may make the verification. Landers v. Lawler, 84 Cal. 547, 24 Pac. 307 (semble); Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. State, 159 Ind. 510, 65 N. E. 508 (holding accordingly that in case a public officer is the petitioner he may verify the petition in his individual capacity). Thus petitioner's attorney may make the verification where the facts are within his knowledge (Pallady v. Beatty, 15 Okla. 626, 83 Pac. 428), or where the real parties in interest are absentees, the only petitioner within the state being a nominal party (Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. Wilson, (La. 1907) 42 So. 976). If the interest of several persons who join in a petition is joint, it seems that one may verify the petition for all; but if their interest is several, all must verify the petition, and it is insufficient as to those who do not do so. Lengel v. Stump, 1 Woodw. (Pa.) 399.

Verification on information and belief see supra, IX, E, 3, b, (IV).

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 298.

In Vermont, however, it is not necessary that a petition for a mandamus should allege all the particular facts on which the writ is claimed so that the case may be tried on demurrer as is common and requisite in suits according to the course of the common law, but if the petition states the right and duty in general terms it is sufficient. Kidder v. Morse, 26 Vt. 74.

The petition must state a prima facie case even where the alternative writ is regarded as the first pleading. Schwanbeck v. People, 15 Colo. 64, 24 Pac. 575; Haskins v. Scott County, 51 Miss. 406; Hardee v. Gibbs, 50 Miss. 802; Doolittle v. Cabell County Ct., 28 W. Va. 158; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 298.

form the act sought to be enforced;⁷ that the applicant is entitled to have that duty performed;⁸ that respondent has refused or failed to perform the act in question;⁹ that the applicant's rights have been infringed by respondent's default;¹⁰ and that the applicant has no adequate ordinary remedy at law.¹¹ If these essentials appear the pleading is sufficient.¹²

(II) ALLEGATIONS AS TO EXISTENCE OF DUTY, RIGHT OF PETITIONER, AND DUTY OF RESPONDENT—(A) In General. The allegations of the petition or alternative writ must show the existence of an official duty to perform the act sought to be enforced;¹³ that petitioner has a clear legal right to have that duty performed;¹⁴ and that the duty of performance plainly rests on respondent.

Interest of petitioner.—Petitioner must allege facts showing that he has an interest in having the duty in question performed. Marini v. Graham, 67 Cal. 130, 7 Pac. 442;

ent.¹⁵ Accordingly it must appear that respondent has authority and power to per-

North v. State University, 137 Ill. 296, 27 N. E. 54; Township 14 School Trustees v. People, 71 Ill. 559; Haskins v. Scott County, 51 Miss. 406; State v. Carey, 2 N. D. 36, 49 N. W. 164. However, a specific allegation of interest is unnecessary where the facts pleaded show that petitioner has such interest. Cole v. State, 131 Ind. 591, 31 N. E. 458. If petitioner's interest depends on a foreign statute, the statute must be pleaded. State v. Overman, 157 Ind. 141, 60 N. E. 1017.

Right as against stranger to proceeding.—In an application for mandamus to compel a sheriff to eject, under a writ of restitution, an occupant of land who is not a party to the action, it must be shown distinctly by the affidavits that his possession was acquired under the parties or subsequent to the filing of a lis pendens. Fogarty v. Sparks, 22 Cal. 142.

Right to pension.—Where a petition to compel the reinstatement of petitioner to the police pension roll avers that the board of trustees expressly found, originally, that petitioner's husband died from the immediate effects of an injury received by him in the discharge of his duty as a police officer, such finding is not impeached by an averment in the petition that he was stricken down and became physically ill because of physical efforts exerted by him in discharging his duty. Eddy v. People, 218 Ill. 611, 75 N. E. 1071.

Rights and powers of corporations.—If the privilege of borrowing public funds is conferred by statute on corporations of a certain class, the petition of a corporation seeking to compel a loan must show that it is one of the prescribed class (Houston Tap, etc., R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317); and where a corporation seeks to compel the payment of a legislative appropriation made to enable it to carry out a certain trust, its petition must show that it has power to perform the trust (Leatherwood v. Hill, (Ariz. 1906) 85 Pac. 405).

Appointment or election to office.—If petitioner claims rights of office he must allege his appointment (Burke v. Edgar, 67 Cal. 182, 7 Pac. 488; Kenneally v. Chicago, 220 Ill. 485, 77 N. E. 155; McNeill v. Chicago, 212 Ill. 481, 72 N. E. 450; Stott v. Chicago, 205 Ill. 281, 68 N. E. 736 [affirming 98 Ill. App. 105]) or election (State v. Johnson, 35 Fla. 2, 16 So. 786, 31 L. R. A. 357, where, however, the allegations were held to be sufficient in this respect. Compare Boyle v. Lansford School Dist., 8 Pa. Dist. 436).

Eligibility to office.—Where one of several candidates who have received an equal number of votes for a municipal office petitions to compel the city council to provide a mode of drawing lots to determine the tie, he must, it seems, allege that he is eligible to the office, but he need not allege the eligibility of his opponents. People v. Crabb, 156 Ill. 155, 40 N. E. 319. So a petition to compel election supervisors to select as ballot clerk one of several persons whose names have been submitted to them for that purpose must allege the eligibility of such persons. Sudler v. Lankford, 82 Md. 142, 33 Atl. 455. However, a petition to compel a retiring officer to turn over to his successor the records and furniture pertaining to the office need not allege that the successor is eligible to the office. State v. Johnson, 35 Fla. 2, 16 So. 786, 31 L. R. A. 357; McGee v. State, 103 Ind. 444, 3 N. E. 139; State v. Callahan, 4 N. D. 481, 61 N. W. 1025.

If petitioner claims the benefit of the Civil Service Act, he must allege that his position is in the classified service. Stott v. Chicago, 205 Ill. 281, 68 N. E. 736 [affirming 93 Ill. App. 105]; People v. Dalton, 159 N. Y. 235, 53 N. E. 1113 [affirming 34 N. Y. App. Div. 302, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 216].

Ownership of property involved in the controversy, if essential to petitioner's right, must be alleged in the petition. Winder v. Williams, 23 Tex. 601. Allegations held sufficient in this respect see Mattoon v. Mattoon Tile Co., 97 Ill. App. 56 (holding that a petition to compel the passage of an ordinance disconnecting lands from the territory of a city sufficiently shows, on general demurrer, that petitioners are the owners of more than half the area of such lands, where it alleges who owns the various tracts embraced in such area, and then sets up that petitioners "represent a majority of the area of the land in said territory"); Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496 (holding that if a petition to compel a tax to pay municipal bonds alleges that petitioner purchased the bonds it need not allege how they were transferred or the consideration for the transfer).

Qualifications as a pupil of a public school must be alleged by one who seeks by mandamus to be admitted as a pupil. Weir v. State, 161 Ind. 435, 68 N. E. 1023; Draper v. Cambridge, 20 Ind. 268.

Residence and citizenship.—If the right and duty in question is one that may be enforced only by residents or citizens, petitioner must allege his residence or citizenship. Township 14 School Trustees v. People, 71 Ill. 559; Hall v. People, 57 Ill. 307 (where, however, the petition was held sufficient to show residence); Houston Tap, etc., R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317; People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., 42 Fed. 638.

15. California.—Meyer v. San Francisco, (1907) 88 Pac. 722; San Luis Obispo County v. Gage, 139 Cal. 398, 73 Pac. 174; Marini v. Graham, 67 Cal. 130, 7 Pac. 442.

Colorado.—Stuart v. Nance, 28 Colo. 194, 63 Pac. 323 [affirming 12 Colo. App. 125, 54 Pac. 867]; Nance v. People, 25 Colo. 252, 54 Pac. 631.

District of Columbia.—U. S. v. Chandler, 2 Mackey 527.

Florida.—State v. Richards, 50 Fla. 284, 39 So. 152; Scott v. State, 43 Fla. 396, 31 So. 244; Puckett v. State, 33 Fla. 385, 14 So. 834.

form the act sought to be enforced.¹⁶ If the right or duty in question is based on an official order, the petition or alternative writ should show that the order is within the power and authority of the body by whom it was made;¹⁷ but the facts justifying the order need not be set forth,¹⁸ nor need the petition set forth in detail the proceedings on which the order is based.¹⁹ And where the right or duty is based on an order or ordinance it is generally sufficient to set out the same in substance.²⁰

(B) Conditions Precedent to Right and Duty—(1) IN GENERAL. To entitle petitioner to relief the petition or the alternative writ must allege the existence of all such facts as are essential elements of the right and duty sought to be enforced, and show that all things have been done which are required to be done in order to give rise to the right and duty. Accordingly if prerequisites or conditions precedent to the duty to act or to the right to demand action are imposed

Corporate duty.—A petition to compel a corporation to perform a duty not imposed on it by general law must show that the duty is imposed by its charter. People v. Colorado Cent. R. Co., 42 Fed. 638, holding that an allegation that defendant operated a certain railroad, and was a corporation of the state in which the suit is brought, without showing when or for what purpose it was chartered, or what railroad, if any, it built or was authorized to build, is not sufficient to show that defendant was under any legal obligation to operate said railroad. However, only such powers of the corporation as relate to the act sought to be enforced need be enumerated in the complaint. Merrill v. Southside Irr. Co., 112 Cal. 426, 44 Pac. 720.

An express allegation of authority is not essential, it seems, if the authority sufficiently appears otherwise. State v. Headlee, 18 Wash. 220, 51 Pac. 369.

Authority to levy a tax to pay railroad aid bonds sufficiently appears from allegations of authority to subscribe to the company's stock and to borrow money to pay the subscription. Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496.

17. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (Fla. 1906) 40 So. 875, order of railroad commissioners.

18. California.—Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488, order allowing claim against county.

Florida.—State v. Jacksonville Terminal Co., 41 Fla. 377, 27 So. 225, order of railroad commissioners.

Indiana.—State v. Beil, 157 Ind. 25, 60 N. E. 672, order of board of health.

North Carolina.—See McCless v. Meekins, 117 N. C. 34, 23 S. E. 99.

Wisconsin.—State v. Leon, 66 Wis. 199, 28 N. W. 140, order for public improvement.

Wyoming.—Appel v. State, 9 Wyo. 187, 61 Pac. 1015, order allowing claim against county.

by statute or otherwise, it must appear that they have been fully complied with and performed, so that the court can determine that a present duty rests on respondent and that a present right to performance is vested in petitioner.²¹ And some courts have gone so far as to hold that petitioner should by his Judicial notice of ordinance see infra, IX, E, 3, d, (vii).

21. Alabama.—Withers v. State, 36 Ala. 252, holding that a petition to compel a court to allow petitioner to appear before it as an attorney must show the existence of facts entitling him to practise and compliance with the statutory requisites in regard thereto; that it is not sufficient to allege that he "is a practitioner of law in all the courts of [the] State."

California.—Cozzens v. North Fork Ditch Co., 2 Cal. App. 404, 84 Pac. 342.

Colorado.—Schwanbeck v. People, 15 Colo. 64, 24 Pac. 575.

Illinois.—People v. Glann, 70 Ill. 232, holding that petitioner must aver fulfilment of conditions precedent or show some excuse for non-performance.

Kansas.—Shawnee County Com'rs v. State, 42 Kan. 327, 22 Pac. 326, holding that where the performance of a duty by a county officer is coupled with the expenditure of the general fund of the county, the alternative writ ought to allege that there is sufficient money belonging to the particular fund which could legally be appropriated to the purpose.

Michigan.—People v. Wayne County Cir. Judge, 19 Mich. 296, holding that a purchaser at a guardian's sale is not entitled to the writ to enforce his rights as such without a clear showing that he has done at the proper time everything necessary to complete the purchase on his part.

Nebraska.—State v. Weston, 67 Nebr. 175, 93 N. W. 182, holding that a petition to compel the state auditor to register refunding bonds issued by a county, and certify thereon that they have been regularly and legally issued and registered in accordance with law, is defective where it does not appear therefrom that there have been filed in the auditor's office the necessary information and data relative to the issuance of the bonds, from which it may be inferred that they were issued by authority and in pursuance of a valid statute, and that the statutory requirements to entitle them to registration have been complied with.

New Jersey.—Rader v. Union Tp., 43 N. J. L. 518, holding that where a statute gives the right in question and establishes a special method of enforcing it not according to the course of the common law, the facts and circumstances whose existence is necessary to the aid of the statute must be specially set out.

Mode of pleading performance.—Where a right claimed is dependent on the performance of conditions precedent, it is not sufficient to state a performance in all things generally, but the pleader should allege specially that each condition has been performed and the manner of its performance. People v. Glann, 70 Ill. 232.

Mandamus affecting division of municipality and limits thereof.—A petition to compel the division of a municipal corporation must show that proper proceedings have been taken to that end. Trustees v. People, 71 Ill. 559, holding that a failure to show that the school-district sought to be divided has no bonded debt; that the boundary of the new district does not come nearer than one mile to a school-house; that the petition for division was signed by all the voters of the new district; and that the new district contains not less than five families, is fatal. See, however, Somonauk v. People, 178 Ill. 631, 53 N. E. 314, where a petition to compel the division of a town was held sufficient in its allegations of notice of the division proceedings. So an application to compel action dependent on a vote for the division of a county must show an election, and that a majority of the votes are in favor of the division. State v. Elwood, 11 Wis. 17. Petition to compel the passing of an ordinance disconnecting petitioner's lands from a city held sufficient, on general demurrer, to show that petitioners all signed the petition for disconnection see Mattoon v. Mattoon Tile Co., 97 Ill. App. 56. See also as to disconnecting town territory Wilson v. Bristley, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 200, 33 S. W. 837.

Mandamus to compel approval of bond.—

A petition to compel the approval of an official bond must show that the bond was presented for approval within the time prescribed by statute (State v. Adams, 19 Nev. 370, 12 Pac. 488), and that it was executed by sufficient sureties (Woodward v. State, 58 Nebr. 598, 79 N. W. 164). Where, however, a complaint to compel the county auditor to approve the bond of a township trustee avers that relator tendered to the auditor a good and sufficient bond, it is not demurrable, although it does not allege that the bond was in a penalty double the amount of money likely to come into the trustee's hands in any one year during his office. Copeland v. State, 126 Ind. 51, 25 N. E. 866. A petition to compel the acceptance of a surety on an appeal-bond alleging, as to his qualification of residence, that he was a resident at the time the petition was filed, is insufficient. It must allege that he was a resident when the bond was presented for approval. State v. Spiegel, 20 Ohio Cir. Ct. 597, 11 Ohio Cir. Dec. 313.

Mandamus to compel delivery of official rooms, records, funds, etc.—An alternative writ to compel the prior incumbent of an office to surrender the office room, records, etc., need not allege in specific words that his term of office has expired. While the writ would be more exact and definite if the specific words were used, words fully equivalent, from which the expiration of the term follows as a necessary consequence, are sufficient. State v. Johnson, 35 Fla. 2, 16 So. 786, 31 L. R. A. 357. But if such a petition fails to state that there are any official records, funds, etc., it is bad on demurrer. Lavalle v. Soucy, 96 Ill. 467.

Mandamus to compel public improvement.

—A petition to compel the construction of a public improvement must show that the statutory proceedings therefor have been taken (State v. Graffam, 74 Wis. 643, 43 N. W. 727), and in some states must show an appropriation of the necessary funds to enable respondent to contract for and proceed with the work (Com. v. McFadden, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 161).

Mandamus to compel reinstatement to office see Fuller v. Plainfield Academic School, 6 Conn. 532 (holding that where plaintiff averred that a corporation was established by the name of the trustees, etc.; that he was one of the trustees, duly elected and enjoying the rights and privileges belonging to him as trustee; and that he continued to hold and exercise that office until he was removed therefrom, it sufficiently appeared that there was such an office as trustee and that there were rights, duties, and privileges appertaining thereto); Stott v. Chicago, 205 Ill. 281, 68 N. E. 736 [affirming 98 Ill. App. 105]; People v. Dalton, 159 N. Y. 235, 53 N. E. 1113 [affirming 34 N. Y. App. Div. 302, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 216] (the last two cases relating to public office).

22. Arkansas.—Pritchard v. Woodruff, 36 Ark. 196.

California.—Peck v. Los Angeles County, 90 Cal. 384, 27 Pac. 301; Schwartz v. Wilson, 75 Cal. 502, 17 Pac. 449 (holding that a petition to enforce payment of a claim must show that the debt limit will not be exceeded); Cozzens v. North Fork Ditch Co., 2 Cal. App. 404, 84 Pac. 342 (holding that in view of the terms of a contract for the supply of water for irrigation, it was necessary that a petition to compel the furnishing of a certain amount of water should allege that respondent had sufficient water to supply not only petitioner but all water takers). But see Miller v. Dailey, 136 Cal. 212, 68 Pac. 1029 (holding that a petition to compel the admission to a public school of a pupil who has been wrongfully expelled need not set forth the regulations governing the school and allege compliance therewith); Babeock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488.

Illinois.—Blocki v. People, 220 Ill. 444, 77 N. E. 172 (holding that a street railway company seeking to compel the commissioner of public works to grant a permit to construct a track after the time limited in the ordinance for such construction has expired must allege that the delay was caused by circumstances recognized by the ordinance as excusing the delay); Stott v. Chicago, 205 Ill. 281, 68 N. E. 736 [affirming 98 Ill. App. 105] (holding that to bring within the Civil Service Act one petitioning for reinstatement on the pay-roll as police patrolman, the petition must show that the office of police patrolman is not within the provisions of a section of the act excluding certain officers from such service); People v. Highway Com'rs, 88 Ill. 141.

Indiana.—Weir v. State, 161 Ind. 435, 68 N. E. 1023; Logansport, etc., R. Co. v. Groniger, 51 Ind. 383; Draper v. Cambridge, 20 Ind. 268.

Kansas.—Martin v. Ingham, 38 Kan. 641, 17 Pac. 162.

Maine.—Hoxie v. Somerset County, 25 Me. 333, holding that the petition must not only contain the affirmative allegation of proceedings necessary to entitle petitioner to the process prayed for, but must also aver that other facts which would justify the omission complained of do not exist.

Montana.—State v. Lewis, etc., County Dist. Ct. Dept. No. 1, 29 Mont. 265, 74 Pac. 498.

Ohio.—State v. Bickham, 4 Ohio Cir. Ct. 246, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 526, holding that relator must show that facts which would justify the omission complained of do not exist.

Texas.—Ewing v. Dallas County, 83 Tex. 663, 19 S. W. 280 (holding, under a statute which provides that if a de facto corporation is declared void by any court of competent jurisdiction the commissioners' court shall provide for the sale of its property and the settlement of its debts, and for this purpose may levy and collect taxes from the inhabitants of the corporation, and that upon the reincorporation of the de facto corporation all property owned by it shall belong to the new corporation, which shall be liable for the debts of the old corporation, that a petition to compel the commissioners to levy a tax to pay the salaries of officers of a city whose incorporation has been declared void is fatally defective where it fails to allege that the city has not been reincorporated); Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Randolph, 24 Tex. 317; Arberry v. Beavers, 6 Tex. 457, 55 Am. Dec. 791; Cullen v. Latimer, 4 Tex. 329; Watkins v. Huff, (Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 922 [writ of error denied in 94 Tex. 631, 64 S. W. 682] (holding, under a statute which provides that school trustees, in contracting with teachers, shall not create a deficiency debt against the district, that a petition to compel the approval of a teacher's contract must show that the funds of the district would not be rendered deficient by the approval); Wilson v. Bristley, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 200, 35 S. W. 837.

West Virginia.—Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595, holding that an alternative writ based on a claim against a municipality must show non-payment, but that the petition need not do so.

And see cases cited supra, note 21; infra, note 24 et seq.

This rule is not recognized apparently in some jurisdictions. Foster v. White, 86 Ala.

467, 6 So. 88 (holding that a petition to enforce the right of a stock-holder to inspect corporate books need not negative impropriety of purpose in seeking inspection); People v. Rio Grande County, 7 Colo. App. 229, 42 Pac. 1032 (holding that a petition to have a tax levied to pay a judgment need not allege the nature of the claim on which the judgment was rendered, but that if its nature can affect the right to mandamus it should be shown by the return); State v. Mayor, 22 Fla. 21 (holding that exhaustion of power to levy taxes need not be negated in a petition to compel a levy); McCless v. Meekins, 117 N. C. 34, 23 S. E. 99; Appel v. State, 9 Wyo. 187, 61 Pac. 1015; U. S. v. Brown, 41 Fed. 481 (holding, under a statute providing that county warrants which are not presented within five years, or which, being presented within that time and protested for want of funds, are not presented again within five years after funds have been set apart for payment thereof, shall be barred, that an information showing that warrants were duly issued and presented within five years and that they have not since been paid is good on demurrer, although more than five years have elapsed since their presentation, as the appropriation of money for their payment and non-presentation within five years thereafter should be shown by plea). See also Parks v. Soldiers, etc., Home, 22 Colo. 86, 43 Pac. 542; Nance v. Stuart, 7 Colo. App. 510, 44 Pac. 779.

Petition to compel erection of bridge or aid therein.—A petition to compel the erection of a bridge must show that respondents have adequate funds for that purpose (State v. Somerset, 44 Minn. 549, 47 N. W. 163); and it is essential that a petition by a town against a county to compel it to furnish aid to build a bridge should allege that the town has raised one half of the necessary funds (Madison County v. People, 16 Ill. App. 305; Kendall County v. People, 12 Ill. App. 210).

Petition to compel opening or improvement of highway.—A petition to compel the opening of a highway previously laid out should aver that the damages assessed to the landowners on the route of the road have been either paid or released, or that there is money in the town treasury with which to tender or pay the same, or that the necessary funds are otherwise under the control of the commissioners. Hall v. People, 57 Ill. 307. So an alternative writ to compel the appointment of commissioners for a road improvement should allege the existence and sufficiency of a fund applicable to the improvement. Shawnee County v. State, 42 Kan. 327, 22 Pac. 326.

Petition to compel removal of obstructions from highway.—A petition to compel county supervisors to clear a road from obstructions and keep it in repair is fatally defective if it fails to show that the road has not been abandoned and discontinued by the supervisors (Peck v. Los Angeles County, 90 Cal. 384, 27 Pac. 301); and a complaint in an action to compel a city by mandamus to remove from an alley an obstruction placed therein by a railroad company with the consent of the city must, in order to be sufficient, make it affirmatively to appear that an unlawful use is made of the alley (State v. New Albany, 127 Ind. 221, 26 N. E. 791).

Petition to compel payment of damages from laying out highway see infra, note 28.

25. Delaware.—Hastings v. Henry, 1 Marv. 287, 4 Atl. 1125, holding that a petition to compel the registry of petitioner as a voter must show that he offered evidence of his necessary qualifications.

Indiana.—Enos v. State, 131 Ind. 560, 31 N. E. 357, holding that a petition to compel the making and filing of an election certificate by the inspector of elections need not allege that the election board made a certified return of the votes.

Maine.—Rose v. Knox County, 50 Me. 243, holding that a petition to compel respondents to declare petitioner elected to fill a vacancy in an office must allege that a vacancy existed.

New York.—People v. Parmelee, 22 Misc. 380, 50 N. Y. Suppl. 451.

Wyoming.—State v. Chatterton, 11 Wyo. 1, 70 Pac. 466, holding that a petition to require the filing of a nomination certificate is insufficient which fails to show that the certificate was offered at the proper office within the time prescribed by law.

Petition to compel canvass see Wilson v. Bristley, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 200, 35 S. W. 837; State v. Barber, 4 Wyo. 56, 32 Pac. 14. A petition to require a board of canvassers to canvass and make return of the votes alleged to have been cast for relator for a particular office should show that an election for that office was held, and sufficient facts should be alleged to show prima facie a valid election for the office; and it is insufficient if it fails to show that any returns were made of the votes cast for relator or for the office named. State v. Chatterton, 12 Wyo. 168, 73 Pac. 961.

Petition to compel placing of name on ballot.—A petition by a party nominee to compel the placing of his name on the official ballot must show that he was regularly nominated (Sieber v. McCaffery, 198 Mo. App. 49, 82 S. W. 1104, holding that he must allege publication of notice of the primary election and due election of the delegates); that petitioner has a nomination certificate containing the party device and title (State v. Marshall County, (Ind. 1906) 78 N. E. 1016); and that the office for which he was nominated is vacant (Patrick v. Hagins, 41 S. W. 31, 19 Ky. L. Rep. 482, holding that an allegation that the incumbent of the office "resigned" on a certain prior date does not show that a vacancy then occurred, there being no allegation that the resignation was then accepted).

26. Indiana.—Logansport, etc., R. Co. v. Groniger, 51 Ind. 383, holding that an affidavit in support of a motion to compel a justice of the peace to issue a summons in a civil action must allege that the justice is not related by blood or marriage to either party.

Massachusetts.—Kimball v. Morris, 2 Metc. 573.

Michigan.—People v. Judge Wayne County Cir. Ct., 19 Mich. 296.

Montana.—State v. Lewis, etc., County Dist. Ct. Dept. No. 1, 29 Mont. 265, 74 Pac. 498, holding that a writ to compel the amendment of a statement on motion for a new trial must show that the motion has not been decided.

New York.—People v. Bacon, 25 Misc. 16, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 409.

Washington.—State v. Hunter, 4 Wash. 651, 30 Pac. 642, 32 Pac. 294, holding that an alternative writ to compel a judge to enter judgment will not be granted where the application shows that service was had on defendant by publication, and fails to show that such proofs were offered before the court as to authorize an entry of judgment.

Petition to compel preparation and transmission of transcript on appeal.—Where a justice of the peace has dismissed a cause for want of prosecution, a petition to compel him to make out a transcript on plaintiff's giving notice of an appeal to the county court must allege that that court has appellate jurisdiction of the cause. White v. Meyers, (Tex. Civ. App. 1898) 47 S. W. 476. Mandamus to compel a justice to send up a transcript on appeal will not be granted on a petition filed during the first term after the appeal was perfected, where the petition does not allege that it was practicable for the justice to have sent up the transcript when the petition was filed, as the statute provides that such transcript shall, "if practicable," be sent up on or before the first day of the term (Raley v. Jones, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 25 S. W. 144); but where an application alleges the refusal of a county clerk to prepare and transmit a transcript on appellant's filing a poverty affidavit in lieu of an appeal-bond as authorized by statute, applicant is entitled to mandamus to compel such preparation and transmission without alleging that it was practicable to have sent up such record at or before the time of filing the application (Newton v. Leal, (Tex. Civ. App. 1900) 56 S. W. 209). See APPEAL AND ERROR, 3 Cyc. 93, 94.

27. See cases cited infra, this note.

Petition to compel issuance of liquor license.—In mandamus to compel the issuance of a dram-shop license, the petition and the alternative writ must show a compliance with the municipal ordinance and with the statute

(State v. Hudson, 13 Mo. App. 61), as that a sufficient bond has been tendered (People v. Crotty, 93 Ill. 180). However, in Missouri a writ to compel the clerk of the county court to issue a license duly granted by the court need only show the due making of an order for the license without reciting the facts giving jurisdiction. State v. Moss, 35 Mo. App. 441.

Petition to compel issuance of permit see Blocki v. People, 220 Ill. 444, 77 N. E. 172. A petition to compel the commissioner of public works to issue a permit to lay a track in a street must aver that the necessary petition signed by owners of property abutting on the street was obtained and filed with the common council before the ordinance granting petitioner the right to lay the track was passed. McGann v. People, 194 Ill. 526, 62 N. E. 941 [reversing 97 Ill. App. 587].

28. Pritchard v. Woodruff, 36 Ark. 196 (holding that a petition to compel the state treasurer to refund, out of the appropriation made for that purpose, money erroneously paid into the treasury, need not allege the appropriation, but must allege that the sum demanded will not more than exhaust the appropriation); People v. Highway Com'rs, 88 Ill. 141 (holding that a petition to compel highway commissioners to pay damages growing out of the laying out of a road must show that the commissioners have taken possession of the road or recognized it as a legally established highway, or that the order for the road has not been revoked); Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595.

Mandamus to compel audit and allowance of claims.—A petition to compel the audit and allowance of a claim against a public body must allege facts giving rise to legal demand (San Luis Obispo County v. Gage, 139 Cal. 398, 73 Pac. 174), and showing that the demand is of such a nature that respondent is liable thereon (People v. Woodhull Tp. Bd., 14 Mich. 28), and that money has been appropriated therefor (Montrose v. Endner, 18 Colo. App. 65, 70 Pac. 152), or that there are moneys in the treasury applicable thereto (State v. Warner, 55 Wis. 271, 9 N. W. 795, 13 N. W. 255).

Mandamus to compel issuance of orders and warrants.—A petition or alternative writ to compel the issuance of a warrant for a claim against a public body must allege facts showing a compliance with statutory prerequisites and performance of conditions precedent to the issuance of the warrant. Ex p. Crise, 16 Ark. 193, 20 Ark. 540 (holding that a petition to compel the issuance of a warrant for damages caused by a levee must show not only an inquisition and award of damages, but also that the levee has been built, or is being constructed, or is under contract for construction); Chapin v. Port Angeles, 31 Wash. 535, 72 Pac. 117 (holding that an alternative writ to compel a municipal corporation to issue a warrant on a judgment is demurrable where it fails to allege that the judgment was satisfied by petitioner and a certified copy thereof presented to the city, as required by statute). Thus it has been held that the petition or writ must allege facts showing the validity of the claim, even though it has been audited, allowed, or approved (State v. La Grave, 22 Nev. 417, 41 Pac. 115. Contra, State v. Fraker, 166 Mo. 130, 65 S. W. 720; Caldwell County v. Harbert, 68 Tex. 321, 4 S. W. 607; State v. Headlee, 17 Wash. 637, 50 Pac. 493. And see Haly v. Auditor, 4 Bush (Ky.) 490), and even though an appropriation has been made to pay it (Parks v. Hays, 11 Colo. App. 415, 53 Pac. 893). So the petition or writ must make it appear that there are funds on hand out of which the claim may lawfully be paid. Cramer v. Sacramento, 18 Cal. 384; Redding v. Bell, 4 Cal. 323; Montgomery Tp. Highway Com'rs v. Snyder, 15 Ill. App. 645; Amos v. Burrus, 11 Ill. App. 383; State v. Otoe County, 10 Nebr. 19, 4 N. W. 258. And see Chapin v. Port Angeles, 31 Wash. 535, 72 Pac. 117, holding that an alternative writ reciting that petitioner is entitled to a warrant on the current expense fund of defendant city in satisfaction of a judgment is insufficient where it contains no allegations showing under what kind of contract the obligation which was merged in the judgment arose, and against what fund it was a charge when the contract was made. Contra, Robertson v. Alameda Free Public Library, etc., 136 Cal. 403, 69 Pac. 88. And see Babcock v. Goodrich, 47 Cal. 488; Lowell v. Bonney, 14 Colo. App. 230, 60 Pac. 830 (holding that an application to compel the state auditor to issue a warrant for the payment of services of an officer of the senate need not allege that there is money in the treasury to pay the same, since the salaries of such officers are preferred claims on any funds in the treasury or in anticipation of the revenues); Appel v. State, 9 Wyo. 187, 61 Pac. 1015. On the other hand a petition which fails to state that there was no money in the treasury to pay a city warrant at the time it was issued is inadequate to entitle petitioner to a writ compelling the mayor to sign an interest-bearing warrant. Scanlan v. Schwab, 103 Ill. App. 93. Petition or writ held to be sufficient see Babcock v. Goodrich, supra (in regard to jurisdiction to allow claim in question); State v. Ames, 31 Minn. 440, 18 N. W. 277 (in regard to action of city council authorizing payment of claim in question); State v. Headlee, 18 Wash. 220, 51 Pac. 369 (in regard to power of respondent to draw warrant); Appel v. State, supra (in regard to regularity of allowance of claim in question).

Mandamus to compel payment of claims in general.—A petition or alternative writ to compel payment of a claim against a public body must allege, according to the nature of the case, that the money is due from respondent (Payne v. Perkerson, 56 Ga. 672); that the claim was itemized when presented for payment (Chatters v. Coahoma County, 73 Miss. 351, 19 So. 107. See, however, Appel v. State, 9 Wyo. 187, 61 Pac. 1015), and accompanied by estimates and certificates as required by contract, or account for their absence (McCoy v. Harnett County, 50 N. C. 265, where, however, the petition was held to be sufficient in this respect); that respondent has funds on hand with which it may pay the claim (Stevens v. Truman, 127 Cal. 155, 59 Pac. 397. And see Schwartz v. Wilson, 75 Cal. 502, 17 Pac. 449. Contra, Davis v. Connor, 52 S. W. 945, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 658); and, where respondent city and another city are jointly bound to pay the claim, that it has not been paid by the other city (People v. Elgin, 66 Ill. 507).

Mandamus to compel payment of bonds.—

A petition to compel the payment of public bonds must allege facts showing the validity of the bonds (State v. Thorne, 9 Nebr. 458, 4 N. W. 63. Contra, McCless v. Meekins, 117 N. C. 34, 23 S. E. 99); that all statutory conditions precedent to payment have been complied with (People v. Pavey, 137 Ill. 585, 27 N. E. 697); and that respondent has funds on hand applicable to payment of the bonds (Meyer v. San Francisco, (Cal. 1907) 88 Pac. 722; People v. Pavey, supra).

Mandamus to compel payment of warrants.

—If a petition to compel a county treasurer to pay a warrant issued by the county auditor alleges that the board of supervisors of the county audited and allowed the claim and ordered the auditor to draw a warrant for its amount, and that the auditor in pursuance of this order issued and delivered the warrant to claimant, it is sufficient, although it does not follow the exact words of the statute. Jones v. Morgan, 67 Cal. 308, 7 Pac. 734. So an information showing that relator holds valid warrants against the general funds of the county, and that the treasurer holds funds which appear to be applicable to their payment, is sufficient to require the treasurer to show cause why such funds should not be so applied. U. S. v. Brown, 41 Fed. 481. The petition need not allege facts showing that the warrant was properly issued (Connor v. Morris, 23 Cal. 447 [followed in Jones v. Morgan, 67 Cal. 308, 7 Pac. 734]; Neal Loan, etc., Co. v. Chastain, 121 Ga. 500, 49 S. E. 618); but it must show that respondent has funds on hand which may be applied in payment of the warrant (Kephart v. People, 28 Colo. 73, 62 Pac. 946), and by statute it may be necessary to show that the warrant recites the specific use to which the money to be drawn thereon is to be applied (State v. Dubuque Dist. Tp., 11 Iowa 155).

Allegations as to presentation of claim for allowance see infra, IX, E, 3, d, (III), (B).

Petition to compel tax or local assessment to pay claim see infra, this section.

29. Moore v. Rogan, 96 Tex. 375, 73 S. W. 1, holding that an applicant for mandamus against the commissioner of the general land-office to compel reinstatement in his purchase of land, which the commissioner had canceled because of conflict with an existing lease, and school-districts,³⁰ and it has also been held applicable in respect of taxation and local assessments.³¹ must show compliance by applicant with the law authorizing his purchase, as well as the invalidity of the lease.

Petition to compel issuance of deed or patent.—An alternative writ to compel the board of land commissioners to execute a deed of state land to petitioner must show on its face that he has complied with the statutory requirements (Shively v. Pennoyer, 27 Oreg. 33, 39 Pac. 396); and if a relation to compel the issuing of a patent shows that the land has been sold to the state, it must show also that the statement of the sale has been recorded as required by statute (State v. Harvey, 11 Wis. 33).

Petition to compel survey.—A petition to compel a county surveyor to survey lands claimed under a head-right certificate must show relator's title to the certificate, and describe his entry, and the location of the land. Winder v. Williams, 23 Tex. 601. Petition to compel survey held sufficient see Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Locke, 63 Tex. 623.

30. Township 14 School Trustees v. People, 71 Ill. 559; People v. Helt, 116 Ill. App. 391 (holding that a petition to compel a township treasurer to credit a school-district with an amount of taxes collected should allege that the district has not received the full amount of such taxes to which it is entitled, and that at the time of his refusal to make such credit there were in the hands of the treasurer sufficient funds from the particular source from which such credit was to be made to enable him to make the same); Harrison Tp. Advisory Bd. v. State, (Ind. 1906) 76 N. E. 986 (holding that in mandamus to compel the advisory board of a township to make an appropriation to build a school-house, a complaint and alternative writ are demurrable which fail to show that there are any funds from which the appropriation may be made); Weir v. State, 161 Ind. 435, 68 N. E. 1023; Draper v. Cambridge, 20 Ind. 268; Boyle v. Lansford School Dist., 8 Pa. Dist. 436 (holding that a motion to quash an alternative writ of mandamus will be allowed where a school-teacher who seeks thereby to enforce his rights does not show an acceptance of the terms of his election, or a contract thereunder before his appointment is annulled); Watkins v. Huff, (Tex. Civ. App. 1901) 63 S. W. 922 [writ of error denied in 94 Tex. 631, 64 S. W. 682]. See, however, Miller v. Dailey, 136 Cal. 212, 68 Pac. 1029 (where a petition to compel the admission of a pupil was held to be sufficient); Cruse v. McQueen, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894) 25 S. W. 711 (where a petition to compel a county judge to issue a teacher's certificate was held to be sufficient).

31. Applegate v. State, 158 Ind. 119, 63 N. E. 16 (holding that a petition by a county assessor to compel a bank to permit him to examine its books for the purpose of obtaining information to enable him to discharge his duty must allege that some taxpayer who is a depositor in the bank has failed to make a return for taxation of all his money so on deposit, or that relator has just cause to believe that he has not done so); Ewing v. Dallas County Com'rs Ct., 83 Tex. 663, 19 S. W. 280.

Petition held to be sufficient see People v. Land Office Com'rs, 90 Hun (N. Y.) 525, 36 N. Y. Suppl. 29 (holding, in a proceeding to compel the land-office commissioners to direct repayment of the price paid at a tax-sale afterward canceled by the state controller, that a petition alleging that application was duly made to the controller to cancel the sale, and that his decision canceling it was duly made, sufficiently alleges a proper presentation of the application and the rendition of the controller's decision); State v. Crites, 48 Ohio St. 142, 26 N. E. 1052 (holding that a petition to compel a county auditor to tax omitted property sufficiently shows the duty to act, where it alleges that the auditor had evidence before him showing that a certain person had in certain years failed to return taxable property owned by him); Caldwell County v. Harbert, 68 Tex. 321, 4 S. W. 607.

Mandamus to compel levy and collection of railroad aid tax see Harwood, etc., R. Co. v. Case, 37 Iowa 692; Arkansas Southern R. Co. v. Wilson, (La. 1907) 42 So. 976, holding that a petition to enforce the levy of a tax that has been voted in aid of a railroad enterprise need not recite every detail of the proceedings by which the election was held. Where the petition to compel the collection of a railroad aid tax shows that the order placing the same on the tax duplicate was canceled, and that on appeal from the order of cancellation judgment was rendered that the board of commissioners should enter on its record an order requiring that the tax be immediately collected, the petition is bad for failing to allege that the commissioners entered the order as required. State v. Burgett, 151 Ind. 94, 51 N. E. 139, (1898) 49 N. E. 884.

Mandamus to compel levy of school-tax see Covington Bd. of Education v. Covington, 103 Ky. 634, 45 S. W. 1045, 20 Ky. L. Rep. 289; Jarvis v. Warren County, 49 Miss. 603; Caldwell County v. Harbert, 68 Tex. 321, 4 S. W. 607.

Mandamus to compel levy of tax to pay judgment.—It has been held that an alternative writ to compel the levy of a tax to pay a judgment against a municipality need not show that the taxing power has not been exhausted by reason of a statute limiting such power to a certain percentage of the value of the taxable property (State v. Jacksonville, 22 Fla. 21); and that a petition to compel a levy need not show the nature of the claim on which the judgment was rendered (People v. Ric Grande County, 7 Colo. App. 229, 42 Pac. 1032. See, however, State v. St. Martin Parish Police Jury, 32 La.

(III) ALLEGATIONS AS TO DEFAULT AND BREACH OF DUTY—(A) In General. The petition or alternative writ must allege facts showing that respondent has been guilty of acts which constitute a breach of the duty enjoined upon him, or that he has failed to perform that duty.³²

(B) Demand and Refusal of Performance. In order to show that respondent is in default in cases where a private right is sought to be enforced, the petition or alternative writ must as a rule allege that performance of the duty has been demanded of respondent and that he has refused or failed to perform it.³³

Ann. 884, holding that a petition to compel a municipal corporation to levy a tax to pay a judgment notwithstanding a constitutional limitation, on the ground that the limitation impairs the obligation of petitioner's contract with the municipality, must allege that the judgment is founded on a contract). But if no execution has been issued on the judgment the alternative writ must show that the municipality has no money in its treasury and no property subject to execution (Hambleton v. Dexter, 89 Mo. 188, 1 S. W. 234); and a judgment creditor who demands an order of the supervisors directing the town-clerk to insert the amount of the judgment in the tax-roll for collection must allege that he notified the supervisors of the rendition of the judgment in the manner required by statute (State v. Elba Sup'rs, 34 Wis. 169). In Missouri an alternative writ which sets forth a judgment against a city, an execution with return of nulla bona, and that no levy has been made by the city council as authorized, and commands a levy within legal limits, is sufficient (Hartman v. Brunswick, 98 Mo. App. 674, 73 S. W. 726), and it need not allege that there is no money in the treasury applicable to the judgment (Hubbel v. Maryville, 85 Mo. App. 165). As to this last proposition the law is otherwise in West Virginia (Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 628); and in that state, while the petition of a creditor on whose judgment execution has been returned nulla bona need not expressly allege that the judgment has not been paid (Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595), yet non-payment must be alleged in the alternative writ (Fisher v. Charleston, supra).

Mandamus to compel local assessment see State v. Leon, 66 Wis. 199, 23 N. W. 140. An alternative writ to compel an assessment by drainage commissioners must show that their report was adopted, and that they were directed to proceed, by the county judge. People v. Marsh, 21 N. Y. App. Div. 88, 47 N. Y. Suppl. 395. If an application by contractors to compel a new assessment for their work alleges that payment of the original assessment was refused because of excess of work, it must clearly set forth facts showing that the previous assessment was void. Frick v. Morford, 87 Cal. 576, 25 Pac. 764.

Mandamus to compel issuance of precept for local assessments see Chapin v. Osborn, 29 Ind. 99. A complaint by contractors to compel the issuance of a precept on an estimate of work done under a contract for a local improvement must allege that plaintiff filed the affidavit required by statute in such cases. Indianapolis v. Patterson, 33 Ind. 157.

32. California.—Kelly v. Edwards, 69 Cal. 460, 11 Pac. 1.

Florida.—Lake County v. State, 24 Fla. 263, 4 So. 795.

Illinois.—Swigert v. Hamilton County, 130 Ill. 538, 22 N. E. 609; P. H. Murphy Mfg. Co. v. Isbester, 91 Ill. App. 7.

Kansas.—Rosenthal v. State Bd. of Canners, 50 Kan. 129, 32 Pac. 129, 19 L. R. A. 157; State v. Carney, 3 Kan. 88; Garden City First Nat. Bank v. Morton County, 7 Kan. App. 739, 52 Pac. 580, holding that a petition and alternative writ to compel a tax levy must aver that respondents have failed or will fail to make the levy.

New York.—People v. Bricklayers' Benev., etc., Union, 20 N. Y. App. Div. 8, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 648.

Ohio.—State v. Bickham, 4 Ohio Cir. Ct. 246, 2 Ohio Cir. Dec. 526.

South Dakota.—Thomas v. Beadle County, 1 S. D. 452, 47 N. W. 529.

Texas.—Clarke v. San Jacinto County, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 204, 45 S. W. 315.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 308.

Allegation of specific instances of violation of duty.—Where the recitals and allegations of an alternative writ together charge a general violation of the duty of respondent railroad company to put into practical operation a system or schedule of rates for the transportation of phosphate prescribed by the railroad commissioners, the writ is not demurrable because it does not allege a specific instance of the violation of such schedule of rates. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 48 Fla. 114, 37 So. 652.

In proceedings to restore an attorney who has been disbarred it must accordingly appear that the disbarment was irregular, erroneous, or without jurisdiction. State v. Finley, 30 Fla. 302, 11 So. 500; In re Gephard, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 134.

The evidence on which respondent based his action must be brought before the court, where that action is complained of as a breach of duty. Ex p. Smith, 69 Ala. 523; Standard Import Co. v. New Orleans Import Co., 117 La. 633, 42 So. 192; State v. Forrest, 11 Wash. 158, 39 Pac. 450.

33. Arkansas.—Coit v. Elliott, 28 Ark. 294, holding that it must appear that there has been a refusal by respondent to perform the duty in question, either in direct terms or by circumstances distinctly showing an intention on his part not to do the act required.

California.—Meyer v. San Francisco, (1907) 88 Pac. 722; Peck v. Los Angeles County, 90

In cases where a public right is sought to be enforced, however, no demand need be alleged.⁸⁴

(iv) ALLEGATIONS AS TO INJURY FROM DEFAULT OR BREACH OF DUTY. In case a private right is sought to be enforced, it must appear from the petition or alternative writ that petitioner has been injuriously affected by respondent's default or breach of duty, or that he will be injuriously affected if the duty is not performed.⁸⁵

(v) ALLEGATIONS AS TO INADEQUACY OF ORDINARY REMEDIES. The petition or alternative writ must make it appear that a necessity exists for resort-

North Carolina.—See Alexander v. McDowell County Com'rs, 67 N. C. 330, 332, holding that "the writ should show expressly, by the averment of a demand and refusal, or an equivalent, that the prosecutor, before his application to the Court, did all in his power to obtain redress."

Pennsylvania.—Boyle v. Lansford School Dist., 8 Pa. Dist. 436; Com. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 266.

United States.—See Ex p. Virginia Sink-ing Fund Com'rs, 112 U. S. 177, 5 S. Ct. 421, 28 L. ed. 691.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 308.

See, however, People v. Wilson, 119 N. Y. 515, 23 N. E. 1064.

An allegation of refusal dispenses with an allegation of demand.—Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. State, 149 Ind. 276, 49 N. E. 2; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496.

A demand is substantially averred by the general words "often requested and refused to be done," in the absence of a special demurrer. People v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269, 18 Pac. 309.

Grounds and circumstances of refusal.—The petition or alternative writ must set forth respondent's reason for refusing to act, if any was given (Goss v. Vermontville, 44 Mich. 319, 6 N. W. 684; Vespra, etc., Municipal Corp. v. Beatty, 17 U. C. Q. B. 540. But see Gillett v. People, 13 Colo. App. 553, 59 Pac. 72), and the circumstances of refusal (Goss v. Vermontville, supra); and the validity of respondent's reason for refusing to act must be negatived (Martin v. Ingham, 38 Kan. 641, 17 Pac. 162; Goss v. Vermontville, supra; State v. McKee, 150 Mo. 233, 51 S. W. 421. Contra, Chapin v. Osborn, 29 Ind. 99. See State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279). Thus in case the duty in question involves an exercise of discretion, it must appear that the refusal is not justifiable on the ground of discretion. Buggeln v. Doe, (Ariz. 1904) 78 Pac. 367; U. S. v. Chandler, 2 Mackey (D. C.) 527; Scott v. State, 43 Fla. 396, 31 So. 244; State v. Somerset, 44 Minn. 549, 47 N. W. 163. And see Rader v. Union Tp., 43 N. J. L. 518, holding that if the method of performing the duty is discretionary and optional, a mandamus to compel defendant to do it in a particular manner is defective, unless it shows on its face the impossibility of defendant's exercising the option.

Petition held to be sufficient in this respect ing to the extraordinary writ of mandamus in that ordinary legal remedies are inadequate to afford petitioner relief.³⁶

(VI) AIDED BY INFERENCE AND PRESUMPTION. While as a rule the facts should appear by direct averment and not by mere inference,³⁷ yet the pleading may be aided by inferences which must necessarily be drawn as a matter of law from unequivocal averments.³⁸ And while as a rule nothing essential to the right to mandamus is taken by intendment,³⁹ yet it is not necessary expressly to allege

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 307.

This was formerly the rule in Illinois (Peoria School Inspectors v. People, 20 Ill. 525), but it has been changed by statute (People v. Crotty, 93 Ill. 180 [overruling Ryan v. Duncan, 88 Ill. 144]).

The right of appeal must be negatived.—State v. Smith, 19 Wis. 531. See Com. v. McCauley, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 459, 3 Pa. Co. Ct. 77, where the petition was apparently held to be sufficient in this respect.

Necessity of express allegation of absence or inadequacy of ordinary remedy.—An express allegation that there is no adequate ordinary remedy is not necessary where the facts alleged disclose that such is the case. People v. Hilliard, 29 Ill. 413; Hon. r. State, 89 Ind. 249; Chumasero v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242; State v. Union Tp., 43 N. J. L. 518; State v. Goll, 32 N. J. L. 285; State v. Jones, 23 N. Graham*, 78 Vt. 290, 63 Atl. 146. Contra, by statute. Isaacs v. Ford, 8 Kulp (Pa.) 80.

Necessity of alleging facts showing absence or inadequacy of ordinary remedy.—Facts showing that there is no adequate ordinary remedy need not be alleged where there is an express allegation of absence or inadequacy of ordinary remedies. State v.

An allegation of absence or inadequacy of ordinary remedies is without force if the facts alleged show the contrary. Hon. r. State, 89 Ind. 249; Chumasero v. Potts, 2 Mont. 242. And see State v. Jones, 23 N. C. 129.

Sufficiency of allegations as to absence or inadequacy of ordinary remedy see Monongahela City v. Monongahela Electric Light Co., 3 Pa. Dist. 63, 12 Pa. Co. Ct. 529. An alternative writ to compel a town to levy a tax to satisfy an execution against it need not allege that an execution has been issued and proved unavailing; it is sufficient to state that the town has no property whereon to levy an execution, and has no money in its treasury subject to the payment of the judgment (Hambleton v. Dexter, 89 Mo. 188, 1 S. W. 234); but an allegation that the treasurer has refused to pay the judgment is insufficient to show no adequate remedy (Hambleton v. Dexter, supra).

matters of fact which the law presumes from other facts which are set forth in the pleading.⁴⁰

(vii) AIDER BY JUDICIAL NOTICE. It is unnecessary to allege matters of which the courts take judicial notice.⁴¹ Thus if respondent's authority, power, or duty rests on a general statute, it is not necessary to plead the statute;⁴² but the rule is otherwise in the case of municipal ordinances, since of these the courts do not as a rule take cognizance.⁴³

(viii) AIDER BY REFERENCE TO EXTRANEOUS PAPERS. If documents are attached to an application for mandamus and are made a part thereof by proper averment they may generally be looked to in determining the sufficiency of the application;⁴⁴ but in the absence of this a petition for mandamus cannot be aided by the affidavits filed in its support.⁴⁵ So the sufficiency of the alternative writ

New York.—People v. Bacon, 25 Misc. 16, 54 N. Y. Suppl. 409, holding, however, that the presumption of the continuance of a fact once shown to exist is not applicable where a writ of alternative mandamus to compel a clerk of court to issue a transcript and execution on a judgment alleges that the judgment has not been satisfied, released, or appealed from, and is no longer stayed, but fails to allege further that the judgment continues in existence or is in full force and effect, since relator, by only partially rebutting the facts which might affect his record, invites the presumption that he may have suppressed the fact that the judgment has been set aside.

depends in those jurisdictions where it is regarded as a pleading,⁴⁶ upon its own recitals, and it cannot be aided by the petition or affidavits,⁴⁷ even though it contains a reference thereto.⁴⁸ Defects in the writ may, it seems, be supplied by the return.⁴⁹

(ix) REDUNDANT AND SCANDALOUS MATTER. Petitioner should not allege matters which are not pertinent to his right to relief,⁵⁰ and if he does so, such matters may be stricken out on motion⁵¹ or be disregarded as surplusage.⁵² So irrelevant matter reflecting on the official integrity of respondent may be stricken out by the court on its own motion as being scandalous.⁵³

(x) PRAYER FOR RELIEF.⁵⁴ The prayer for relief must be certain, and ask the performance of specific acts;⁵⁵ but a writ of mandamus need not be asked by that name.⁵⁶ It has been held that the fact that the petition prays for more relief

Oregon.—Shively v. Pennoyer, 27 Ore. 33, 39 Pac. 396; Elliott v. Oliver, 22 Ore. 44, 29 Pac. 1; McLeod v. Scott, 21 Ore. 94, 26 Pac. 1061, 29 Pac. 1.

This was the rule in Ohio (McKenzie v. Ruth, 22 Ohio St. 371; Johnes v. State Auditor, 4 Ohio St. 493), but now the writ is required by statute to contain a copy of the petition (Deckman v. Oak Harbor, 10 Ohio Cir. Ct. 409, 6 Ohio Cir. Dec. 729). See infra, this note.

A different rule prevails in some states.—Gill v. State, 72 Ind. 266. Thus in those states where the affidavit or petition is referred to in the alternative writ (State v. Moore, 15 Wash. 432, 46 Pac. 647; State v. Trimbell, 12 Wash. 440, 41 Pac. 183) and served therewith (State v. McCullough, 3 Nev. 202; McCoy v. Harnett County Justices, 49 N. C. 180; State v. Moore, supra; State v. Trimbell, supra), the writ may be aided by reference to the affidavit or petition, and this is especially true where it is the affidavit and not the writ which is required to be answered (State v. McCullough, supra). If, however, the affidavit or petition is not referred to in the writ and served therewith, it cannot be resorted to in order to aid the writ. Chapin v. Port Angeles, 31 Wash. 535, 72 Pac. 117; State v. Moore, supra; State v. Trimbell, supra.

48. Commercial Bank v. New York Canal Com'rs, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25 (holding that it is not enough to refer in the writ to the affidavits and other papers on file; that while such reference is allowable to show the amount of a sum of money claimed, it is not allowable to show the right of relator thereto); State v. Carey, 2 N. D. 36, 49 N. W. 164; Doolittle v. Cabell County Ct., 28 W. Va. 158; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595. See, however, supra, note 48.

51. State v. St. Louis, 145 Mo. 551, 46 S. W. 981, 42 L. R. A. 113, holding that allegations in a petition to compel municipal action on plans for a pipe tunnel that the space allotted to relator is occupied by other companies with the city's consent should be stricken out.

However, facts may be alleged which do not give a right to mandamus where they bear on the question of respondent's duty (State v. San Antonio St. R. Co., 10 Tex. Civ. App. 12, 30 S. W. 266), and inasmuch as the allowance of a writ of mandamus rests largely in the discretion of the court, and the writ will be refused where the proceeding is trivial or vexatious, averments showing a special interest in relator will not be stricken out as immaterial, even in a case where it is not necessary to show such interest (State v. Home St. R. Co., 43 Nebr. 830, 62 N. W. 225).

than it shows petitioner entitled to is not a fatal defect,⁵⁷ and that the court may in such case grant the relief to which the facts entitle him.⁵⁸

e. Joinder of Causes of Action.⁵⁹ In the absence of statute to the contrary,⁶⁰ separate and distinct rights, whether of one person or of several persons respectively, cannot be joined for the purpose of enforcement in one mandamus proceeding, whether the different duties rest on one person or on several persons respectively.⁶¹ The court may, however, in one proceeding, enforce the performance of separate but coöperative acts required by law to be done by different officers in the performance of an entire duty cast on all in common.⁶²

4. RETURN, PLEA, AND ANSWER⁶³—a. Ohio.—State v. Brown County Ct. of C. Pl., 1 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 20, 1 West. L. J. 163, holding that if a court is the respondent, the judges thereof must answer collectively as a court.

England.—Rex v. Bailly, 1 Keb. 33 (holding that if the writ is directed to the aldermen, bailiffs, and commonalty of a municipality, the bailiffs and capital burgesses, without the commonalty, cannot make a return); Rex v. Abingdon, 12 Mod. 308, 2 Salk. 431 (holding that the mayor of a respondent

c. Time For Making. The time for filing a return to an alternative writ or for answering the pleading that has in some states been substituted for the alternative writ is generally fixed by the court in its discretion,⁸¹ although in some jurisdictions the matter is regulated by statute.⁸² The time for filing a return or answer as originally fixed may be extended by the court in a proper case.⁸³

If two answers are filed, each in form the answer of the respondent body, the court will ascertain which is the true answer. People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 655. See, however, Rex v. Abingdon, 12 Mod. 308, 2 Salk. 431.

If respondent board is equally divided as to what shall be the return, the court may permit a return to be filed by individual members in addition to the return purporting to be that of the board. People v. New York Bd. of Police, 107 N. Y. 235, 13 N. E. 920 [affirming 46 Hun 296].

If the writ is directed to the individual members of a board as well as to the board itself, the members may make individual returns in addition to that made by the board. People v. Board of Police, 46 Hun (N. Y.) 296 [affirmed in 107 N. Y. 235, 13 N. E. 920].

If respondents do not constitute a corporate body they may answer separately, although the duty sought to be enforced devolves on them jointly. People v. Holden, 91 Ill. 446.

The majority of the members of the respondent body may answer for the body (People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 655; Lander v. McMillan, 53 N. C. 174; McCoy v. Harnett County Justices, 49 N. C. 180; State v. Section 2d, Wright (Ohio) 559. And see *Rex v. Oklahoma.—In re Brown, 2 Okla. 590, 39 Pac. 469, holding that a defendant in a disbarment proceeding is not entitled to twenty days' time, the time allowed to answer the ordinary summons under the code, but may be cited to appear and answer within any time that gives him a reasonable opportunity to be heard.

West Virginia.—Doolittle v. Cabell County Ct., 28 W. Va. 158; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 595.

United States.—Wisdom v. Memphis, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,903, 2 Flipp. 285.

See 33 Cent. Dig. tit. "Mandamus," § 357.

It rests in the discretion of the court whether respondent will be allowed to file a return after the return-day or whether a peremptory writ will at once issue. People v. Judges Ulster County, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 64; Fisher v. Charleston, 17 W. Va. 628.

To what term of court writ may be made returnable.—In Illinois if an original proceeding in the supreme court concerns the public interest the writ is made returnable to the term at which the application is made; but if the proceeding be of a merely private nature the writ is made returnable at the succeeding term. People v. Thistlewood, 103 Ill. 139. In Maryland the court may entertain the case on the first day of the term, and, if the exigency of the case requires it, provide for the return of the writ at an early day in the same term, the time for return being in the sound discretion of the court. Harwood v. Marshall, 10 Md. 451. In Tennessee, where the application is made in vacation, the writ is returnable to the next term of court, and where the application is made in term-time the writ is returnable to the same term, and this is the rule followed by the federal courts sitting in that district. Wisdom v. Memphis, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,903, 2 Flipp. 285. In Texas the writ may be made returnable to the same term at which it was granted (Fitzhugh v. Custer, 4 Tex. 391, 51 Am. Dec. 728; Bradley v. McCrabb, Dall. (Tex.) 504), and this rule is followed by the federal courts sitting in that state (Hitchcock v. Galveston, 48 Fed. 640).

d. Signature and Verification. At common law the return need not be signed.⁸⁴ It has been held that if respondent is a municipality the return need not bear its common seal,⁸⁵ but that the return of a respondent court should be made under its seal.⁸⁶ The return need not be verified⁸⁷ in the absence of statute⁸⁸ or rule of court to the contrary.⁸⁹ The remedy for failure to verify the return where verification is required is a motion to strike the pleading from the files.⁹⁰

e. Service. In some states it is the practice to serve a copy of the return on relator.⁹¹

f. Form and Contents—(i) IN GENERAL. Unless the return shows performance of the act sought to be enforced,⁹² it must show valid reasons for respondent's failure or refusal to perform the act.⁹³ Respondent may plead by way of traverse⁹⁴ or by way of confession and avoidance;⁹⁵ and in the absence of Performance of the duty is sufficiently set forth by averring with certainty and clearness that respondent has complied with the mandate of the writ, substantially following the mandatory clause of the writ. State v. Williams, 69 Ala. 311.

93. People v. Chenango, 8 N. Y. 317 (holding that where an objection to the validity of a law arises from the failure of the legislature to comply with constitutional provisions, and this is not apparent from the act itself, it can be taken advantage of only by alleging it distinctly in the return); People v. Ulster County, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 473; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496; State v. Lean, 9 Wis. 279.

The return must show a complete legal right in respondent to refuse obedience to the command of the alternative writ. Williams v. New Haven, 68 Conn. 263, 36 Atl. 61; Woodruff v. New York, etc., R. Co., 59 Conn. 63, 20 Atl. 17. It must show not merely what would be a prima facie right in respondent in the absence of any allegation to the contrary, but must show a right to refuse obedience in view of the allegations of the writ. Williams v. New Haven, supra; State v. Beyers, 41 Mo. App. 503.

If the return is manifestly false, frivolous, or calculated to embarrass or delay the remedy sought, it will be quashed on motion and a peremptory writ will be awarded. State v. Jersey City Bd. of Public Works, 45 N. J. L. 465. Return held not to be frivolous see Johnston v. Cleaveland County, 67 N. C. 101.

a demurrer or motion to quash⁹⁶ he must plead in one way or the other else no defense is presented.⁹⁷ The sufficiency of the return depends on its substance rather than its form,⁹⁸ although in a few states certain formal requirements must be observed.⁹⁹

(II) TRAVERSES OR DENIALS.¹ Respondent may answer by way of traverse or denial of the matters set forth in the petition or writ.² Denials must be single;³ and at common law a general denial in the return is a nullity,⁴ although the rule is otherwise in some states.⁵ Respondent need not traverse any fact or answer for any breach of duty not set out or assigned in the writ.⁶

(III) CONFESSION AND AVOIDANCE. Instead of traversing the matters set forth in the alternative writ or petition, respondent may plead by way of confession and avoidance,⁷ and if he relies on new matter excusing non-performance of the commands of the writ, this must be set up in the return.⁸ Great strictness of pleading is required in returns which set up matter of confession and avoidance.⁹

(IV) ADMISSIONS—(A) In General. Relator is entitled to the benefit of all admissions made by respondent in the return.¹⁰

(B) Admissions From Failure to Deny. All such allegations of the petition and recitals of the alternative writ are as material and well pleaded are taken to be true unless respondent denies them;¹¹ and the same occurs where attempted matter, a return which fails to specifically plead it is bad); People v. Rovers, 45 N. Y. App. Div. 145, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 148 (holding that a defense that petitioning contractors have an adequate remedy in the right to a determination of the claim payment of which is sought to be enforced by mandamus should be set up in the return); Matter of Rebecchi, 51 Misc. (N. Y.) 403, 100 N. Y. Suppl. 513 (holding that an answer to a petition to compel a gas company to furnish gas at the statutory rate, alleging that such rate would give the company very little above the average cost of the service and would not serve in yielding an adequate return, so that the company would be deprived of its property without just compensation and without due process of law, is insufficient in failing to allege the facts from which the court might determine the question of adequacy).

Proceedings for restoration to membership.

—Where one who has been expelled from a corporation or society seeks restoration by mandamus, the return should set out all the facts necessary to show that relator was removed for a legal cause and in a legal manner. *State v. Proceedings relating to municipal claims.

A city excusing non-payment of a claim admitted to be just on the ground that the revenues it can lawfully raise are inadequate must set out in detail all the items of its receipts and expenditures, so that the court can see that it is not the fault of the city that the debt is not paid and that the city is doing all it can to pay it. Chicago v. People, 215 Ill. 235, 74 N. E. 137. So an answer in a proceeding to compel a county auditor to issue his warrant for an allowance made by the county board to a contractor for constructing a gravel road, alleging that before demand for the warrant a resident taxpayer gave notice of his intention to appeal, and within proper time filed his affidavit and bond for appeal, which bond the auditor had approved, is insufficient in not showing that the affidavit was such as the statute requires. Matter v. Stout, 93 Ind. 19. And if the failure to levy a tax is excused on the ground that the case is within a constitutional limitation of municipal powers, but the section containing the limitation also contains an exception, the return must not only show that the case is within the limitation, but also that it is not within the exception. State v. Beyers, 41 Mo. App. 503. However, it is a sufficient return to a mandate to an officer intrusted with the drawing of warrants or payment of claims upon the public treasury for services rendered for him to state that there is no money in the treasury belonging to the fund on which the warrant is drawn or out of which payment is to be made, it not being necessary to state why such a state of things exists. *Cavanaugh v. However, the return to an alternative writ to compel a railroad company to put into operation a schedule of tariffs prescribed by the railroad commissioners which alleges positively and unequivocally that the tariffs so prescribed are unreasonable and that they do not give the company compensation for the services required to be performed by it is sufficient to tender an issue as to the reasonableness of the rates without setting up all the facts bearing on the question of reasonableness. *State v. denials in the return are insufficient in law; as for instance where they are lacking in distinctness and certainty.¹²

(v) ALLEGATION OF FACTS AS DISTINGUISHED FROM CONCLUSIONS AND EVIDENCE. The return or answer must set out the facts relied on as an excuse for non-performance so that relator may traverse them.¹³ Accordingly it is insufficient if it states conclusions of law without alleging the facts on which they are based.¹⁴ Similarly it must deny facts; a denial of a conclusion of law unaccom-rebate on a liquor tax certificate that the licensee was duly tried for a violation of the liquor tax law and discharged is insufficient, being a mere legal conclusion that the discharge was not in accordance with law); People v. Sullivan County, 56 N. Y. 249, allegation that two newspapers were "duly designated" and that the papers so designated "fairly represent the two principal political parties in said county"; People v. Goldstein, 37 N. Y. App. Div. 550, 56 N. Y. Suppl. 306 (allegations that at no time were the books in question kept away from relator, and that they were open for his inspection); People v. Flagg, 16 Barb. 503 [reversed on other grounds in 17 N. Y. 584] (holding that a return in a proceeding to compel a city treasurer to draw a warrant for the payment of the moneys due under a contract between the city and relator alleging in general terms that relator had not performed the contract in manner and form as alleged in the petition is bad); Matter of Guess, 16 Misc. 306, 38 N. Pennsylvania.—Prospect Brewing Co.'s Petition, 127 Pa. St. 523, 17 Atl. 1090 (holding that a return to a writ to compel the granting of the petition of a corporation for a brewers' wholesale license, setting forth that the averment of the petition for the license was incomplete, inaccurate, and misleading, but not showing in what respect; that the company had conducted its business in violation of law, but not showing what law; that the company was not a fit person to receive the license, but not showing a cause of disqualification within the law; and that the company did not possess a good moral character, but not averring that the officers and directors thereof were men of bad moral character, is insufficient); Com. v. Pittsburgh, 34 Pa. St. 496 (allegation that bonds were not transferred in accordance with the acts of assembly); Com. v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 6 Pa. Dist. 266. And see Com. v. Chittenden, 2 Pa. panied by a denial of the facts on which such conclusion is based is insufficient to raise an issue.¹⁵ Matters of evidence should not be alleged in the return. It is the ultimate facts on which the defense is based, and not the evidentiary facts tending to establish them, that should be alleged.¹⁶

(vi) ALLEGATIONS AND DENIALS ON INFORMATION AND BELIEF. The cases are not in accord as to whether the allegations and denials in the return or answer may be made on information and belief. In some states this may be done;¹⁷ but in other states the allegations and denials must be made positively,¹⁸ save under exceptional circumstances.¹⁹

15. McConoughey v. Jackson, 101 Cal. 265, 35 Pac. 863, 40 Am. St. Rep. 53 (holding that in a proceeding to compel the drawing of a warrant for an indebtedness to petitioner for expenses incurred by him at respondent's instance, a denial of indebtedness to petitioner without a denial of the facts in regard to the expenses incurred by him is a denial of a conclusion of law and insufficient); People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 655 (holding that if the complaint avers the rendition of a judgment against defendant by a court of competent jurisdiction, and states the character of the judgment, an answer denying that defendant became or was lawfully bound by the judgment is only a denial of a conclusion of law); Woodruff v. New York, etc., R. Co., 59 Conn. 63, 20 Atl. 17; State v. McCullough, 3 Nev. 202.

16. Cook v. Tannar, 40 Conn. 378; People v. Ransom, 2 N. Y. 490; People v. Baker, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 19; People v. Metropolitan Bd. of Police, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 257; Commercial Bank v. New York Canal Com'rs, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 25.

17. People v. Alameda County, 45 Cal. 395 (holding that the answer to a petition presented to the supreme court may deny the allegations of the petition on information and belief); State v. Cooley, 58 Minn. 514, 60 N. W. 338 (holding that denials on information and belief and affirmative allegations in the same form are sufficient); State v. Sherwood, 15 Minn. 221, 2 Am. Rep. 116 (holding that a denial of any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the matter alleged in the writ will not be stricken out as sham).

A disclaimer of knowledge of the facts alleged in the petition is sufficient to raise an issue (People v. Ryan, 17 Mich. 159, holding that respondent cannot be compelled under oath to admit or deny what he has no means of knowing with certainty), when accompanied by a denial for the purposes of the suit (Buffalo, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 120 Pa. St. 537, 14 Atl. 443).

In New York respondent may in the return to the alternative writ deny any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the matters recited in the writ (People v. Bricklayers' Benev., etc., Union, 20 N. Y. App. Div. 8, 46 N. Y. Suppl. 648); but affidavits filed in opposition to a motion for a writ are insufficient which contain allegations or denials on information and belief (People v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 168 N. Y. 187, 61 N. E. 172 [reversing 61 N. Y. App. Div. 494, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 684]; People v. Brooklyn, 77 N. Y. 503, 33 Am. Rep. 659; People v. York, 31 N. Y. App. Div. 527, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 401, 1060; People v. Fulton County, 53 Hun 254, 6 N. Y. Suppl. 591; *People v. Suppl. 852 [reversed on other grounds in 126 N. Y. 419, 27 N. E. 967]).

Form of denial.—A statement in the return to a writ to compel a city to levy a tax to pay a judgment that respondent has no knowledge of the judgment sufficient to form a belief and therefore denies the same is not sufficient, but the denial should be of any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief. State v. Madison, 15 Wis. 30.

18. Ray v. Wilson, 29 Fla. 342, 10 So. 613, 14 L. R. A. 773; State v. Sumter County Com'rs, 22 Fla. 1; Cleary v. Hoobler, 207 Ill. 97, 69 N. E. 967; People v. Crabb, 156 Ill. 155, 40 N. E. 319; State v. Trammel, 106 Mo. 510, 17 S. W. 502; State v. Williams, 96 Mo. 13, 8 S. W. 771.

Presumptive knowledge.—If respondent as an officer has presumptive knowledge of the facts he cannot allege ignorance thereof. McConoughey v. Jackson, 101 Cal. 265, 35 Pac. 863, 40 Am. St. Rep. 53; People v. Lake County, 12 Colo. 89, 19 Pac. 892; Creager v. Hooper, 83 Md. 490, 35 Atl. 159. And see Cousins v. Warren Borough School Dist., 28 Pa. Co. Ct. 381.

19. State v. Sumter County Com'rs, 22 Fla. 1 (holding that the rule requiring pleas to be sworn to does not restrict a defendant to pleading matters of defense which are within his personal knowledge); People v. York, 31 N. Y. App. Div. 527, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 1060.

The sources of information and grounds of belief must be given, else an allegation or denial on information and belief is insufficient. People v. Coler, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 492, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 964; People v. York, 31 N. Y. App. Div. 527, 52 N. Y. Suppl. 1060; Douglas v. McLean, 25 Pa. Super. Ct. 9; Cousins v. Warren Borough School Dist.,

(vii) CERTAINTY. The return or answer to the writ must be certain and specific.²⁰ This rule applies both to its affirmative allegations²¹ and to its

20. State v. Jones, 10 Iowa 65; Bailey v. Behrnt, 3 Okla. 219, 41 Pac. 575; Miller v. Hawk, 7 Lack. Leg. N. (Pa.) 125; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 33 Pittsb. Leg. J. N. S. (Pa.) 316.

The affidavits used in opposition to a motion for mandamus must likewise be specific and definite. Matter of Guess, 16 Misc. (N. Y.) 306, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 91.

Where the answer takes the place of the return it is not required to be more certain or specific than was required in the return. Legg v. Annapolis, 42 Md. 203.

Illustrations.—In proceedings to compel a judge to sign a certificate of evidence, it is insufficient to answer that the certificate presented did not contain all the evidence, but the evidence omitted should be pointed out with reasonable certainty in order that the court may shape its order to meet the emergency. People v. Horton, 46 Ill. App. 434. So a return to a writ commanding a bill of exceptions to be sealed which avers that the bill is not a true bill of exceptions and does not state the exceptions in manner and form as they were taken in the case is bad for uncertainty in not stating in what respect the exceptions are deficient. Reichenbach v. Ruddach, 121 Pa. St. 18, 15 Atl. 448. A return in proceedings to restore a member which states in general terms that he was expelled for violation of duty without specifying the charges on which he was convicted is bad. Com. v. Philadelphia, 6 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 469. So a return in proceedings to compel the restoration of a person as minister of a church should set forth with precision and certainty the rules of the church excusing compliance with the writ. Brosius v. Reuter, 1 Harr. & J. (Md.) 551, 2 Am. Dec. 534. And a return to a mandamus to restore common councilmen that they were chosen yearly and that before the coming of the writ they were chosen and continued for a year and at the end of the year were duly removed from their offices by the election of others is bad for uncertainty in failing to show the time they were elected, so that it might appear that they were not removed before the year expired. Rex v. Chester, 5 Mod. 10. In proceedings against the city controller to compel him to sign a warrant for money due under a municipal contract, an answer denying that any contract had been entered into between the city and relator as required by a certain statute should state specifically the defense relied on, if its meaning is that the contract as entered into in fact was not in accordance with the requirements of the statute. Com. v. Philadelphia, 176 Pa. St. 588, 35 Atl. 195. And in a proceeding to compel a corporation to levy a tax to pay a judgment a vague allegation in the return that it has property subject to levy is of no force where the writ sets out a return nulla bona. Cole v. East Green- wich Fire Engine Co., 12 R. I. 202. Where, in proceedings to compel a county superintendent to countersign a school-board's certificate of fitness of a candidate for a state teacher's certificate, the answer avers petitioner's disability without specifying in what respect he is deficient, sets forth that his marks on the annual examination did not entitle him to a professional certificate, and that his success and zeal as a teacher were not such as to warrant the granting of a certificate, it was deficient in particularity and certainty. Donaldson v. York County School Superintendent, 8 Pa. Dist. 185.

Return held to be sufficiently certain see Hempstead v. Underhill, 20 Ark. 337; Dement v. Rokker, 126 Ill. 174, 19 N. E. 33; State v. Elwood, 12 Wis. 551. Under the discretionary power vested in commissioners to grant or refuse a license to keep a bar-room it is not necessary in a mandamus proceeding against them for an alleged failure to perform their duty in that respect that the return should state with certainty anything more than the fact that they have made an examination, and that on such examination they believe that a license should not be granted to the petitioners, either because they are not fit persons or because a bar-room should not, as a matter of public interest, be licensed in the place proposed by the relator. If, however, the facts upon which their decision is based are stated, the rule as to certainty does not apply to them. U. S. v. Douglass, 19 D. C. 99. In a proceeding to compel the county authorities to issue bonds to a railroad company in pursuance of a vote of the people of the county, a return setting up that the majority cast at the election in favor of subscription was more than made up of illegal votes; that a majority of the legal votes was against the subscription and that the apparent majority was entirely composed of illegal and fraudulent votes cast by persons who were not entitled to vote; and that the railroad company before entering into liabilities on the faith of such vote had notice that a majority of the legal votes was against the subscription, is sufficient without going into detail and stating the reasons why the votes were illegal and fraudulent. People v. Logan County, 63 Ill. 374.

21. Chicago v. People, 215 Ill. 235, 74 N. E. 137 (holding that general statements are insufficient); Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Suffern, 129 Ill. 274, 21 N. E. 824; Chicago Bd. of Trade v. Nelson, 62 Ill. App. 541; People v. Horton, 46 Ill. App. 434 (holding that a return should not be in general terms without alleging specifically the facts relied on); *State v. A return is not evasive if its denials are as broad as the allegations of the petitions. Com. v. Dickinson, 83 Pa. St. 458. And where a petition to compel a circuit judge to make a further return on appeal alleges that petitioner took oral exceptions on the trial to the failure of the court to give certain instructions prayed for by him, a return is not evasive which states that the judge rejected the instructions, substituting his own general charge, "to which action of the court no exception was taken," and further that the bill of exceptions signed "fully and fairly states all the facts attending the trial, to the best of his knowledge, belief and remembrance." *State v. A city ordinance must be pleaded like any other fact, and its terms be specifically set out, since the courts do not take judicial notice thereof and a mere reference to it in pleading is insufficient to bring it before the court. Com. v. Chittenden, 2 Pa. Dist. 804, 13 Pa. Co. Ct. 362.

It is sufficient to plead in substance such papers as respondent relies on in his return. Copies need not be set out. People v. Ransom, 2 N. Y. 490.

Adoption of another's return.—Respondent may as part of his return adopt a return made in another cause pending in the same court by another officer proceeded against by the same petitioner for the same demand. *Rogers v. Respondent may plead as many defenses as he has,³⁶ provided that they are not inconsistent.³⁷ However, he cannot demur and plead to the merits at the same time;³⁸ nor can he plead in abatement and in bar at the same time.³⁹ However, the right to interpose a plea in abatement is not waived by demurring to the relation and moving to quash, where the fact so pleaded does not appear on the face of the relation.⁴⁰

i. Further Return.⁴¹ The practice is not uniform as to making a further return where the return as made is insufficient. It has been held that in such a case the court may allow respondent to make a further return,⁴² and that it may compel him to do so.⁴³ In other states the practice in such a case is at once to issue a peremptory writ.⁴⁴ Although the alternative writ is amended after return, yet respondent will not be allowed to make a further return if no new matter is presented by the amendment.⁴⁵ If the original return is sufficient, the filing of an additional one in the nature of a demurrer will not affect the sufficiency of the former.⁴⁶

j. Set-Off and Counter-Claim. Set-offs and counter-claims are not allowed at common law,⁴⁷ but the practice seems to be otherwise in some states.⁴⁸

5. PLEADINGS SUBSEQUENT TO RETURN—a. At Common Law. At common law before the statute of Anne and in those states where that statute was not adopted or similar statutes were not enacted, the return to an alternative writ of mandamus was conclusive. No reply or traverse was permitted and relator's only remedy was an action for damages for a false return,⁴⁹ or a criminal information for a false return,⁵⁰ and then if the return was falsified plaintiff not only recovered damages equivalent to the injury sustained, but the court awarded the peremptory writ.⁵¹

b. By Statute. But by the statute of Anne the rule was changed in England,⁵² and it was enacted that the prosecutor or relator might plead to or traverse all or any of the material facts averred in the return, defendant having liberty to reply, take issue, or demur, and it was directed that such further proceedings might be had as might have been had if the prosecutor had brought his action on the case for a false return. Thus mandamus became in effect a personal action against defendant.⁵³ In the United States in some jurisdictions this statute has Framing issues.—In Michigan the only pleadings contemplated are relator's petition and respondent's answer or return. If relator desires to controvert the facts stated in the answer, issues may be framed under the direction of the trial court, and while for the purpose of framing these issues a trial court may permit relator to file a replication (Lewis v. Detroit Bd. of Education, 139 Mich. 306, 102 N. W. 756; Wagner v. Gladwin Cir. Judge, 131 Mich. 129, 91 N. W. 155), the more common practice is to dispense with the replication altogether and to state such issues in the form of questions on the coming in of the answer). Lewis v. Detroit Bd. of Education, supra; Webster v. Wheeler, 119 Mich. 601, 78 N. W. 657, holding that the answer of respondent should not be contradicted by affidavits, but only upon issues settled as above indicated. See also Just v. Wise Tp., 47 Mich. 511, 11 N. W. 294; and the filing of a replication, under the rule, is not a matter of right, and it is improper without an issue framed by the court, it is not considered a regular pleading in the case (Wagner v. Gladwin Cir. Judge, supra).

But the return of a judge is held to be conclusive. People v. Judge Wayne Cir. Ct., 23 Mich. 536; Cummings v. Armstrong, 34 W. Va. 1, 11 S. E. 742; Douglass v. Loomis, 5 W. Va. 542.

After reply, plea, or answer to the respondent's answer or return, where the issue is reached according to general rules of pleading in actions at law, if a similiter is omitted and the case proceeds to trial it is to be treated as if formal issues had been joined. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. People, 79 Ill. App. 529 [affirmed in 179 Ill. 441, 53 N. E. 986]. There is no rejoinder where the issues are framed on the petition and answer without a replication. Lewis v. Detroit Bd. of Education, 139 Mich. 306, 102 N. W. 756; Just traversing it or replying to new matter and the peremptory writ is demanded on the alternative writ and return or answer, such return, writ, or answer is taken as true,⁵⁷ unless the issue is raised by the return and a reply or answer to the return is not necessary, which is true in some jurisdictions, the return being traversable nevertheless by proof.⁵⁸ It has been held that the relators cannot both demur and reply to the return.⁵⁹ The reply constitutes an admission that the return upon its face is a sufficient answer.⁶⁰

c. Sufficiency of Reply. Where the proceeding under the statute is at law, the petitioner should reply to the answer as in other cases at law and the filing of the ordinary replication to an answer in chancery is irregular and if taken advantage of in apt time might in a proper case be good cause for reversal.⁶¹ Issue must be taken only on material matters,⁶² and a plea which does not transverse

v. Wise Tp., 47 Mich. 511, 11 N. W. 294. And whether a statute providing that the relator shall plead to or traverse material facts stated in the return and that the respondent shall reply, take issue, etc., applies, or the rules of common-law pleading govern, the relators are not entitled to judgment because defendant failed to plead to what is termed the answer of the relators unless their last pleading tendered a new and controlling issue of fact, and if it does not do this, then under either system of pleading the cause is at issue and no other pleading by way of traverse can be made. State v. Lockett, 54 Mo. App. 202.

C. 451, holding that where the return admits a material allegation of the petition but avers new matter, the issue should be taken on the new matter and not on the admitted facts, in order to avail petitioner in falsifying the return, otherwise the new matter will be taken as true.

6. MOTIONS AND DEMURRERS⁶⁴—a. Motion to Quash or Dismiss—(i) ALTERNATIVE WRIT. After the issuance of an alternative writ it is proper in most jurisdictions to move to quash or dismiss the writ.⁶⁵ The motion is the nature of a demurrer.⁶⁶ It may be heard before the return of the writ,⁶⁷ or may be made after the return.⁶⁸ But when the motion is made after a return, defendant cannot rely upon the absence of an averment in the petition, the existence of which was admitted by the return, unless the return is withdrawn.⁶⁹ The writ cannot be quashed for any matter involving the merits,⁷⁰ nor because of a formal defect

The party cannot seek other relief in his reply to the answer to the original application. Grier v. David, 4 Quebec Pr. 373.

capable of amendment.⁷¹ The question whether mandamus is the proper remedy,⁷² including whether the relator has another legal remedy,⁷³ cannot be raised on the motion. On the other hand it has been held that the sufficiency of the affidavit or petition⁷⁴ and the question of laches⁷⁵ may be considered. On overruling the motion leave to answer should be granted.⁷⁶

(ii) RETURN OR ANSWER. In most jurisdictions a motion may be made to quash a return or answer.⁷⁷ Such a motion is proper where the answer or return contains no defense whatever,⁷⁸ or is false, frivolous, or calculated to delay the remedy.⁷⁹ In some jurisdictions, however, all formal objections to the writ must be taken by a motion to quash.⁸⁰ The motion does not reach back to defects in the writ.⁸¹

b. Motion to Strike Out Matter. In most jurisdictions where mandamus is regarded as an ordinary action at law, it seems that it is proper to move to strike out immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter in the writ⁸² or complaint.⁸³ So where a part of an answer or return is immaterial or impertinent, it may properly be expunged on motion.⁸⁴

c. Demurrers⁸⁵—(i) TO PETITION. While a demurrer to the petition or complaint is recognized as proper practice in some jurisdictions,⁸⁶ it is held in some states that where the petition is for an alternative writ the writ takes the place of a complaint and a demurrer must be to the writ rather than the petition.⁸⁷ But such a demurrer has been held proper when the issuance of an alternative writ has been waived.⁸⁸ It has been held that a demurrer to the petition cannot be extended so as to include the writ.⁸⁹

(II) TO ALTERNATIVE WRIT. While it has been held in a few cases that a demurrer does not lie to an alternative writ,⁹⁰ yet in most jurisdictions, especially where the alternative writ is considered as a complaint, a demurrer lies as if the writ was a complaint in an ordinary action at law.⁹¹ Where, by statute, the practice in mandamus proceedings is essentially the same as in ordinary actions at law, it would seem that a petition or writ is subject to demurrer upon the same grounds as is a complaint in an ordinary action at law.⁹² The objection must of course appear upon the face of the writ.⁹³ It is not a ground of demurrer that relator has mistaken his remedy,⁹⁴ nor that the verification of the complaint is insuffi-

In Indiana it is common practice to demur both to the writ and the application. In such a case the facts alleged in the verified application upon which the alternative writ rests may be, when necessary, considered in order to supplement those embraced in the writ, and the application may be considered in connection with the alternative writ to which the demurrer may have been addressed. Wampler v. State, 148 Ind. 557, 47 N. E. 1068, 38 L. R. A. 829. On a demurrer to the alternative writ, the question raised is not, as is the case in an ordinary action, whether the relator under the facts is entitled to some form of relief, but is as to whether he is entitled to the specific relief prayed for. State v. Indianapolis Union R. Co., 160 Ind. 45, 66 N. E. 163, 60 L. R. A. 831.

Certainty of allegation is requisite, but if the alternative writ states the facts on which the demand is based with sufficient precision to express the right of the relator and the duty of the respondent in such a manner that the ordinary mind may easily apprehend them, this is all the certainty required to defeat a demurrer. State v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., 48 Fla. 114, 37 So. 652.

A demurrer to the writ brings before the court the whole merits of the case as therein presented. People v. Chicago, 51 Ill. 17, 2 Am. Rep. 278.

A demurrer is practically equivalent to a motion to quash.—State v. Brewer, 39 Wash. 65, 80 Pac. 1001, 109 Am. St. Rep. 858.

Withdrawal of demurrer.—Where the question of law involved in the case is fully raised by demurrer, and must necessarily be decided before entering upon the consideration of questions of fact, a motion for leave to withdraw a demurrer and file an answer is properly overruled. State v. Fremont, etc., R. Co., 22 Nebr. 313, 35 N. W. 118.

If the relator is entitled to any relief whatever, a demurrer to the writ does not lie. Meyer v. Beaver, 9 S. D. 168, 68 N. W. 310.

cient;⁹⁵ nor is the question of laches raised by a demurrer,⁹⁶ or the failure to issue the writ in the name of the state.⁹⁷

(iii) TO RETURN OR ANSWER. In a proper case, in most of the states, a demurrer lies to the return or answer.⁹⁸ It is not necessary to demur, however, where the return is a nullity or where it does not traverse any of the facts alleged in the writ.⁹⁹ It has been held, in at least one jurisdiction, that a special demurrer will not lie;¹ while in another jurisdiction it has been held that objections to form and the like cannot be urged by a general, but only by a special, demurrer.²

(iv) TO REPLY. The reply is generally subject to demurrer, and such demurrer reaches back to and searches the prior pleadings.³

(v) GENERAL RULES. The demurrer is governed by the general rules applicable to demurrers in actions at law in general,⁴ such as that it must specifically state the grounds of demurrer,⁵ and that it operates as an admission of all well-pleaded allegations of fact in the pleading demurred to,⁶ but does not

Illustrations.—Under the rule that a demurrer admits probative facts only, and not conclusions at all, an alternative writ of mandamus to a municipal judge to issue bench warrants, reciting merely that he neglects to issue them "as required by law," does not, as is necessary, show that it is incumbent on such judge to issue bench warrants, but states merely a legal conclusion. The general statutes of amendments are applied to mandamus proceedings as to other civil remedies or actions between the parties.¹⁵ The relation,¹⁶ petition, or other pleading,¹⁷ or the application,¹⁸ or affidavit upon which the writ is sought, is amendable,¹⁹ and defects which might have been cured if objection had been made in apt time will be taken to have been cured by amend-

Verification of application.—Where an application for a writ of mandamus by a public corporation is defectively verified by one of the officers of the corporation on information and belief, an affidavit of another officer thereof, testifying positively to the essential facts alleged, may be treated as an amendment, within the meaning of the statute. Steidl v. State, 63 Nebr. 695, 88 N. W. 853. But in State v. Jefferson Police Jury, 33 La. ment.²⁰ Likewise the alternative writ²¹ and the return or answer thereto may be amended.²²

8. WAIVER OF OBJECTIONS. As in other civil proceedings,²³ objections to the pleadings in mandamus, which are not jurisdictional, may be waived by acts inconsistent with the intention to urge them, or by failure to urge them at the proper time.²⁴ The pleadings themselves, however, cannot be dispensed with by waiver,²⁵ although it has been held that a return may be waived by a stipulation that a demurrer to the petition may stand as a return,²⁶ and that where a similiter is omitted and the case proceeds to trial, it is to be treated as if formal issues had been joined and similiters filed or waived.²⁷ It seems that any defect in the substance of the alternative writ may be taken advantage of at any time before the peremptory mandamus is awarded,²⁸ but that after a return no advantage may be taken of defects in form.²⁹ Where a defendant in his return to a writ of mandamus sets forth matter in abatement, and also sets up facts in defense upon the merits, and asks judgment upon the merits, he thereby waives the plea in abatement and elects to try the cause upon the merits.³⁰

9. ISSUES, PROOF, AND VARIANCE — a. Matters to Be Proved. The relator must prove every material allegation necessary to show himself entitled to the relief sought.³¹ A specific traverse of the allegations of the alternative writ is sufficient to put them in issue under the rules of pleading applicable to proceedings in mandamus, and the relator must then produce evidence to prove such allegations.³² If issue is not joined on the allegations of the alternative writ, the opposing return, affidavit, or other pleading stands admitted.³³ In a state where a court of equity has jurisdiction of mandamus, it has been held, under the rule obtaining in equity, that the allegations of the application must be proved, although they are not denied.³⁴ Where the relator takes no issue on the respondent's allegations, but proceeds to argument, the truth of such allegations is admitted.³⁵

b. Variance. The proof in mandamus proceedings is confined to the issues as made,³⁶ and a material variance is fatal.³⁷

F. Process and Alternative Writ — 1. NOTICE IN GENERAL — a. Necessity. While notice must ordinarily be given before a peremptory writ will be granted,³⁸ the application for the order or rule to show cause, or the alternative writ in the first instance, is generally ex parte.³⁹

b. Waiver. A general appearance is a waiver of the want, or the insufficiency, of notice of the application;⁴⁰ but a party cannot waive the necessity of giving notice to a co-party.⁴¹

2. ORDER OR RULE TO SHOW CAUSE — a. Propriety and Necessity. At common law a rule was always issued as the primary step to inaugurate mandamus proceedings after the filing of a petition.⁴² Such practice is still proper in most jurisdictions,⁴³ although it is generally unnecessary,⁴⁴ and in some states it is held improper,⁴⁵ on the ground that it is useless, since the rule or order is practically the same as the alternative writ.⁴⁶

b. Refusal Where Application Defective. The court may dismiss the proceeding without granting a rule or order to show cause where the application is clearly defective.⁴⁷

c. Form and Contents. The rule or order to show cause is not a pleading in the mandamus proceedings and hence is not governed by the strict rules applicable thereto.⁴⁸ It has been held that the order to show cause need not have a teste nor be under the seal of the court,⁴⁹ and that it need not comply with the statutory requirements relating to the alternative writ.⁵⁰ Only one writ can be asked for.⁵¹

d. Service. The order to show cause or other notice of the application must be served in such a manner as to substantially give notice to all the persons to be affected by the writ.⁵² Service by publication is in some cases permissible.⁵³

answer to the rule is, in some jurisdictions, improper,⁵⁷ and will not be considered in disposing of the rule;⁵⁸ but it may be treated as a return to an alternative writ and the rule itself be considered as such a writ.⁵⁹ A motion to discharge the rule is treated as a demurrer, confining the consideration of the question to the petition.⁶⁰

g. Amendment. The rule or order is amendable in the interest of justice.⁶¹

3. ALTERNATIVE WRIT⁶²—a. Nature of Writ. As already stated,⁶³ it is now the general practice to issue an alternative writ, ex parte, on the filing of the petition, without a prior order to show cause. In most jurisdictions the alternative writ is substantially the commencement of the proceeding so far as the defendant is concerned, although in some states he may appear at an earlier stage.⁶⁴ In some jurisdictions, however, there is no alternative writ.⁶⁵ The writ is both a process and a pleading,⁶⁶ and takes the place of a summons.⁶⁷

b. When Granted. It is the usual practice to issue an alternative writ when the petition or affidavit makes a prima facie case therefor.⁶⁸ The writ will not be granted where it appears that a peremptory writ should not issue.⁶⁹

c. Time and Place of Issuance. Whether an alternative writ may issue out of court and the particular term at which application must be made depends on the local practice in the different jurisdictions.⁷⁰

d. Mode of Allowance. A rule or order for the alternative writ may be entered but it is not essential.⁷¹ The common practice is for the judge, by an indorsement on the writ or other writing thereon, to direct the clerk to issue it.⁷²

e. Form and Contents—(i) IN WHOSE NAME WRIT ISSUES. In England the writ issues in the name of the sovereign.⁷³ In this country it must be issued in the name of the state⁷⁴ or territory.⁷⁵

(ii) *TO WHOM DIRECTED.*⁷⁶ The alternative writ, like the peremptory writ,⁷⁷ should be directed to the individual or corporation on whom the duty rests of performing the act sought to be compelled,⁷⁸ and if a common duty rests upon several persons the writ should ordinarily be directed to all.⁷⁹ On the other hand, if no duty rests upon a person, the writ should not be directed to him.⁸⁰ These rules are corollary to those requiring that the person on whom the duty rests shall be made a party respondent, that all persons under a common duty shall be joined as respondents, and that persons not under duty should not ordinarily be joined; and illustrations of who are necessary or proper parties respondent in particular instances serve also for the most part to illustrate to whom in like instances the writ must or may be directed.⁸¹ The style in which respondent shall be designated in the writ is governed likewise by the rules governing the style of designating the party respondent.⁸²

(iii) SETTING OUT CAUSE OF ACTION AND COMMAND. While in some states, by statute, where the writ merely takes the place of a summons, defendant need not set out the cause of action,⁸³ in most jurisdictions it must contain a recital of the facts necessary to show the duty to act and a command either to perform the duty or show cause at a certain time and place why defendant should not perform.⁸⁴ In commanding the performance of the act, the particular act to be performed must be clearly and fully described in the writ.⁸⁵ So where the writ commands a compliance with an order of an officer or a board, the writ must show that the order was within the power of such officer or board.⁸⁶ If the writ demands more than the holder is entitled to have awarded to him, it must be set aside in its entirety.⁸⁷

(iv) PROVISIONS FOR RETURN. In most jurisdictions the writ must be made returnable to the court issuing it, and not to the judge or at chambers,⁸⁸ and in term-time rather than in vacation,⁸⁹ at such time as may be fixed by the writ.⁹⁰ In some jurisdictions the writ must be made returnable at the office of the clerk of the county designated therein.⁹¹

(v) VARIANCE BETWEEN PETITION AND WRIT. The writ must substantially agree with the relief prayed for in the petition.⁹²

f. Service—(i) IN GENERAL. The service of the alternative writ is in lieu of service of a petition and summons.⁹³ In some jurisdictions the general statutes relating to service of summons and citations are inapplicable,⁹⁴ and the manner of service is a matter within the discretion of the court.⁹⁵ The service of an insufficient writ is nugatory.⁹⁶

(ii) NECESSITY. Except defendant has actual notice,⁹⁷ a peremptory writ will not issue where an alternative writ has been granted unless it has been served or there has been a return or other appearance pursuant to the alternative writ.⁹⁸

(iii) MODE OF SERVICE. Except where otherwise provided by statute,⁹⁹ the original writ must be delivered and not a copy.¹ The service of a copy is, however, a mere irregularity.² Personal service is necessary in order to form the basis for attachment proceedings in case the writ is disobeyed.³

(iv) PERSONS TO BE SERVED. The writ must be served upon the individual or individuals who are required to perform the duty commanded.⁴

(v) TIME FOR SERVICE. The time when the service must be made before the return-day is wholly a matter of local practice.⁵

(vi) WAIVER. A return or other appearance is a waiver of the want of, or irregularity in, the service.⁶

(vii) RETURN OF SERVICE. The return should show service by indorsement on a copy of the writ, the original being delivered to defendant for his return.⁷ If erroneous, the officer may be compelled to correct his return.⁸

Where a writ is directed to a county, it is properly served upon the county clerk. This amounts to service upon defendant. Leavenworth County v. Sellev, 99 U. S. 624, 25 L. ed. 333.

Service on a domestic corporation may be made by serving an agent appointed by the company to accept service. Cross v. West Virginia Cent., etc., R. Co., 35 W. Va. 174, 12 S. E. 1071. Where the thing enjoined by the writ was the building of a bridge, service upon a mere financial officer of the company was not sufficient. State v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 42 N. J. L. 490. Where an alternative writ of mandamus issues commanding a director of a railroad company to show cause why he should not vacate said office of director then held by him and surrender the same to the petitioner, it is necessary that said writ should be served upon said director either personally or by publication. Otherwise the court cannot pass upon or determine his right. Cross v. West Virginia, etc., R. Co., 34 W. Va. 742, 12 S. E. 765.

A mandamus directed to a foreign corporation engaged in business in this state, commanding the performance of some duty growing out of that business, may be legally served upon any officer of the company in this state, upon whom lawful service could have been made, according to the ancient common law, if the corporation were domestic. State v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 42 N. J. L. 490.

g. Amendments. The writ is amendable in like manner as any other process or pleading in furtherance of justice and in the discretion of the court.⁹

h. Objections and Waiver Thereof. Defects in the form of the writ, such as the name in which it issues,¹⁰ or the individuals to whom it is directed,¹¹ are waived by the filing of an answer or other appearance without objection.

G. Evidence—1. PRESUMPTIONS. On an application for a mandamus, the general rules governing presumptions in evidence apply.¹² Thus it will be presumed that the decision of a court was on the merits,¹³ and correct;¹⁴ that the decision of a municipal board,¹⁵ or a senate committee,¹⁶ was regular; that the governor acted within his authority in removing an officer and appointing his successor;¹⁷ that public officers have exercised their power to appoint deputies and that they are in charge;¹⁸ and that a judgment debt against a corporation is one for the payment of which the corporation may levy a tax.¹⁹ It will not be presumed that facts exist warranting a removal from office.²⁰

2. BURDEN OF PROOF. On an application for a mandamus, the burden of proof is governed by the general rule that the party holding the affirmative of the issue must establish his allegations by a preponderance of the evidence.²¹ The relator

Montana.—State v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct., 26 Mont. 372, 68 Pac. 465, on mandamus to compel a trial judge to determine a motion for a new trial, the decision of which is alleged to be unnecessarily delayed, the relator has the burden of showing such unnecessary delay.

New Jersey.—Thompson v. Elmer Bd. of Education, 57 N. J. L. 628, 31 Atl. 168, on mandamus by a school-teacher to enforce a judgment for compensation, the only burden of the relator is to show the jurisdiction of the state superintendent over the matter.

New York.—People v. Knox, 78 N. Y. App. Div. 344, 79 N. Y. Suppl. 989 (the burden of proof is on the one claiming the right to have his name placed on the eligible list to explain an apparent forgery in his credentials); People v. Tieman, 8 Abb. Pr. 359 must prove himself entitled substantially to every claim and to all the redress which he seeks in his writ. If he fails to establish any substantial part of his claim, his application will be denied.²³

3. ADMISSIBILITY. Any competent evidence tending to establish, or in any way affecting, the right of the relator, and within the allegations of the petition and writ, is admissible.²³ So also evidence affecting the duty, or bearing on the discretionary power, of defendant, is admissible.²⁴ Irrelevant and immaterial evidence is inadmissible.²⁵

South Carolina.—State v. Adams, 63 S. C. 189, 41 S. E. 82, a county treasurer, resisting payment of a warrant issued upon a claim audited and approved by the county commissioners, has the burden of proof.

United States.—Moran v. Elizabeth, 9 Fed. 72, on an application for a mandamus to compel the payment of money, the claimant must show a return nulla bona as required by statute.

Where the relator has made out a prima facie case, the burden of proof is on defendant to justify his action. McGowan v. Ford, 107 Cal. 177, 40 Pac. 231.

When the matter is peculiarly within the knowledge of one party, the burden is on him to show it. State v. Clinton County, 162 Ind. 580, 68 N. E. 295, 70 N. E. 373, 984.

To justify delay.—The burden of proof is on the relator to show that delay was justified so as not to amount to laches. People v. Welde, 28 Misc. (N. Y.) 582, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 1030; People v. Scannell, 28 Misc. (N. Y.) 401, 59 N. Y. Suppl. 950.

New Jersey.—O'Donnell v. Dusman, 39 N. J. L. 677 (on a writ by a newly elected officer to compel books to be turned over to him, if there is no determination of the election board, legally proven, there may be other evidence of relator's title); In re Prickett, 20 N. J. L. 134 (on an application for a mandamus to compel a township committee to accept a bond and the oath of office from one claiming to have been elected a constable, the record of the township meeting, or a sworn copy thereof, is the only evidence of such election, and a certificate or even a sworn copy of the list, filed in the office of the county clerk, is inadmissible).

New York.—People v. Yonkers Bd. of Police Com'rs, 174 N. Y. 450, 67 N. E. 78, 95 Am. St. Rep. 596, on mandamus by one unlawfully removed from office to compel his reinstatement, evidence of acts of the relator, showing laches and acquiescence, is admissible.

Pennsylvania.—Com. v. McCauley, 3 Pa.

Co. Ct. 77, on an application for a mandamus to reinstate a student expelled from college, his punishable acts unknown when expelled, are inadmissible.

Texas.—Crumley v. McKinney, (1888) 9 S. W. 157 (on application for a mandamus to compel a clerk to issue a writ of supersedeas, the judgment and appeal-bond are both admissible in order to determine whether the appeal-bond entitles the applicant to a supersedeas); Browne v. Reese, 67 Tex. 318, 3 S. W. 292 (on application for a mandamus to compel the payment of a school-teacher by a county commissioners' court, the best evidence of the judgment of that court is either the record or a certified copy thereof).

To show motive for application for writ.—On an application for a mandamus to allow the inspection of the books of a corporation, evidence as to the financial condition of the corporation is competent and admissible. Cobb v. Lagarde, 129 Ala. 488, 30 So. 326.

Right to introduce new facts first brought into the case on application for mandamus.—Where a circuit judge is sought to be compelled by mandamus to grant a motion which he denied upon the showing of facts made before him, the case must be heard on the facts disclosed on the hearing of such motion, and not upon the new facts first brought into the case on the application for mandamus. People v. Monroe Cir. Judge, 36 Mich. 274. But see Champaign County v. Condit, 120 Ill. 301, 11 N. E. 394 [affirming 24 Ill. App. 560]; Du Page County v. Martin, 39 Ill. App. 298.

commissioner of the general land-office, it is immaterial to inquire into the motives of the commissioner of claims in rejecting a land warrant, since the former officer has no authority to revise the action of the latter.

Washington.—State v. State Bd. of Dental Examiners, 38 Wash. 325, 80 Pac. 544, on application to compel a state board of dental examiners to issue a license to the relator, the questions and answers relating to the examination are inadmissible.

United States.—U. S. r. New Orleans Bd. of Liquidation, 60 Fed. 387, 9 C. C. A. 37, on mandamus to compel the issuance of bonds, proof of a special tax to pay the claim is inadmissible.

26. See, generally, EVIDENCE.

The allowance of a claim prima facie shows its validity. State v. Fraker, 166 Mo. 130, 65 S. W. 720.

Forty-five days' delay by a judge to determine a motion for a new trial is not sufficient to show that the decision was unnecessarily delayed. State v. Second Judicial Dist. Ct., 26 Mont. 372, 68 Pac. 465.

Proof of power to create a fund is insufficient to sustain an application for a mandamus when no fund is on hand. People v. Green, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 1, 3 Thomps. & C. 90.

Election certificate conclusive.—On mandamus to compel the acceptance of the bond of one claiming to have been elected to an office, the official certificate of the canvassers is conclusive. Stokes v. Camden County, 35 N. J. L. 217; People v. Hamilton County, 75 N. Y. App. Div. 110, 77 N. Y. Suppl. 620. See also State v. Elwood, 12 Wis. 551.

On mandamus to compel the levying of a tax to pay a judgment, an affidavit showing that the judgment had been assigned by the judgment creditor to the relator is sufficient prima facie evidence of the ownership of the judgment by the relator. State v. Racine, 22 Wis. 258.

Evidence held insufficient to sustain verdict.—People v. Alton, 209 Ill. 461, 70 N. E. 640; People v. Clausen, 50 N. Y. App. Div. 286, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 993.

Who may be heard.—In mandamus cases the party interested is permitted to be heard in resisting the application. Beecher v. Anderson, 45 Mich. 543, 8 N. W. 539.

The right to open and close the argument belongs to the party showing cause. People v. Wayne County Treasurer, 8 Mich. 392.

Notice of trial is not necessary, the case not being a calendar cause. Berube v. Wheeler, 128 Mich. 32, 87 N. W. 50. But see People v. Fillmore Tp. Bd., 11 Mich. 197.

Admissions in the respondent's return may be relied on by the relator, but not any allegations in the affidavits or petition which are not admitted. People v. Pritchard, 19 Mich. 470.

Parol evidence may be received to show the reason for the refusal to issue the writ. Belcher v. Treat, 61 Me. 577.

All record evidence relied upon by either relator or respondent should be brought before the court as exhibits in the shape of certified copies, or authenticated in some way, rather than in bare recitals of its existence, with a mere reference thereto. Cronin v. Kalkaska Sup'rs, 58 Mich. 448, 25 N. W. 393.

Acquiescence of defendant.—Mandamus ought not to be awarded when there is a substantial defect in the proof of plaintiff's rights, notwithstanding the officer may manifest a willingness to obey the mandate; and especially ought it not to be done when the interests of a third person are involved. Glascock v. General Land Office Com'rs, 3 Tex. 51.

3. TIME AND PLACE.²⁹ No hearing is permissible until the return is filed and all pleadings in the matter completed.³⁰ The trial of the issues of fact must be at a term of court,³¹ in the home forum or place of litigation,³² and not at chambers.³³

4. MODE OF TRIAL. In many jurisdictions issues of fact in a mandamus proceeding are triable by jury.³⁴ Likewise a reference of particular issues or to take proof has been held proper in some states,³⁵ but a case in a federal court cannot be sent to a master as a suit in equity.³⁶ If the application is made to an appellate court, it is common practice to send issues of fact to an inferior court for trial.³⁷

5. DISCONTINUANCE. The relator has the right to discontinue the proceedings,³⁸ even where a counter-claim has been set up, the latter being unauthorized;³⁹ but a discontinuance as to a necessary party will not be allowed.⁴⁰ At common law in a suit where it is not permitted to take judgment against a part only of defendants, the taking of such judgment operates to discontinue the suit as to all other defendants.⁴¹

6. DISMISSAL. As in other civil actions, the proceeding may be dismissed in a proper case, as where the relator refuses to produce evidence,⁴² where the proceeding is prosecuted without authority,⁴³ where the petition is substantially defective,⁴⁴ when the occasion for the writ has passed,⁴⁵ or when the alternative writ is quashed or a demurrer thereto sustained.⁴⁶ But a dismissal will not be granted because the proceedings are not in the name of the state where no substantial right is affected.⁴⁷ A dismissal by a judge without jurisdiction at the time and place to hear the cause upon its merits is invalid.⁴⁸ A dismissal of the principal defendant requires a dismissal as to one against whom incidental relief is asked.⁴⁹ While the relator in mandamus cannot, as a strict matter of right, dismiss his case after final submission,⁵⁰ still the court will dismiss the proceeding where public interests are involved, and it is desirable that plaintiff's case be fully presented.⁵¹

Formal irregularities in the performance of official duties will not be considered. Cleveland v. Orange, 31 N. J. L. 131.

Matters occurring after suit was brought may be considered in determining whether the writ should be made peremptory. State v. Williams, 68 Conn. 131, 35 Atl. 24, 421, 48 L. R. A. 465.

Questions involved in the trial of a cause will not be reviewed on an application for a mandamus to compel the setting aside of an order granting a new trial. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Genesee County Cir. Judge, 89 Mich. 549, 50 N. W. 879. See also Ex p. Farquhar, 99 Ala. 375, 11 So. 913, holding that on an application for mandamus to show cause why a supersedeas granted by a judge of the circuit court should not be vacated, and a petition for rehearing dismissed, the court cannot consider the ruling on a demurrer to the petition and on the pleas and evidence in the case.

Validity of judicial proceedings.—In an application to compel continuance of proceedings which had been enjoined, the equity or propriety of the injunction will not be considered. State v. Judge Macon Orphans' Ct., 15 Ala. 740; People v. Gilmer, 10 Ill. 242.

Matters affecting the discretion of the court will often be considered. Grayson County Ct. v. Breckinridge County Ct., 8 Ky. L. Rep. 135; Osborne v. Lindow, 78 Mich. 606, 44 N. W. 414. But on an application for a writ to allow an appeal, the probability of the result will not be considered where the appeal is a matter of right. Ware v. McDonald, 62 Ala. 81.

Taking of appeal.—On an application by an assignee to compel a judge to allow an appeal, the question whether the assignor has appealed cannot be considered. State v. Judge St. Charles Parish Ct., 28 La. Ann. 900.

Genuineness of warrants.—In a mandamus proceeding to compel a public officer to receive warrants in payment of a debt, the issue of the genuineness of the warrants may be passed upon. State v. Pilsbury, 29 La. Ann. 787.

Motives of judge.—So long as the trial judge is permitted to sit in the case and is not required to vacate the bench in accordance with the statute, the court, on petition for mandamus to compel him to enter judgment in a cause, will not consider his private motives, nor his estimate of counsel in the case. Alexander v. Moss, 89 S. W. 118, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 171.

Ability to execute writ.—Whether the court has power to execute a writ of mandamus will not be considered in determining whether the applicant is entitled to the writ. People v. Morton, 24 N. Y. App. Div. 563, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 760.

Where relator has been removed from office, the question whether he was guilty of the charges on which he was removed will not be considered. State v. Barrett, 22 Ohio Cir. Ct. 104, 12 Ohio Cir. Dec. 231.

The validity of the original cause of action will not be considered in a mandamus proceeding to enforce a judgment. Sherman v. Langham, 92 Tex. 13, 40 S. W. 140, 42 S. W. 961; Harkness v. Hutcherson, 90 Tex. 383, 38 S. W. 1120.

As determined by scope of record.—Generally the whole record in a mandamus proceeding will be examined and considered. Le Grange County v. Cutler, 7 Ind. 6. But omissions in the alternative writ cannot be supplied by the affidavit or application on which it was allowed. People v. Sullivan County, 56 N. Y. 249; McKenzie v. Ruth, 22 Ohio St. 371. The supreme court will look only at the petition and return and not at the record in the lower courts. Schollenberger v. Forty-Five Foreign Ins. Co's, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,475a, 5 Wkly. Notes Cas. 366. Where a judge or other officer has denied an application, the hearing must be on the same papers as those on which the application was denied.

b. Constitutionality or Validity of Statute. As a general rule the court will consider and determine the validity of a statute upon which depends the right of the relator or the duty of respondent.⁵³

c. Right or Title to Office or Employment. Only the prima facie right to office will be investigated in mandamus proceedings and not the relator's title or eligibility.⁵⁴

d. Regularity of Official Action. Generally the court will not investigate the facts upon which a certificate, return, report, allowance of claim, or like official action was made or resulted.⁵⁵

e. Right or Title to Property. When the title to property is questioned only collaterally it will not be considered or tried.⁵⁶ However, it has been held that if the title of third persons is disclosed by the relator's own showing the writ will be denied.⁵⁷

f. Rights of Third Persons. The rights of third persons who are not parties to the proceeding will not be determined, but the court will limit its determination to the rights of the parties.⁵⁸

8. QUESTIONS FOR JURY. Where issues are submitted to the jury they should be confined to material ones.⁵⁹ As in other actions, questions of law are for the court and questions of fact are for the jury,⁶⁰ and where the evidence is conflicting the question is one for the jury.⁶¹ Where the return or answer puts in issue no material facts there is no question for the jury and the court may hear and determine the case on the questions of law alone.⁶²

9. VERDICT AND FINDINGS. Where the trial is by the court and a judgment is necessary it must, in some states, be supported by proper findings of fact and conclusions of law.⁶³ Where issues of fact are tried by a jury the judge presiding at the trial may direct a verdict,⁶⁴ but he cannot order a nonsuit.⁶⁵ Where a verdict is not directed the jury may render a general or a special verdict;⁶⁶ and a general verdict is proper, although several special issues are submitted to the jury.⁶⁷ A verdict of the jury upon any question of fact submitted to them is binding upon the court.⁶⁸

10. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS. The court has the power to stay proceedings pendente lite as in other cases,⁶⁹ but after the court has awarded a peremptory mandamus there is no power to stay the proceedings.⁷⁰

I. New Trials and Rehearings. The rules in regard to new trials and rehearings in mandamus proceedings are practically the same as those applicable to ordinary actions at law.⁷¹ A rehearing in an appellate court which has granted or denied the writ is governed by the practice relating to new trials in the lower court,⁷²

and in cases referred to the lower court by the appellate court a motion for a new trial must be made in the appellate court.⁷³

J. Judgment — 1. IN GENERAL — a. Distinguished From Final Writ. The judgment in mandamus proceedings is distinct from the final or peremptory writ which is issued in pursuance of the judgment for the relator. The writ recites the facts showing why it should issue, the judgment directing it, the command of the acts to be performed, and a provision for return. The judgment shows the determination of the court on the merits, directs or denies the writ, and awards the damages and costs, if any.⁷⁴

b. Necessity — (i) IN GENERAL. At common law the peremptory writ was regarded as the final determination of the rights of the parties, and no formal judgment seems to have been required upon which to base the writ.⁷⁵ This practice is held applicable in some states to peremptory writs issued by a judge as such;⁷⁶ but, when the proceedings are before the court, statutes generally have made a material change in the common-law practice, and before the peremptory writ can properly issue, a formal judgment must be entered as a basis therefor.⁷⁷

(ii) NECESSITY OF FINDING FACTS. In some states it is necessary, to support a judgment in mandamus, that the court should find the facts upon which the judgment is founded.⁷⁸ In other states a finding of facts is unnecessary.⁷⁹

c. Form and Contents.⁸⁰ The order or judgment directing issuance of the writ should specifically state the act to be performed, but it seems that a failure to do so is not fatal when the prayer of the petition is clear and specific.⁸¹ The methods to be employed in performing the required act may be stated in general terms.⁸² A judgment directing a levy to raise money should state the amount, which should not be more than required.⁸³ If the act to be performed is one required by statute, the judgment should follow the language of the statute.⁸⁴ The proper order for a peremptory writ after an alternative is "let the writ be made peremptory," or "peremptory writ refused."⁸⁵ Any technical error in the final order may be modified so as to read correctly.⁸⁶

d. Judgment by Default, Pro Confesso, and Nil Dicit. In some jurisdictions if defendant fails to answer, or the answer to the petition is quashed, the allegations of the petition are not authorized to be taken pro confesso; nor is the judge authorized to enter judgment as by default for want of answer, or by nil dicit. The case must be heard ex parte, and the mind of the judge satisfied as to the law and the facts, before the writ can be ordered.⁸⁷

e. Judgment Non Obstante Veredicto. It has been held that a judgment non obstante veredicto cannot be properly entered in the course of a mandamus proceeding.⁸⁸

f. Separate Judgments Against Different Parties. In accordance with the common-law rule two separate judgments cannot be had in mandamus proceedings,⁸⁹ and when there is a joinder of petitioners the judgment must be for all of them or for none of them.⁹⁰

g. Rendition and Entry of Judgment. As a general rule a judgment in mandamus proceedings, like others, must be rendered in term-time, and by the court, not a judge.⁹¹ Where a writ is issued without any order of court having been entered upon the journal record of the clerk, the entry of the order may be made nunc pro tunc.⁹²

2. SCOPE AND EXTENT OF RELIEF.⁹³ The relief to be granted is measured and limited by the extent of the specific duties of respondent, and the command must not exceed such duties.⁹⁴ No relief can be granted as against the interests of any person who is not a party to the proceeding;⁹⁵ and as a rule relief will not be granted in favor of interested third persons.⁹⁶ Where the relator institutes the proceeding in a private capacity, and, although the state is a formal party, the public is in no way interested, no relief will be granted beyond that to which relator himself is entitled;⁹⁷ but where the public interests are concerned, relief to which relator is not entitled may be granted to the state as the real party in interest.⁹⁸

3. DAMAGES. By statute in many jurisdictions the relator is entitled to recover damages, where he is adjudged entitled to the relief sought, to be assessed upon equitable principles of compensation.⁹⁹ Such a statute does not contemplate an

However, in a proceeding instituted by the attorney-general, on the relation of a shipper to compel an express company to receive goods for transportation without requiring the consignor to pay the stamp duty, the relief should not be limited to the parties to the record, but may run against the express company for the protection of all shippers within the state, where it definitely appears that the requirement complained of is the uniform practice of the company. *Atty-Gen. v. Unless the main relief sought is obtained the relator is not entitled to damages. Brown v. Worthen, 63 Kan. 883, 65 Pac. 255; Tucker v. Ireddell County, 46 N. C. 451.

If no issue of fact is raised upon the return, but the relator demurs thereto, and the award of damages against the state, in whose name alone the writ of mandamus can be prosecuted;¹ nor against a court or judge,² in the absence of wilful disregard of duty.³ When those to whom the writ must issue are not those against whom the right of action for damages exists, as in the case of successors in office, the relator cannot recover damages in the mandamus proceeding.⁴

4. ESTOPPEL BY JUDGMENT—*a. In General.*⁵ It is well settled that a final judgment rendered upon the merits of an application for a peremptory writ of mandamus comes within the principle of res judicata, and is a bar to another application for the same writ by the same party under the same circumstances.⁶

return is found insufficient in law, there can be no foundation for an action for a false return, and the relator is therefore not entitled to an assessment of damages. State v. Ryan, 2 Mo. App. 303.

New York—Where peremptory writ issued in first instance.—Code Civ. Proc. § 2088, providing for an award of the relator's damages in a mandamus proceeding, applies where a final order for a peremptory writ has been obtained in the first instance, without the issuance of an alternative writ, provided the relator elects at the time of entering such final order to have his damages awarded in the proceeding. People v. Wappingers Falls, 151 N. Y. 386, 45 N. E. 852 [reversing 91 Hun 517, 37 N. Y. Suppl. 1148 (affirming 13 Misc. 732, 35 N. Y. Suppl. 213)].

Where award of writ impracticable.—Where parties institute an action in mandamus against a city to compel the awarding of a contract to them, but during the time the case is delayed in the court the contract is awarded to other parties, and fully performed, and paid for before the case is decided in their favor, the issuing of the peremptory writ of mandamus having then become impracticable, such parties are entitled to have their damages for failure to have the contract awarded to them determined in such mandamus suit. State v. Newark, 19 Ohio Cir. Ct. 5, 10 Ohio Cir. Dec. 440 [reversing 8 Ohio S. & C. Pl. Dec. 121, 5 Ohio N. P. 283].

Counsel fees.—Damages do not include counsel fees or other trial expenses, being limited by statute to those recoverable in an action for a false return. People v. New York Cent., etc., R. Co., 102 N. Y. Suppl. 385.

A petitioner illegally removed from office is, on reinstatement by mandamus, entitled only to nominal damages, since, on restoration to the office, he becomes entitled to the accrued emoluments during the entire period of his attempted removal, if found to have been able and willing to perform its duties. Hill v. Fitzgerald, (Mass. 1907) 79 N. E. 825.

Submission of question to jury.—The court has the right to submit the question of damages to the jury. Hollister v. Donahoe, 16 S. D. 206, 92 N. W. 12.

4. People v. Morton, 24 N. Y. App. Div. 563, 49 N. Y. Suppl. 760.

Under the New York statute it was held that in mandamus proceedings against supervisors commanding them to audit the damages assessed for taking the relator's land for a highway, if the return be adjudged insufficient, the proper judgment is, the award of a peremptory mandamus, with damages against defendants, personally, for interest on the relator's damages; the town being liable only for the damages actually assessed, with expenses, etc. People v. Richmond County, 28 N. Y. 112. In People v. Musical Mut. Protection Union, 118 N. Y. 101, 109, 23 N. E. 129 [citing Code Civ. Proc. § 2088], it is said: "It is contended that the court erred in awarding any damages to the relator and in the amount so awarded. The statute provides that where return has been made to an alternative writ issued upon the relation of a private person, the court, upon making a final order for a peremptory mandamus must, if the relator so elects, award to him, against the defendant, the same damages which the relator might recover in an action against the defendant for a false return."

Denial of writ conclusive.—When a mandamus is refused on grounds that are conclusive against the right of plaintiff to recover in any action whatever, the judgment is conclusive of that fact. State v. Hard, 25 Minn. 460; Louis v. Brown Tp., 109 U. S. 162, 3 S. Ct. 92, 27 L. ed. 892.

Judgment conclusive in supreme court except on appeal.—Where a superior court has adjudicated the merits of an application for mandamus, such an adjudication is as conclusive, except on appeal, upon the supreme court as it is upon another superior court. Santa Cruz Gap Turnpike Joint Stock Co. v. Santa Clara County, 62 Cal. 40.

A party having the right to plead and recover damages in mandamus proceedings cannot, after having prosecuted to final judgment an action for mandamus, institute a second action to recover damages. Achey v. Creech, 21 Wash. 319, 58 Pac. 208.

upon all issues which were litigated or which might have been litigated in the proceedings upon the application.⁷

b. Persons Concluded⁸—(i) IN GENERAL. In accordance with the general rule a judgment in mandamus proceedings operates as an estoppel only as to parties to the action and their privies.⁹ A judgment will sometimes, however, operate as an estoppel and a former adjudication against persons who were not named in the proceeding and who were not parties to the record by name, if they were represented in the action or entitled to be heard.¹⁰

(ii) OFFICERS. By the weight of authority a judgment in mandamus ordering a performance of an official duty against an officer may properly be directed to such officer and his successor in office, and will bind such successor,¹¹ although there are decisions to the contrary.¹²

(iii) STATE. A state is not bound by a judgment in mandamus instituted on the relation of citizens to compel the county clerk to keep his office at the county-seat, where the state, in the exercise of its sovereign power, on the relation of the county attorney, attempts to compel obedience to its laws in reference to the same matter.¹³

c. Successive Writs and Proceedings. Subject to the rule above stated that the judgment in mandamus operates as an estoppel or adjudication,¹⁴ a second proceeding in mandamus may be brought, when the writ is refused in the first proceeding, by a decision not made on the merits.¹⁵ So also the rule of res judicata cannot be invoked in a second action unless the claim or demand,¹⁶ and the parties,¹⁷ are the same. Where an application for a mandamus fails, because there was no demand and refusal, it cannot as a general rule be renewed after a demand.¹⁸

Rule applicable to public officers.—The rule against making a second application on fresh materials, without new facts, after a first application has failed, applies to public officers as well as individuals. Reg. v. Pickles, 3 Q. B. 599, 43 E. C. L. 884.

K. Peremptory Writ¹⁹—1. NOTICE OF APPLICATION. Except where otherwise provided by statute or rule of court,²⁰ notice is necessary before a peremptory writ can be issued.²¹

2. NECESSITY FOR ALTERNATIVE WRIT. Except where the alternative writ is abolished by statute,²² no peremptory writ of mandamus can ordinarily be granted before the issuance of an alternative writ.²³ Especially is this true where material facts alleged in the petition are controverted by the return or answer.²⁴ In other words the petition and order to show cause cannot be substituted in lieu of the alternative writ,²⁵ except by consent of the parties and of the court.²⁶ In many jurisdictions, however, a peremptory writ may be granted in the first instance after notice where there are no disputed questions of fact and a clear case is presented.²⁷

overruling of a demurrer where no answer is afterward interposed.³⁰ But while failure to make a return admits the facts alleged in the petition, it does not admit their legal sufficiency.³¹

4. ISSUANCE ON THE PLEADINGS. It is common practice for relator to move for a peremptory writ on the return, or on the papers equivalent to the return, instead of pleading or joining issue on the return, or going to trial. Such a motion operates as a demurrer to the return or other defensive matter, so as to admit the truth of all matters sufficiently pleaded therein.³² But matter not well pleaded in the return or answer, such as conclusions of law, will not be taken as admitted.³³ Of course, undisputed allegations of fact in the petition, that are undisputed in the answer, will be taken as true, but not mere conclusions of law in the petition, although not disputed.³⁴ On the motion, an order to quash or strike out parts of the return may be made.³⁵ Affidavits and other proof not served upon defendants with the order to show cause cannot be read or considered.³⁶ The denial of a motion for a peremptory writ merely defers the question of its issuance until a trial on the merits.³⁷

5. SCOPE AND EXTENT OF RELIEF — a. In General. Only one writ can be granted on an order to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue,³⁸ and the writ should not command the allowance of inconsistent remedies.³⁹ A peremptory writ must strictly conform to the order of the court upon which it issues.⁴⁰

b. Conformity to Petition. Generally the relator will not be granted greater relief than that which is asked for in his petition,⁴¹ but such relief as is fairly within the prayer will be granted, although not specifically prayed for.⁴² So a demand for excessive relief does not preclude the granting of the relief to which the relator is entitled under the facts stated.⁴³ Ordinarily, however, the writ is properly refused where the petitioner fails to establish a right substantially as extensive as is claimed,⁴⁴ although in some cases a prayer for relief, in so far as it seeks unauthorized relief, has been treated as surplusage.⁴⁵

c. Conformity to Alternative Writ. The earlier doctrine that the peremptory writ must strictly follow the alternative one is followed in many cases.⁴⁶ There are cases, however, holding that a substantial agreement is sufficient, especially as to matters of detail;⁴⁷ and in some jurisdictions the rule has been relaxed so as to allow the peremptory writ to be in any form consistent with the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issues,⁴⁸ and to permit the peremptory writ to command the performance of only part of the acts referred to in the alternative writ, where the acts are independent of each other.⁴⁹

38. State v. Beloit, 20 Wis. 79, holding, however, that the rule is otherwise where the relator proceeds by an alternative writ, and also that if a rule is entered against several parties against whom several writs would be required, the court may grant the writ as to one and deny it as to the others.

6. FORM AND CONTENTS — a. In General. The writ must be issued under the seal of the court, tested in the name of the judge, signed by the clerk, and returnable at some future day.⁵⁰ It must not only show the obligation of defendant to perform the act but also his omission to perform.⁵¹ But the writ need not recite a right existing independently thereof by statute and by virtue of the police powers of a municipality.⁵² The duty required to be performed must be clearly, distinctly, and specifically stated in the mandatory clause of the writ,⁵³ and not be in the alternative.⁵⁴ The rights of defendant should be expressly guarded.⁵⁵

b. To Whom Directed.⁵⁶ As in the case of the alternative writ,⁵⁷ the peremptory writ must be directed to the person or corporation on whom the duty rests of performing the act sought to be enforced,⁵⁸ and in case a common duty rests on several, it should be directed to all.⁵⁹ On the other hand, the writ cannot be directed to one on whom the duty of performance does not rest.⁶⁰ These rules are corollary to those which determine who are necessary or proper parties respondent, and cases supporting and illustrating the one set of rules may, subject to some exceptions, serve to support and illustrate the other.⁶¹ The style by which a person to whom a writ is directed should be designated in the writ is likewise governed by the rules as to the designation of respondents generally.⁶² The peremptory writ must, as a rule, follow the alternative writ in regard to the persons to whom it is directed.⁶³ If the writ is to compel the performance of an act by an official, it should be directed to him as such official.⁶⁴ The cases are not in accord as to whether, in mandamus proceedings against an officer, the writ may be directed to his successors in office. It has been held that where respondent is still in office when the writ issues, it cannot be directed to his successors generally as well as to him.⁶⁵ The judgment is binding on the respondent's successors in office,⁶⁶ although it may be directed to one who succeeds the officer pendente lite.⁶⁷

which the return should be made.⁶⁸ If more than one person is to be served, the original writ should be delivered to one of defendants, and copies should be given to each of the others.⁶⁹ Service should generally be made on each person commanded to act,⁷⁰ in the absence of a statute to the contrary.⁷¹ It has been held that the writ may be served by any person.⁷² Defects in the mode of serving the writ are waived by an appearance and making a return.⁷³

8. RETURN. Strictly speaking, there is no return to a peremptory writ.⁷⁴ It is to be obeyed and a certificate is made of what has been done.⁷⁵ However, a return, or a certificate in the nature thereof, must generally be made under penalty of an attachment.⁷⁶ The return differs from the return to an alternative writ in that it should contain merely a certificate of compliance, unless something impossible or unlawful is commanded, or such a change of conditions has taken place as to make compliance improper, in which case the facts should be stated.⁷⁷

9. QUASHING OR SETTING ASIDE. If the writ is defective in substance it may be quashed.⁷⁸ It may be quashed for any reason going to its validity, such as that it clearly changes or enlarges in a material matter the terms of the first writ,⁷⁹ or does not conform to the order of the court upon which it issued,⁸⁰ or because the relator is no longer entitled to the performance sought.⁸¹ However, it will not be quashed when served after the duty is completed for the time being, but the time for the return will be extended.⁸² Where defendant has had an opportunity to be heard upon the rule to show cause, or otherwise, the writ will not be quashed because of the failure to issue an alternative writ.⁸³

10. AMENDMENT. Under the modern rule as to the liberal allowance of amendments of legal proceedings, the writ may, in the discretion of the court, be amended either to conform to the alternative writ or to the facts proved.⁸⁴

11. ALIAS WRIT. When the writ is not obeyed, a second writ is sometimes issued instead of at once proceeding by attachment.⁸⁵

12. OPERATION AND EFFECT. The writ may of itself, where awarded against a court or judge, operate as a stay of the judicial proceedings.⁸⁶ When it is used to place a person in possession of an office, it confers no right, but merely gives him possession to enable him to assert his right, which in some cases he could not otherwise do.⁸⁷ A writ to compel payment of judgments is not void because the judgments are void.⁸⁸

L. Enforcement, Performance, and Violation — 1. NECESSITY FOR OBEDIENCE. Implicit obedience to the command of the writ is required;¹ the judgment and writ being regular on their face and the relief granted being within the jurisdiction of the court, the respondent has no alternative but to obey, and his disobedience will be a contempt of court.²

2. SUFFICIENCY OF PERFORMANCE AND EFFECT OF VIOLATION — a. In General. Any disobedience of a command of the writ whether intentional or otherwise,³ although if the respondent's conduct is not contumacious the fact may operate on the court upon the question of punishment,⁴ will constitute a violation of the writ and put the respondent in contempt of court,⁵ unless of course he has a legally

After removal of cause to federal court.—A party cannot be attached for contempt in refusing to obey a writ of mandamus issued by the supreme court of the state, where the cause in which it issued has been removed by writ of error to the supreme court of the United States, until that court, by some action of its own, has returned the case to the state court. Frazee v. Cardozo, 6 S. C. 315. See also New York, etc., R. Co. v. Woodruff, 42 Fed. 468, holding that where the state court refuses to permit a removal to the federal court, on a writ of error from the supreme court of the United States, a federal circuit court will not enjoin the enforcement of the peremptory writ, the same questions being involved on the writ of error, and therefore the injunction is unnecessary.

Order modified on appeal.—Although pending an appeal the order cannot be enforced, and modifications are made in it by the appellate court, such modified order remains in force and obedience is not excluded, but the order to the extent of the affirmance has the added sanction of the appellate court. People v. Rice, 144 N. Y. 249, 39 N. E. 88 [affirming 80 Hun 437, 30 N. Y. Suppl. 457].

The failure to fully perform is not contumacious where the officers have acted in good faith and in the exercise of their best judgment in attempting to reach the result ordered by the writ. State v. Memphis, 2 Tenn. Cas. 185. And where the statute is changed under which the writ commanded a duty to be performed, and defendant in good faith and according to his best judgment as to the effect of the change ceased to comply with the writ, it was held that he could not be punished by attachment for contempt even if his judgment was wrong, but that a new application by mandamus was proper. *State v. valid excuse for his failure. Decisions relating to this phase of the question are considered in a subsequent section.⁶

b. Substantial Compliance. However, the respondent will not be punished for contempt if there has been a substantial compliance, and a literal obedience is not required where the respondent's conduct is not contumacious.⁷ Of course if all that the writ orders has been done in obedience to it nothing more can be required;⁸ and the general command to proceed to perform an official duty does not require action in excess of the duty which the law would otherwise impose on the respondent in respect to the particular subject-matter, nor does it preclude his acting with such discretion and judgment as it would otherwise have been his right or duty to employ.⁹

c. Continuing Duties and Cases Arising Upon New Facts. When the duties, the performance of which is commanded, are continuing, it is not a compliance with the writ to perform a part of such duties.¹⁰ But after full compliance with

Y.) 95, it was held that where the order requiring a board of auditors to show cause why mandamus should not be granted to compel them to allow a claim was made after the adjournment of the board, such adjournment will prevent the enforcement of a peremptory writ, but the writ might issue to be enforced at the board's next lawful meeting.

the commands of the writ a subsequent and similar act does not constitute a violation of the writ.¹¹

3. EXCUSE OR JUSTIFICATION FOR DISOBEDIENCE — a. In General. Respondent cannot avoid punishment for refusing to obey the mandate of a writ of mandamus in the absence of a just excuse for his course.¹² An agreement between the parties by which the operation of the writ is arrested after its service constitutes a valid excuse for non-compliance.¹³

b. Conclusiveness of Judgment and Peremptory Writ. The rule of res judicata applies to the judgment for a peremptory writ of mandamus, and all questions raised or which could have been raised in opposition to granting the writ are concluded by the issue of the writ and cannot be raised again in resisting obedience or in justification of disobedience.¹⁴

c. Impediments to and Impossibility of Performance — (1) IN GENERAL. Inability to perform, if respondent himself is not at fault and his own conduct has not caused the inability, may be a sufficient excuse.¹⁵ But the officer should not be allowed to escape his duty or obligation because of a failure to do that precedent act which would have insured the ultimate performance of the whole duty, at the time provided by law,¹⁶ and if the excuse set up is impossibility to perform, which, however, is merely a condition which the respondent has brought about by its own previous disobedience of the command of the legislature, it will not avail as he cannot thus take advantage of his own wrong.¹⁷

(II) INJUNCTION. Courts will not ordinarily compel officers to put themselves in positive conflict with a writ or order of another court and will not interfere by mandamus with the obedience of an injunction issued by a court of competent jurisdiction,¹⁸ and it has been held that obedience to such an injunction will be a sufficient protection if the directions of the subsequent writ of mandamus are not obeyed in violation of the injunction.¹⁹ But an injunction restraining defendant from performing the command of a peremptory writ of mandamus will be no excuse for non-compliance with such writ;²⁰ and state courts have no power to interfere by injunction, either before or after the writ of mandamus issues, with the performance of the mandate of a writ of mandamus issuing out of a federal court for the enforcement of its judgment, and such injunction will afford no excuse for disobedience of the mandamus.²¹

(III) ORDER VOID FOR WANT OF JURISDICTION—(A) In General. If the command of the writ is in whole or in part beyond the power of the court, the writ or so much thereof as is in excess of jurisdiction is void, and the court has no right in law to punish for any contempt of the unauthorized requirements.²² But while jurisdiction of the subject-matter cannot be conferred by consent, a question relating to the authority of a branch of the court to make the particular order may be effectually raised,²³ and the question of the jurisdiction of the supreme court is necessarily determined in issuing a peremptory writ and cannot be raised thereafter in resisting performance.²⁴

(B) Acts Beyond Lawful Authority of Respondent. If the impossibility to perform relates to inability to do the acts commanded because they are beyond the lawful authority of the respondent, the command is nugatory and the respondent cannot be attacked for disobeying the mandate.²⁵

4. WHO MUST OBEY AND PERSONS PUNISHABLE FOR DISOBEDIENCE—a. In General. Except as to the duty of performance which may devolve upon a successor in office,²⁶ only those to whom the writ is directed and on whom it is served can be punished for contempt in failing to obey its mandate.²⁷ And while the writ is directed to persons in an official capacity, or by official name, if the command is disobeyed the officers are individually liable to attachment or other process for contempt, which should be brought against them individually.²⁸

Ct. 846, 27 L. ed. 820, it was held that the relator was not a party to the suit in which the injunction was obtained and, consequently, was not bound by it; and it was also held that having established her right to the tax by the judgment of the circuit court in a suit to which the town in its corporate capacity was a party, she may use the power of that court to command the assessment and collection of the tax as a means of carrying the judgment rendered in her favor into execution, notwithstanding what the taxpayers may have caused to be done in some proceeding to which the relator was not a party.

b. Where Duty Devolves on More Than One. Where the command of the writ requires the performance of acts by more than one, as in the case of boards and other municipal bodies, those who refuse to obey will be amenable to contempt process;²⁹ but there is no disobedience such as to bring into contempt the others who are willing to obey and whose hands are tied by the delinquency of their associates.³⁰

c. After Expiration of Term or Change in Officers. When the personnel of a board or other municipal body changes, and such change works no abatement of the proceedings pending,³¹ if the act required to be done is one pertaining to the body in its official capacity those succeeding must comply in the same manner as their predecessors.³² And so where the writ is regarded as directed to the officer in his official capacity purely, it is held to bind the encumbent of the office whoever he may be.³³ When an officer resigns and ceases to have the power to do the acts commanded by the writ, he cannot by contempt process be compelled to do that which he is without power to do, but he may be punished for his refusal to do the act before he became divested of official character;³⁴ but where an officer continues, under the law, to hold his office until his successor is elected and qualified, his resignation is no excuse for his failure to perform before his successor is so elected and qualified.³⁵

5. PROCEEDINGS FOR ENFORCEMENT AND PUNISHMENT — a. In General. The court entertaining the proceeding for a mandamus has jurisdiction not only to command the performance of the duties, but to enforce the command by subsequent proceedings and orders to that end.³⁶ Thus it has been held that an alias writ of mandamus may issue when the first order has not been complied with,³⁷ and if the writ has been disobeyed contumaciously, further steps may be taken to compel obedience and in addition the delinquent parties may be punished for contempt.³⁸

b. Contempt Proceedings to Punish or Coerce — (i) IN GENERAL. Except as the practice may be modified by statute, the proceeding for the enforcement of the writ and punishment for its disobedience is by attachment for contempt,³⁹ as in other contempt cases, and governed by general rules applicable to such proceedings.⁴⁰ The proceeding and attachment should run against the officer in his individual name and not against the office.⁴¹

(ii) FINE AND COMMITMENT. The violation of or refusal to obey a peremptory writ of mandamus is a contempt of court, ordinarily punishable as such,⁴² as in other contempt proceedings⁴³ by fine or imprisonment, or both,⁴⁴ and the court corporations are evaded, disobeyed, or cannot be executed, such court has the power to appoint its marshal to execute the writs. These cases, however, are said to rest entirely upon the statute in Iowa permitting the practice. Ress v. Watertown, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 107, 22 L. ed. 72. See also Thompson v. Allen County, 115 U. Affidavit.—Proceeding for the punishment of a contempt in failing to obey the writ may be had on an affidavit sworn to before any officer authorized to administer an oath. McAleese v. State, 42 Nebr. 886, 61 N. W. 88.

Service of a rule to show cause why a party should not be attached for contempt in not obeying a writ of peremptory mandamus, must be proved to have been made upon the party before the rule will be made absolute. State v. Rahway, 53 N. J. L. 156, 20 Atl. 966.

A false return is not conclusive in such a proceeding to protect the respondent. State v. Crites, 48 Ohio St. 460, 28 N. E. 178.

Filing a sufficient answer, although it be false, will prevent the issue of an attachment for contempt. Gilberton School Dist. v. Mahanoy Tp. School Dist., 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 38; Cavanaugh v. Cass School Dist., 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 35.

Attachment for contempt is premature until the writ of mandamus is awarded and disobeyed. Gilberton School Dist. v. Mahanoy Tp. School Dist., 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 38. But it has been held that the issue and service of the writ is immaterial where defendant had knowledge of the order for the writ, but failed to obey the same. People v. Rice, 144 N. Y. 249, 39 N. E. 88 [affirming 80 Hun 437, 30 N. Y. Suppl. 457].

Hearing at chambers.—A judge at chambers cannot without express authority conferred by law punish for a contempt not committed in his presence, and statutes conferring such authority generally do not apply to mandamus directed to a public officer when a special statute covering the particular case provides that the punishment must be fixed by the court in lieu of and as a bar to any penalty that might have been incurred by the failure of the officer to perform the duty which the writ enjoins. In re Price, 40 Kan. 156, 19 Pac. 751 [following State v. Stevens, 40 Kan. 113, 19 Pac. 365], construing Civ. Code, § 699.

An appeal from an order attaching a party guilty of contempt does not bring up the validity of the order for the writ. People v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 76 N. Y. 294. See also State v. Stevens, 40 Kan. 113, 19 Pac. 365. And where the explanation offered to relieve the respondent's conduct of its apparent contumaciousness is a question of fact the determination of the trial court will not be disturbed unless clearly wrong. *McAleese v. Special leave to appeal from a judgment of the court of appeal for Ontario, under 60 & 61 Vict. c. 34, § 1, par. Course of appeal.—The appeal to the supreme court of Canada in cases of mandamus under 38 Vict. c. 11, § 23, is restricted by the application of section 11 to decisions of "the highest court of final resort" in the province, and hence an appeal will not lie from any court in the province of Quebec but the court of queen's bench. Danjou v. Marquis, 3 Can. Sup. Ct. 251, holding that an appeal will not lie to the supreme court from the court of review. St. 54 & 55 Vict. c. 25, does not authorize an appeal to the supreme court of Canada from a decision of the court of review in a case where the judgment of the superior court is reversed and there is an appeal to the court of queen's bench. Illustrations.—An order for a mandamus to compel the sheriff to accept a bond for the trial of the right of property levied on under attachment is not such a judgment, sentence, or decree as will support a writ of error sued out by plaintiff in the attachment suit. Braley v. Clarke, 18 Ala. 436. Where an order quashing a return to a writ of alternative mandamus and directing a peremptory mandamus is reversed by a higher court with liberty to the relator to demur or to take issue on the allegations of the return, the order of the higher court is not appealable, as it is not a final order and does not affect a substantial right and is a matter of discretion. People v. Clyde, 69 N. Y. 603.

Overruling demurrer.—Even if it is competent to demur to a petition for mandamus, if a demurrer is made and overruled the cause is not reviewable on certiorari until a final order is made. Lauzon v. Chippewa County, 129 Mich. 269, 88 N. W. 628.

An order setting aside a referee's report upon an application for a mandamus is awarding⁵⁹ or refusing⁶⁰ a peremptory mandamus is final and subject to review. But an order granting⁶¹ or refusing⁶² an alternative writ of mandamus is not reviewable, for it is not final,⁶³ an alternative mandamus being in the nature of an order to show cause, and not affecting a substantial right, because it determines nothing against the respondent or in favor of the relator.⁶⁴

4. PERSONS ENTITLED TO DEMAND REVIEW. Any party to the proceeding who considers himself prejudiced by the judgment rendered may demand a review,⁶⁵ but a party cannot appeal from a ruling not injurious or prejudicial to him.⁶⁶ A public officer against whom a mandamus has been issued has the right of appeal, although he may have no personal interest in the performance or non-performance of the act commanded;⁶⁷ but after his term of office has expired he cannot appeal from a judgment directing the issuance of a writ of mandamus against him in his offinot appealable. Thomas v. Smith, 1 Mont. 21.

An order refusing to strike out a portion of the return to an alternative writ of mandamus as irrelevant, immaterial, and not responsive to the requirements of the writ is not appealable. State v. Jennings, 56 Wis. 113, 14 N. W. 28.

An order made by a district judge in vacation denying a peremptory writ of mandamus is not such a final judgment by the district court as authorizes an appeal. Shepard v. Hubbard City, (Tex. Civ. App. 1897) 42 S. W. 862.

An order denying a motion that the peremptory writ issue in a mandamus case is not reviewable (State v. McKellar, 92 Minn. 242, 99 N. W. 807; People v. Brooklyn, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 130), but an appeal lies for the relator only where judgment is pronounced after issue joined upon plea or demurrer, interposed upon the coming in of the return to the alternative mandamus (People v. Brooklyn, supra).

cial capacity.⁶⁸ When a mandamus is issued against a court, board, or other body, the majority may appeal, although the minority refuse to join in the appeal;⁶⁹ and where two sets of the members, as individuals, have made returns of different import an appeal by one set is proper.⁷⁰ Where a writ of mandamus is directed against the members of a city council as such they cannot appeal or prosecute a writ of error as individuals, or as representatives of wards, but only as members of the council in its corporate capacity;⁷¹ but where the order is for a mandamus against the individuals composing a city council, as well as against the council as a board, the members may appeal therefrom as individuals, for the order affects them personally.⁷² Where a mandamus involves the interests of the state the attorney-general may take an appeal.⁷³ The question whether the original order for a peremptory mandamus was served on the respondent is immaterial to his right to appeal therefrom.⁷⁴ A person not a party to the mandamus proceedings cannot demand a review⁷⁵ or assign errors in the appellate court,⁷⁶ and where on certiorari to review the action of a lower court in granting a mandamus to strike out a personal property assessment, the record fails to show that the relator was possessed of any taxable personal property the higher court may properly refuse to consider the legal questions supposed to be involved.⁷⁷

5. TIME FOR APPEAL. An appeal from a judgment in mandamus proceedings must be taken within the time limited by statute for taking appeals.⁷⁸

6. NOTICE OF APPEAL. Where the abstract on an appeal from an order awarding mandamus failed to show service of the notice of appeal on the clerk of the district court as required by law, the supreme court acquired no jurisdiction of the appeal, notwithstanding the appearance and consent of the parties.⁷⁹

7. PROCEDURE FOR REVIEW. An appeal cannot be taken from the writ of mandamus but must be taken from the order or judgment of the court,⁸⁰ and an appeal from an order granting a peremptory writ in the first instance is to be taken as from a final order made in a special proceeding.⁸¹ It has been held that the correct procedure to bring before the supreme court for review the decision of the lower court in a mandamus case is to appeal from the judgment or an order denying a motion for a new trial, and that an appeal from an order directing a peremptory writ of mandamus to issue can only be sustained by considering such order as an irregular judgment, and an appeal from such order is irregular practice.⁸² It has also been held that a motion for a new trial and a bill of exceptions are necessary to be filed in mandamus proceedings for the purpose of enabling the supreme court to review the decision or judgment on appeal, under the same circumstances and for the same purpose as in ordinary actions;⁸³ but other courts hold that a final judgment passed upon a pleading defective in substance may be reviewed without a motion for a new trial having been filed and ruled upon;⁸⁴ and that the refusal of a peremptory writ of mandamus on an alternative writ and answer may be reviewed, although there was no motion for a new trial or bill of exceptions.⁸⁵

8. PRESENTATION AND RESERVATION IN LOWER COURT OF GROUNDS FOR REVIEW. The general rule that questions not raised and exceptions not made in the lower court will not be considered on appeal or error applies in the review of mandamus proceedings.⁸⁶

Waiver of objection.—A mandamus ordering a railroad company to stop all its regular passenger trains at a certain county-seat

9. RECORD AND ASSIGNMENTS OF ERROR. When an alternative writ of mandamus is issued it becomes and constitutes plaintiff's complaint or cause of action, and on appeal it should be set out in the record.⁸⁷ On appeal from a judgment awarding a peremptory writ of mandamus, there having been no alternative writ, the record in the appellate court is plaintiff's affidavit, defendant's answer, and the judgment of the court certified as required by statute for the certification of a judgment-roll.⁸⁸ The party seeking to reverse the judgment must except to the ruling of the court and assign the error in the appellate court.⁸⁹ Where an agreed statement of facts is not made part of the record by a bill of exceptions or order of court, it will not be considered on appeal, although it is referred to in the judgment.⁹⁰ On an appeal from an order directing the issuance of a peremptory writ of mandamus, an assignment that the court erred in overruling a demurrer to the "complaint" cannot be considered where the demurrer was addressed to the alternative writ and not to the complaint or petition, and the alternative writ is not in the transcript.⁹¹

10. APPEAL-BOND. On appeal from a judgment in mandamus proceedings an appeal-bond must usually be given as required by statute,⁹² although it has been held that a public officer against whom a writ of mandamus has been awarded may appeal without giving security for costs where he is acting only in his official capacity to protect the public interests and has no personal interest in the matter.⁹³

11. SUPERSEDEAS. The execution of a judgment awarding a writ of mandamus may be stayed by supersedeas,⁹⁴ and an appeal, with a supersedeas bond, as provided by law, stays the proceedings as in other cases.⁹⁵ But the mere where it is its duty to stop them cannot on appeal be objected to as too broad because the pleading and proof shows that the company has failed to stop only one of its trains there, where the petition was demurred to on the ground that the prayer was broader than the petition and the company, after its demurrer was overruled, answered the petition and had a trial on the merits. *Illinois Cent. Where the record does not contain a copy of the alternative writ it will be presumed that such writ was not issued; and in the absence thereof a motion to quash the summons should have been sustained. Hart v. State, 161 Ind. 189, 67 N. E. 996.

Ct.*, 2 Wash. 9, 25 Pac. 1007, holding that it is error to deny defendant's motion for a supersedeas of the writ pending the appeal and to refuse to fix the amount of his bond therefor. But compare State v. Judges Douglas County Dist. Ct., 19 Nebr. 149, 26 N. W. 723.

Under N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 2089, providing for a stay of proceedings under a writ of mandamus, where a mandamus has been granted to hold an election to fill vacancies in the offices of vestry-men of an incorporated church, and the questions decided in granting the mandamus are important and fairly debatable, proceedings under the writ are properly stayed until an appeal from the mandamus order is decided by the appellate court. People v. Hart, 11 N. Y. Suppl. 674, 25 Abb. N. Cas. 230 [affirmed in 13 N. Y. Suppl. 903].

Discretion of court.—Where a peremptory writ of mandamus has been awarded, the allowance of a supersedeas rests within the judicial discretion of the trial court. Cooperrider v. State, 46 Nebr. 84, 64 N. W. 372.

Effect of supersedeas.—The supersedeas of a judgment awarding a peremptory writ of mandamus which has not been performed stays the execution of the writ, but if the commands of the writ have been performed the supersedeas does not undo such performance. Polk County v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 577, where it was held (contrary to the weight of authority see supra, IX, M, 1) that the performance of the requirements of the writ was not a bar to an appeal from the judgment awarding the writ. A devolutive appeal from a decree refusing a mandamus on the state controller to compel him to pay relator a certain sum of money will not restrain such sum in the controller's hands. New Orleans Republican Printing Co. v. Dubuclet, 29 La. Ann. 109.

An order allowing a supersedeas bond does not operate as a suspension of the judgment until the bond is filed and a writ of error is issued. Blackerby v. People, 10 Ill. 266. But compare Matter of Reddish, 47 N. Y. App. Div. 187, 62 N. Y. Suppl. 261, holding that where a supreme court justice stayed a peremptory mandamus to compel a town supervisor to approve and file the bond of a highway commissioner holding over from a previous year, after such supervisor had taken an appeal from the order granting the writ on the supervisor's application made five days after the service thereof, on condition that he should apply for a hearing of the appeal at the next term of the appellate division, and within ten days execute and file an approved bond to pay all of the costs on appeal adjudged against him, etc., and such undertaking was executed and read for approval, it was error for a supreme court justice sitting at special term to vacate such stay before the expiration of the ten days.

The amount of the bond to be required by a United States circuit court on granting a supersedeas is to be determined by it in its sound discretion under the laws and rules of the supreme court. U. S. v. New Orleans, 8 Fed. 112.

Where ground of decision not stated.—

Where an order refusing a writ of mandamus does not state the grounds of decision and the writ may have been refused as a matter of discretion, the order must stand on appeal. People v. Van Wyck, 157 N. Y. 495, 52 N. E. 559 [affirming 33 N. Y. App. Div. 318, 53 N. Y. Suppl. 914].

It is presumed that the discretion of the court below was properly exercised where nothing to the contrary appears on the record. Achuff's Appeal, 12 Pa. Super. Ct. 573.

Discretion of court below controlled only in case of abuse.—Moody v. Fleming, 4 Ga. 115, 48 Am. Dec. 210; Vincent v. Ellis, 116 Iowa 609, 88 N. W. 836; Little Rock v. U. S., 103 Fed. 418, 43 C. C. A. 261.

Circumstances not showing abuse of discretion.—When a local court familiar with the conditions of the county refuses a writ of mandamus to remove the county offices and nothing but the naked facts of the county-seat election appear in the application therefor, without explanation of the delay in proceeding for a mandamus, and a restraining order enjoining the commissioners of the county from canvassing the vote proclaiming the result, or removing the county offices remains undisturbed, it cannot be held on error that there was an abuse of discretion in refusing the writ. Golden v. Elliott, 13 Kan. 92.

causes of error on behalf of the appellant as an individual cannot be considered on appeal.³ Where an alternative writ of mandamus was issued and a return filed thereto, a trial had on the issues framed by the writ and return before the court, and findings were made, the exceptions to such findings presented, on appeal from the final order therein made, not only questions of law, but also the facts for review.⁴ The question whether an office has been abolished may be determined on appeal from an order sustaining a demurrer to an alternative writ of mandamus to compel the payment of the salary of the official, although the writ alleges that the officer is duly qualified, commissioned, and acting, as the court will take judicial notice of the statute.⁵

13. DETERMINATION AND DISPOSITION OF CAUSE. The appellate court will determine upon the entire record whether a peremptory writ of mandamus should issue,⁶ but where the court is unable from the lack of a proper record to consider an appeal upon its merits the appeal must be dismissed.⁷ Errors arising in the course of the trial or proceeding may be reviewed upon appeal from the order directing a peremptory mandamus which is the final judgment in the proceeding.⁸ Where the trial court has treated a verified petition for a writ of mandamus as a pleading, it will be so considered by the appellate court when the case is brought there for review.⁹ Where an erroneous ruling is the ground for an appeal, an amendment cannot be allowed in the supreme court which would defeat the cause of appeal.¹⁰ All proper presumptions will be indulged in favor of the correctness of the ruling in the court below,¹¹ and its findings will not be disturbed unless clearly and manifestly unsupported by the evidence.¹² It has been held that on review of a judgment awarding a mandamus the statements of the return or opposing affidavits are to be taken as true,¹³ and that on certiorari to review a Aberdeen*, 25 Wash. 614, 66 Pac. 95 (holding that a judgment denying a writ of mandamus upon proofs offered and submitted by the parties will be presumed to be warranted by the facts, where neither the evidence nor the findings of fact are in the records, although the affidavit of the writ may make out a prima facie case to which no complete defense either by demurrer or answer may have been interposed).

Where judgment entirely wrong.—Where on appeal from an order denying the writ of mandamus to compel the state land board to execute a lease of coal lands to appellant as it had agreed to do, on the usual conditions of mining leases, there is an absence of proof respecting such usual conditions, which might have been essential to justly express appellant's rights by the decree, this is not enough to warrant an affirmance of the judgment where it otherwise appears to be entirely wrong. *Colorado Fuel, etc., Co. v. refusal to issue a writ of mandamus, the application for which was heard on petition and answer, the answer will be taken as true for the purpose of the case.¹⁴ Harmless error is not ground for reversal,¹⁵ nor will the judgment be reversed on grounds on which a reversal is not sought.¹⁶ Where pending the review events have occurred rendering a decision of the legal questions involved unnecessary the court will not pass upon them;¹⁷ but if the relator is entitled to relief, although such events have rendered the precise relief sought unavailing, the court will give such relief as is proper.¹⁸ Where a judgment awarding a writ of mandamus is reversed, other proceedings dependent upon the mandamus fall with it,¹⁹ and conversely the reversal of a prior judgment on which a judgment of mandamus is based requires the reversal of the latter judgment.²⁰ On appeal from an order denying a motion for an attachment for contempt in disobeying a writ of mandamus, the court may direct a new peremptory writ to issue in such form as to meet the exigencies of the case.²¹ The appellate court may dismiss the proceeding,²² or remand it²³ with instructions to the lower court as to the judgment to be entered,²⁴ in which case the mandate of the appellate court must be complied

N. Costs — 1. IN GENERAL.²⁷ At common law no costs were allowed to the successful applicant for a writ of mandamus.²⁸ Later costs were in certain cases allowed by statute in England.²⁹ In the United States the award of costs in such proceedings is purely statutory.³⁰ In some jurisdictions mandamus is considered a special proceeding,³¹ while in others it is considered an action to which the ordinary rules of costs apply.³²

By 9 Anne, c. 20, it was provided that upon judgment on the return to an alternative writ of mandamus in favor of relator, he might recover damages and costs in such manner as he might have done in an action on the case for a false return; and on the other hand that if the judgment should be rendered for defendant making return to such writ, he should recover the costs of suit. State v. King, 23 N. C. 22. Under 1 N. C. Rev. St. c. 97, in force in 1840 and similar to the statute of Anne, it was held that defendant, although judgment was given for him, could not recover his costs against the relator where the public only was interested, inasmuch as the act, although general in its terms, should be confined to those cases only where the relator claimed some office or franchise and had therefore a personal interest in the suit. State v. King, supra.

2. DISCRETION OF COURT. The rule has been frequently laid down that costs in mandamus proceedings are discretionary;³³ but the law so stated is too broad. While these proceedings are somewhat dependent upon the state of the pleadings,³⁴ and the rights of the parties,³⁵ the rule of discretion is not an arbitrary one,³⁶ and must be regulated by the statute in force at the time of its attempted exercise.³⁷

3. DEPENDENT UPON SUCCESS OR FAILURE OF PARTY.³⁸ In construing statutes, the courts have usually followed the general rule in civil actions and awarded costs to the prevailing party.³⁹ Accordingly, upon the dismissal of the petition costs

where a party is forced into mandamus proceedings in order to obtain justice, there results an error that carries with it the right to costs.⁴⁵

b. Public Officers. Public officers are liable in costs for any duty they are required to perform by law.⁴⁶ In this case, as in the case of judicial officers, it has been argued that it would entail a hardship where an officer refused to act in case of doubt; but in the absence of discretionary power in the statute the rule has always been enforced.⁴⁷ Where more than one public officer is involved, costs will be assessed only against those who failed to do their duty.⁴⁸ Resignation of a public officer will not save liability for costs.⁴⁹

5. SECURITY FOR COSTS — a. In General. The matter of requiring security for costs is one of statutory regulation.⁵⁰

b. On Appeal.⁵¹ The usual rules of costs on appeal obtain both under the state⁵² and federal⁵³ practice, save in those cases where a federal officer is acting in his official capacity, with no personal interest involved.⁵⁴

6. ENFORCEMENT OF PAYMENT. Judgment for costs in mandamus cases can only be collected by execution in the same way as other judgments.⁵⁵

44. Morgan v. London Gen. Omnibus Co., L. R. 13 Q. B. 832, 48 J. P. 503, 53 L. J. Q. B. 352, 51 L. T. Rep. N. S. 213, 32 Wkly. Rep. 759, does not include the work of an omnibus conductor engaged at daily wages.

As used in a statute giving preferred claims for manual or mechanical labor the term applies only to persons working for wages or salary and not to contractors (Anderson Driving Park Assoc. v. Thompson, 18 Ind. App. 458, 48 N. E. 259, 261); and in a statute giving a lien for services in logging it includes the use of all implements or instrumentalities, such as axe, cant-hook, team, and the like actually used in and necessary to the performance of such labor by the lumbermen (Martin v. Wakefield, 42 Minn. 176, 177, 43 N. W. 966, 6 L. R. A. 362), and includes labor performed by a team and services under a contract for a gross price per month for both (Breault v. Archambault, 64 Minn. 420, 421, 67 N. W. 348, 58 Am. St. Rep. 545). See also Martin v. Wakefield, supra.

A Chinese person, member of a firm of dealers in fancy goods but occasionally, previous to his departure to China for a temporary visit, working as a household servant, was engaged in "manual labor." Lew Jin v. U. S., 66 Fed. 953, 954, 14 C. C. A. 281.

I. TERMINOLOGY.

A. In General. It will appear from the various decisions that the definitions of "manufacture" and kindred terms, as given by the lexicographers, do not afford a true test in law as to what may or may not be included within the meaning of those terms. The courts have cited those definitions generally, but have not adhered to them in particular cases.¹ When therefore the usual question arises — whether or not a given industry, or thing, is to be classed as manufacture, or a given person, natural or artificial, as a manufacturer,² it is not safe to rely

1. See infra, I, B et seq.

2. The most frequent subject of dispute relating to manufactures is the question whether or not a given article or industry may properly be classed as a manufacture, a given person or corporation, as a manufac-upon the lexicographer; it is necessary to look to the decisions. With this caution the following definitions are given, some of which apply to the thing made; others to the process of making,³ since the word "manufacture" may be descriptive, either of the making a thing by art, or of the thing when made.⁴

B. Manufacture — 1. STANDARD DEFINITIONS. As a noun, manufacture is defined as: (1) The process of making anything by art, or reducing materials into a form fit for use, by the hand or by machinery;⁵ (2) anything made or manufactured by hand, or manual dexterity, or by machinery.⁶ As a verb, the word

turer or manufacturing corporation, or as "wholly engaged in manufacturing," or as an "exclusively manufacturing corporation," within the meaning of those terms as employed in statutes relating to bankruptcy, corporations, customs, license, and taxation. See BANKRUPTCY, 5 Cyc. 283; CORPORATIONS, 10 Cyc. 162; CUSTOMS DUTIES, 12 Cyc. 1118 et seq.; LICENSES, 25 Cyc. 593; TAXATION; and cases cited passim this article.

Other definitions are: "The operation of reducing raw materials of any kind into a form suitable for use, by hand, by art, or by machinery." Webster Dict. [quoted in Schriefer v. Wood, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,481, 5 Blatchf. 215, 217].

"The production of articles for use from raw or prepared materials, by giving these materials new forms, qualities, properties or combinations, whether by hand-labor or by machinery." Century Dict. [quoted in Beggs v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co., 96 Ala. 295, 300, 11 So. 381, 38 Am. St. Rep. 94].

"The making of anything by hand or artifice." Beggs v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co., 96 Ala. 295, 299, 11 So. 381, 38 Am. St. Rep. 94.

"Mr. Brande defines 'manufacture' as a term employed to designate the changes or modifications made by art or industry in the form or substance of material articles in the view of rendering them capable of satisfying some want or desire of man; and manufacturing industry to consist in the application of art, science or labor to bring about certain changes or modifications of already existing materials. He includes under the term 'manufacture' all branches of industry with the exceptions of fishing, hunting, mining and such industries as have for their object to obtain possession of material products in the state in which they are fashioned by nature. He says that the term is generally applied only to those departments of industry in which the raw material is fashioned into desirable articles by art or labor without the aid of the soil, but that there is no real good reason for such limitation, and that it is obvious from the slightest consideration that agriculture is nothing but a manufacture, for the business of the agriculturist is so to dispose of the soil, seed, manure or other materials, that they may supply him with other and more desirable products." Evening Journal Assoc. v. State Bd. of Assessors, 47 N. J. L. 36, 38, 54 Am. Rep. 114; In re Tecopa Min., etc., Co., 110 Fed. 120, 121. See also Brande Encycl. tit. "Manufacture."

Distinguished from commerce.—In Kidd v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 20, 9 S. Ct. 6, 32 L. ed. 346 [quoted in U. S. v. Knight Co., 156 U. S. 1, 14, 15 S. Ct. 249, 39 L. ed. 325], it was said: "No distinction is more popular to the common mind, or more clearly expressed in economic and political literature, than that between manufactures and commerce. Manufacture is transformation—the fashioning of raw materials into a change of form for use. The functions of commerce are different. The buying and selling and the transportation incidental thereto constitutes commerce; and the regulation of commerce in the constitutional sense embraces the regulation at least of such transportation." See also, generally, COMMERCE, 7 Cyc. 407.

Distinguished from traffic.—In People v. Collins, 3 Mich. 343, 385, it is said: "The manufacture of an article is one thing, and the traffic therein is another and a distinct thing. 'To manufacture is to make; the operation of making whatever is used by man; any thing made from raw materials by hand, by machinery or by art.' So says Dr. Webster. 'To traffic is to trade, either by barter or by buying or selling; to trade; to pass goods and commodities from one person to another, for an equivalent in goods or money,' etc. So says Dr. Webster."

6. Worcester Dict. [quoted in Atty.-Gen. v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157, 164, 26 N. W. 311, 60 Am. St. Rep. 287].

Other definitions are: "Anything made from raw materials, by hand, or by machinery, or by art." Bouvier L. Dict.; Webster Dict. [quoted in People v. Wemple, 61 Hun (N. Y.) 53, 62, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 711 [reversed on other grounds in 129 N. Y.

is defined as meaning to form by manufacture, or workmanship, by the hand or machinery; to make by art and labor.⁷

2. LEGAL DEFINITION—a. Stated. Manufacture is: (1) The application, to material,⁸ of labor or skill,⁹ whereby the original article is changed to a new, different, and useful article,¹⁰ provided the process is of a kind popularly regarded as manufacture;¹¹ or (2) the product of such process.¹²

b. Its Elements Considered—(1) MATERIAL USED. While the courts in their decisions have often used the term "raw material," as has Webster in his definition,¹³ to indicate the original material subjected to the process of manufacture, and although it was held in one reported case¹⁴ and has apparently been intimated in others¹⁵ that rawness of material was essential to manufacture, the general current of authority is in favor of the rule that the material need not be raw.¹⁶

664, 29 N. E. 812]; Schriefer v. Wood, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,481, 5 Blatchf. 215, 217].

"Whatever is made by human labor, either directly or through the instrumentality of machinery." Abbott L. Dict. [quoted in Lamborn v. Bell, 18 Colo. 346, 351, 32 Pac. 989, 20 L. R. A. 241; Carlin v. Western Assur. Co., 57 Md. 515, 526, 40 Am. Rep. 440; Benedict v. Davidson County, 110 Tenn. 183, 192, 67 S. W. 806].

7. Worcester Dict. [quoted in Atty.-Gen. v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157, 164, 26 N. W. 311, 60 Am. Rep. 287]. See also In re Tecopa Min., etc., Co., 110 Fed. 120, 121.

Other definitions are: "To make or fabricate from raw materials by the hand, by art or machinery, and work into forms convenient for use." Webster Dict. [quoted in Carlin v. Western Assur. Co., 57 Md. 515, 526, 40 Am. Rep. 440; People v. Wemple, 61 Hun (N. Y.) 53, 62, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 711 [reversed on other grounds in 129 N. Y. 664, 29 N. E. 812]; Benedict v. Davidson County, 110 Tenn. 183, 192, 67 S. W. 806; In re Tecopa Min., etc., Co., 110 Fed. 120, 121; Schriefer v. Wood, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,481, 5 Blatchf. 215, 217]; Bouvier L. Dict.

"To work raw materials into suitable forms for use." Webster Dict. [quoted in Schriefer v. Wood, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,481, 5 Blatchf. 215, 217].

"To make any thing by hand or artificial device." Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Fulgham, 91 Ala. 555, 558, 8 So. 803.

The word "manufacture" is a compound word of Latin origin, derived from the words "manu" (ablative), by hand, and "facere," to do, to make, to form; but the meaning is not confined to that which is done by hand alone, but by machinery as well. In re Tecopa Min., etc., Co., 110 Fed. 120, 121.

Furnishing new material not included in manufacture.—The force of the word "manufacture" is simply and no more than this: "To make up by hand [original definition] or by machinery [derivative definition] any raw material into a form fit for use." It does not include the idea that the manufacturer shall furnish the raw material. That is, strictly speaking, a mercantile sale, although in common parlance we speak of a man who furnishes the material and works it up as a manufacturer. In fact he is both a merchant and a manufacturer. Horowitz v. Weidner, (N. J. Ch. 1895) 31 Atl. 771, 773.

14. People v. Holdridge, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 511, where it was held that an establishment where completed articles were made from melted pig iron and whole iron was not engaged in manufacture because the material was not "raw."

15. See cases cited infra, this note.

In Louisiana certain cases seem to have gone, to some extent, upon a like theory. Thus it has been held that those who import parts, already manufactured for the purpose of being made complete articles, and fit them together and finish the complete article, are not engaged in manufacture within the meaning of a constitutional exemption from assessment. Lake v. Guilloite, 48 La. Ann. 870, 19 So. 924. See also Chickasaw Cooperage Co. v. Police Jury, 48 La. Ann. 523, 19 So. 476; Brooklyn Cooperage Co. v. New Orleans, 47 La. Ann. 1314, 17 So. 804. But a cooper who made barrels out of shakes and rough logs was held a manufacturer in New Orleans v. Le Blanc, 34 La. Ann. 596.

16. People v. Morgan, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 395, 399, 63 N. Y. Suppl. 76 (where the court said: "Whoever creates a useful thing by mechanical labor is entitled usually to be called a manufacturer. The fact that he purchases some and makes some of the parts does not destroy that character. . . . No manufacturer of the finished product in this age works up the raw material. That is done by specialists all along the line. The practical manufacturer assembles the material he needs from all quarters in its most finished condition and does the rest himself"); Norris v. Com., 27 Pa. St. 494, 496 (where it is said: "Manufacturing . . . does not often mean the production of a new article out of materials entirely raw. It generally consists in giving new shapes, new qualities, or new combinations to matter which has already gone through some other

(II) CHANGE EFFECTED—(A) In General. The change effected must be such as to produce, instead of the original material, a new and different article.¹⁷

(B) “Making” Distinguished From “Taking.” Certain industries are held not to be manufactures, although they involve the application of labor and skill to material to fit it for use; they do not result in the production of a different article, and so are held to amount to mere taking or distribution.¹⁸ The mere appropriation of an article which is furnished by nature is not a manufacture.¹⁹

c. Popular Usage Followed. The courts have generally followed the popular usage,²⁰ which does not class as manufactures certain industries to which the

Ct. 837, 43 L. ed. 139 (where the court said: “It may be said generally, although not universally, that a complete manufacture is either the ultimate product of prior successive manufactures, such as a watch spring, or a pen-knife, or an intermediate product which may be used for different purposes, such for instance as pig iron, iron bars, lumber or cloth”). And see Dudley v. U. S., 74 Fed. 548; Baumgarten v. Magone, 50 Fed. 69; U. S. v. Semmer, 41 Fed. 324.

17. Ingram v. Cowles, 150 Mass. 155, 157, 23 N. E. 48 (where it is said: “We hesitate to say that sawing logs into boards is a ‘branch of manufacture,’ and think it doubtful whether something more of a transformation of the raw material is not necessary to bring the employment within the clause”); Hartranft v. Wiegmann, 121 U. S. 609, 615, 7 S. Ct. 1240, 30 L. ed. 1012 [following U. S. v. Wilson, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,736] (where it is said: “The application of labor to an article . . . does not make the article necessarily a manufactured article, within the meaning of that term as used in the tariff laws. Washing and scouring wool does not make the resulting wool a manufacture of wool”). See also U. S. v. Potts, 5 Cranch (U. S.) 284, 3 L. ed. 102 (where round copper plates turned up and raised at the edges by labor for subsequent use in the manufacture of copper vessels was held not to be manufactured copper); U. S. v. Semmer, 41 Fed. 324; Foppes v. Magone, 40 Fed. 570; Frazee v. Moffitt, 18 Fed. 584, 20 Blatchf. 267 (where it was held that hay was not manufactured); U. S. v. Wilson, supra (where marble cut into blocks for transportation was held not to be manufactured marble).

A contract to ship goods in a “manufactured state” was held not broken by failure to rivet joints of certain pipes before shipping, as it appeared that the seller usually shipped his apparatus without riveting the pipes. Allington, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Detroit Reduction Co., 133 Mich. 427, 95 N. W. 562.

18. See cases cited infra, this note.

Digging coal.—The distinction is well marked between the digging of coal and the making of coke; the former is not, but the latter is, a manufacture. Com. v. Juniata Coke Co., 157 Pa. St. 507, 27 Atl. 373, 22 L. R. A. 232.

Mining, however elaborate, is not in itself manufacture. Byers v. Franklin Coal Co., 106 Mass. 131; Cowling v. Zenith Iron Co., 65 Minn. 263, 68 N. W. 46, 60 Am. St. Rep. 471, 33 L. R. Distribution of water is not manufacture. Kentucky Lead, etc., Co. v. New Albany Water-Works, 62 Ind. 63; Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp., 100 Mass. 183.

Distribution of natural gas is not manufacture. Wilson v. Tennent, 32 Misc. (N. Y.) 273, 65 N. Y. Suppl. 852. See also Com. v. Northern Electric Light, etc., Co., 145 Pa. St. 105, 22 Atl. 839, 14 L. R. A. 107.

Ice as taken from natural sources and fitted for distribution and use is not generally regarded as a manufacture. Hittinger v. Westford, 135 Mass. 258, 262 (where it is said: “The cutting of ice produced by the agencies of nature, on the surface of a pond, into pieces of a size convenient for handling, and storing the pieces in a building, cannot . . . be called a manufacture. The material is in no way changed, or adapted to any new or different use; it still remains ice, to be used simply as ice. . . . It is like the harvesting of hay or grain”); People v. Knickerbocker Ice Co., 99 N. Y. 181, 1 N. E. 669 [affirming 32 Hun 475] (holding that a company engaged in storing and preserving ice and preparing it for sale is not a manufacturing corporation). But see Atty.-Gen. v. Lorman, 59 Mich. 157, 26 N. W. 311, 60 Am. Rep. 287, where it was held that the reduction of ice into a form fit to use both by hand and by the use of machinery was manufacture.

19. Com. v. Northern Electric Light, etc., Co., 145 Pa. St. 105, 22 Atl. 839, 14 L. R. A. 107.

20. State v. Johnson, 20 Mont. 367, 369, 370, 51 Pac. 820, where under a statutory construction law, requiring in substance that words, unless technical, should be construed according to the context and approved usage of the language, the court construing a statute imposing a license-tax interpreted the word “manufacture” in its popular sense, and said: “We therefore would include among manufacturers those who produce goods from a raw state by manual skill and labor, and definitions strictly apply, such as cooking and the making of confectionery,²¹ buildings,²² and farming.²³

d. Particular Industries²⁴—(i) ELECTRICITY.²⁵ The production of electricity by artificial means in a condition fit for use is generally held to be manufacture, and the theory that it is merely the gathering and use of a gift of nature is disapproved.²⁶ goods which are commonly turned out of factories, and we would exclude a merchant tailor, who merely cuts and fashions a suit of clothes as ordered by a customer, from cloth purchased elsewhere, and kept to be made up as suits are ordered from him—although a ‘manufacturer’ is one who makes or fabricates anything for use” and so would include “a tailor who works cloths into suits for wear;” “a seamstress . . . for she makes handkerchiefs from linen;” “the carpenter who takes raw lumber and prepares it for building a house;” “a milliner, who makes and sells bonnets; a blacksmith, who makes horseshoes or forges iron; and a cook, who makes bread or other articles to be used as food. . . . We should never entertain the thought that included in the factories and among the manufacturers tailor shops or merchant tailors, not engaged in wholesale trade, or milliners, dress makers, furniture dealers, restaurants and the like.” See also People v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 29 N. E. 808, 14 L. R. A. 708 [reversing 15 N. Y. Suppl. 718]; In re Tecopa Min., etc., Co., 110 Fed. 120.

21. New Orleans v. Mannessier, 32 La. Ann. 1075, 1076, where a person engaged in making and selling ice-cream claimed exemption from taxation under a Louisiana statute, on the ground that he was a manufacturer, and the court held the contrary, saying: “We cannot assent to the proposition that a person making and selling ice-cream is a manufacturer in the sense of the law, or in any other sense of the word. The attempt to magnify a confectionery, which is defendant’s business, into a manufacture, must fail. We are told that any one seeing the steam engine, complicated apparatus, and large force needed to produce defendant’s goods, would at once conclude that he is a manufacturer. With as much force it might be said that any one visiting the mammoth kitchen of the Grand Union Hotel at Saratoga, together with their myriads of employees, and their colossal apparatus, would at once magnify the cooks and pastry-men into manufacturers.” See also State v. Eckendorf, 46 La. Ann. 131, 14 So. 518; State v. Johnson, 20 Mont. 367, 51 Pac. 320.

22. People v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co., 63 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 451, 453, 11 Abb. N. Cas. 40 [affirmed in 92 N. Y. 487], where it was said: “Undoubtedly, using the words—manufacture, manufacturer—in their broadest sense, the builder and repairer of a vessel, or a house even, might be called a manufacturer. In either case such builder takes the raw material, and by the hand, or by machinery and tools, fashions it into form and shape for use. But this is not the ordinary and general meaning to be given to the words,” and hence it was held that a corporation empowered “to construct one or more dry docks, or wet docks, or other conveniences and structures” for certain purposes, to use them for such purposes, and furnish them for use by others for such purposes, was not a manufacturing corporation. 24. Disputed industries.—There are industries which lie so close to the line between what is, and what is not, manufacture, that their claim to the name, although usually well settled in one way or the other, has given rise to much discussion. See infra, I, B, 2, d, (i)–(vii).

26. Beggs v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co., 96 Ala. 295, 300, 11 So. 381, 38 Am. St. Rep. 94 (where the court said: “According to the above definitions of the word manufacture, we are constrained to consider and declare an electric-light company a manufacturing corporation to all intents and purposes. It is no answer to this argument to say, that electricity exists in a state in nature, and that a corporation engaged in the electric-light business collects or gathers such electricity. This does not fully or exactly express the process by which such corporations are able to make, sell and deliver something useful and valuable. The electricity that exists in nature is of a very different quality from that produced by means of machinery. . . . But the electric currents that produce these results can not be said to be ‘the free gift of nature, gathered from the air or the clouds.’ It is the product of capital and labor, and in this respect can not be distinguished from ordinary manufacturing operations.”); Burke v. Mead, 159 Ind. 252, 260, 64 N. E. 880; People v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 543, 29 N. E. 808, 14 L. R. A. 708 [reversing 15 N. Y. Suppl. 718]; Com. v. Keystone Electric Light, etc., Co., 193 Pa. Northern Electric Light, etc., Co.*, 145 Pa. St. 105, 22 Atl. 839, 14 L. R. A. 107, in so far as they maintain that the production of electricity is not manufacture]. See also People v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 664, 29 N. E. 812 [reversing 61 Hun 53, 15 N. Y. Suppl. 711]. Compare Frederick Electric Light, etc., Co. v.

(II) GAS.²⁷ The business of producing illuminating gas is a manufacture.²⁸ But the liberation of natural gas from the earth and its transportation to consumers is not manufacture.²⁹

(III) LUMBER.³⁰ Lumber has given rise to much doubt as to whether its production, in early stages, is manufacture or not. The weight of authority seems to be that such production is in general manufacture,³¹ but it can hardly be said with certainty that a court would so hold in any given case.³²

(IV) PRINTING. As to printing it is generally held that it is manufacture when it consists in the mere production of printed matter such as books, blank books, bill heads, etc.;³³ but that it is not manufacture when auxiliary to the editing and publication of a newspaper.³⁴

Frederick City, 84 Md. 599, 36 Atl. 362, 36 L. R. A. 130, the court declined to determine whether or not electricity could be said to be manufactured.

30. Lumber defined see LOGGING, 25 Cyc. 1541.

31. Bemis v. First Nat. Bank, 63 Ark. 625, 40 S. W. 127 (holding that where land of a sawmill and fixtures and appurtenances were subject to a vendor's lien, and a tax-book introduced as evidence to show what had been taxed as personalty, the phrase "materials and manufactured articles" meant, in reference to the sawmill business, logs, lumber, and articles made therefrom); Bogard v. Tyler, 55 S. W. 709, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1452.

"One who works up lumber on a considerable scale is popularly called a manufacturer of that article, and such lumber is spoken of as manufactured in our tariff acts and treasury regulations, and in the lately repealed [reciprocity] treaty regulating commerce with Canada. If so, the fact that the manufacturer uses only lumber which he grows himself does not appear to be material. It is not like the case, put in argument, of a farmer making cider or cheese, for two reasons: These products when made by the farmer exclusively from his own farm, are not usually made on so large a scale as to be called a manufacture, as the word is now commonly used, and the making is one merely incidental to the cultivation of his land, like curing his hay, &c. But in the case of the lumber business, the land may be almost said to be incident to the lumber, which usually forms its chief value, and the manufacture itself is the main source of profit, independently of any cultivation or other use of the land." In re Chandler, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,591, 1 Lowell 478, 479, 4 Nat. Bankr. Rep. 213.

"The conversion of saw-logs into lumber of different kinds, is the changing, by machinery, of raw materials into new and useful forms, and is not a mere addition or mode of use of an article already manufactured." State v. Wilbert's Sons Lumber, etc., Co., 51 La. Ann. 1223, 1235, 26 So. 106.

32. See cases cited infra, this note.

"We hesitate to say that sawing logs into boards is a 'branch of manufactures,' and think it doubtful whether something more of a transformation of the raw material is not necessary to bring the employment within the 'clause' [of a tax statute]." Ingram v. Cowles, 150 Mass. 155, 157, 23 N. E. 48.

Firewood was held not to be a manufactured article within the meaning of the California code providing for a warranty implied by sale of manufactured articles under certain circumstances. Correio v. Lynch, 65 Cal. 273, 3 Pac. 889.

Ann. 275, 16 So. 815, holding that the printing on paper of bill heads, orders, blanks, and other forms to be used in commerce, and the folding and cutting of paper into shape required for letter or bill heads and commercial books, is not manufacture.

34. In re Capital Pub. Co., 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 405 [criticizing dictum in Matter of Kenyon, 1 Utah 47] (holding that the printing and publishing of a weekly paper was not a manufacture in common parlance and therefore not under the bankrupt law); Oswald v. St. Paul Globe Pub. Co., 60 Minn. 82, 85, 61 N. W. 902 (where it was said: "The business of publishing an ordinary daily or weekly newspaper is at most only partly a manufacturing business, and that part is merely incidental to the main or principal part of the business, which is collecting and selling news, preparing and selling literary work, and other editorial work"); Press Printing Co. v. State Bd. of Assessors, 51 N. J. L. 75, 16 Atl. 173; Evening Journal Assoc. v. State Bd. of Assessors, 47 N. J. L. 36, 41, 54 Am. Rep. 114 (where it was said: "Neither in the nature of things nor in the ordinary signification of language, would a newspaper be called a manufactured article or its publisher a manufacturer").

In Louisiana it was held that the printing and publication of a newspaper was manufacture within the constitutional exemption of license-tax in favor of manufacturers. The court did not regard the theory that the newspaper is a product of mind labor rather than of hand labor and therefore is not an article of manufacture, as sound, saying: "Such a view would deny exemption to a book publisher or manufacturer of books; yet it seems very clear that he would be considered a manufacturer within the intent of the Constitution." State v. Dupré, 42 La. Ann. 561, 563, 7 So. 727.

In New York where a corporation, the publisher of a newspaper, sought relief from the franchise tax, claiming to be a manufacturing corporation, the court said: "An interesting discussion has taken place on this question in the courts of sister states, resulting in a conflict of views," and declined to determine it, deciding the case on other grounds. People v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 1, 3, 49 N. E. 248.

In Utah it was held that a firm which printed and published a daily paper and also conducted a book and job printing office was a manufacturer under the Bankrupt Act, of books, cards, bill heads, etc. Hawley, J., in stating an opinion of the court, added: "Though it is not necessary to decide that the printing and publishing of a daily newspaper is manufacturing in the strict sense of the law, yet my brother Judges have expressed the opinion it would be, and I am inclined to the same conviction. A newspaper publication is as much the result of manufacture as that of books or cards, or bill-heads." In re Kenyon, 1 Utah 47, 50.

35. Com. v. Marsh, 3 Pa. Dist. 489 (construction of a road-bed of a railway is not manufacturing); Jacobs v. Baker, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 295, 19 L. ed. 200 (the term "manufacture" does not include a jail, although made with hands, and that a jail cannot be patented as a manufacture).

36. People v. Morgan, 61 N. Y. App. Div. 373, 70 N. Y. Suppl. 516 (where the business of a corporation included melting and mixing, in their own plant, a preparation of asphalt, sand, and oil and paving streets with it, and it was held a manufacturing corporation); Com. v. Pittsburgh Bridge Co., 156 Pa. St. 507, 27 Atl. 4 [following Com. v. Keystone Bridge Co., 156 Pa. St. 500, 27 Atl. 1, where it was not held outright that the construction of a bridge by fitting together the parts so manufactured was "manufacture" but that, even if it was not, yet the fact that the corporation occasionally did build a bridge out of materials it had manufactured for that purpose did not change its character as a corporation organized exclusively for manufacturing purposes] (holding that the Pittsburgh bridge company, which it appeared was engaged exclusively in making and selling iron and steel bridges, roofs, girders, and buildings, and which was in the habit of buying lumber, iron, steel, and other materials in the rough, and designing, shaping, framing, and finishing such materials and fitting them for use at its own shops, and selling the finished material, and sometimes putting it together and erecting it into bridges, roofs, or buildings, was a manufacturing corporation).

37. See cases cited infra, this note.

Slaughtering, separating, and dealing in the product, not manufacture.—Purchasing sheep and lambs, slaughtering, flaying, separating the hide and wool, selling both and making fertilizer of the offal, preserving the flesh by cold storage and shipping it to places of delivery is not "carrying on manufacture" as the phrase is used in a statute exempting corporations so engaged from taxation. People v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 408, 50 N. E. 53, 41 L. R. A. 228 [reversing 20 N. Y. App. Div. 521, 47 N. Y. Suppl. 123].

Purchasing and slaughtering hogs, turning them into lard, bacon, etc., is manufacture. Engle v. Sohn, 41 Ohio St. 691, 52 Am. Rep. 103 [criticizing Jackson v. State, 15 Ohio 652, on the ground that the facts seemed "meagerly reported," and distinguishing that case on the ground that the pork packing business had changed since its date].

38. Landgraf v. Kuh, 188 Ill. 484, 59 N. E. 501 (holding that the making of wearing apparel by machines driven by electric power is "a manufacturing purpose" within the act providing for fire-escapes on buildings used for manufacturing purposes); State v. Johnson, 20 Mont. 367, 51 Pac. 820 (holding that a tailor is not included in a provision of the Montana constitution providing for license-fees from manufacturers, because he is not one of those who produce goods from a new state by manufacture, skilled labor, and goods which are "commonly turned out of factories"); Radebaugh v. Plain City, 11 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 612, 28 Cinc. L. Bul. 107 (holding that a non-resident merchant tailor who in a village exhibits samples of clothing and takes orders for suits of clothing to be made by him at his place of business elsewhere is a manufacturer within the meaning of a village ordinance imposing license-fees).

engaged in working raw materials into wares suitable for use."⁴¹ "Manufacturer" is distinguishable from "mechanic" or "tradesman,"⁴² and has been held, under statute, to be identical with "producer."⁴³

D. Manufacturing Corporation⁴⁴—1. IN GENERAL. The test of what is or is not a manufacturing corporation is, what is the business of the corporation; whether that business is a manufacture or not. What that business is the courts usually determine: (1) By consulting the charter of the company to ascertain its powers, and (2) by considering whether the manufacturing power, if any, is a business in itself or merely incidental to some other.⁴⁵ A corporation may be a 41. Consumers' Brewing Co. v. Norfolk, 101 Va. 171, 43 S. E. 336; Webster Dict. [quoted in People v. New York Floating Dry Dock Co., 11 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 40, 42, 63 How. Pr. 451].

"Manufacturer" is otherwise defined as one who is engaged in the business of working raw materials into wares suitable for use, who gives new shapes, new qualities, new combinations, to matter which has already gone through some artificial process. A manufacturer prepares the original substance for use in different forms. He makes to sell and stands between the original producer and the dealer and the first consumer, depending for his profit on the labor which he bestows on the raw materials. State v. Dupré, 42 La. Ann. 561, 7 So. 727 [quoting New Orleans v. Le Blanc, 34 La. Ann. 596]; New Orleans v. Ernst, 35 La. Ann. 746. See also State v. American Sugar Refining Co., 108 La. 603, 32 So. 965.

The test.—In determining whether or not a given person is a manufacturer, the courts first ascertain in what his business consists, then, whether or not that business is manufacture, and the cases as to what is manufacture are all applicable pro tanto to the question; but every person who manufactures is not a manufacturer; the manufacture may be merely incidental to another business. Thus, while a farmer who makes articles from his produce undoubtedly manufactures them, he is not a manufacturer for his business is to produce the raw material and the manufacture is not in his case a business by itself but only an incident to his farming. In re Chandler, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,591, 1 Lowell 478. And see supra, I, B, 2, d, (I)–(VII); I, B, 2, e.

The term "manufacturer" "applies both to him who actually makes . . . and to him who causes . . . to be made." Hancock v. State, 114 Ga. 439, 441, 40 S. E. 317.

A member of a firm engaged in manufacture is thereby a manufacturer himself. U. S. v. Weedon, 3 Fed. 623, 4 Hughes 450.

A corporation engaged in manufacturing is a manufacturer. State v. A. W. Wilber's Sons Lumber, etc., Co., 51 La. Ann. 1223, 26 So. 106.

Person not owning manufacturing plant.—One skilled in manufacture, who contributes his skill and labor to a manufacturing industry, designing the works and overseeing the labor, is a manufacturer within the meaning of the trade-mark law and as such entitled to a trade-mark, although he does not own the whole capital. William Rogers Mfg. Co. v. Simpson, 54 Conn. 527, 9 Atl. 395; Meriden Britannia Co. v. Parker, 39 Conn. 450, 12 Am. Rep. 401. Under a Minnesota statute defining manufacturer as one who purchases and receives or holds personal property of any description for the purpose of adding to the value thereof by any process of manufacture, refining, or by a combination of different materials, with a view of making gain or profit by so doing, it was held that one need not own nor operate the manufacturing plant in order to constitute him a manufacturer. State v. Clarke, 64 Minn. 556, 67 N. W. 1144.

42. Atwood v. De Forest, 19 Conn. 513, 518, where it was held that persons "carrying on the business of manufacturing for sale in the market, without reference to the supply of the community where their establishment is located, a particular article, as german-silver spectacles . . . are manufacturers, and not tradesmen;" so that their tools so used are not exempt from attachment, and where the court said: "If it be said, that the distinction between a mechanic and a manufacturer, is not as precise as is desirable; and that there is difficulty in determining to which class certain individuals belong; especially, in cases where men are engaged in both the business of a mechanic, as well as in that of a manufacturer; the answer is, the difficulty is not in the distinction itself; that seems to be precise enough; but it is in the application of the distinction to particular facts."

43. Hancock v. State, 114 Ga. 439, 441, 40 S. E. 317, where it was said: "We hold that the word 'producer,' as used in the special act [an act prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors with an exception in favor of the producer], is identical in meaning with 'manufacturer.'"

44. Corporations generally see CORPORATIONS, 10 Cyc. 1.

"The character of the company depends upon the business which it actually does, and not simply upon the name which it bears," and the so-called steam power company, which is in fact a real estate corporation, and manufactures steam only to supply its own tenants, thus improving the leasing value of its realty, is not a manufacturing corpora-

manufacturing company as to one of its powers or industries and not as to another.⁴⁶

2. "EXCLUSIVELY MANUFACTURING CORPORATION;" "WHOLLY ENGAGED IN MANUFACTURING." These terms as used in statutes do not altogether preclude the conduct, by a corporation, of operations which are not in themselves manufacture, provided manufacturing is the business of the company and such other operations are merely incidental thereto.⁴⁷

tion. Com. v. Arrott Mills Co., 145 Pa. St. 69, 22 Atl. 243.

A laundry company is not a manufacturing corporation, within the Bankruptcy Act. (Muir v. Samuels, 110 Ky. 605, 62 S. W. 481, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 14; In re White Star Laundry Co., 117 Fed. 570), even if it manufactures soaps and dyes, necessary for its own use in the business of bleaching fabrics (Com. v. Keystone Laundry Co., 203 Pa. St. 289, 52 Atl. 326).

Mining and smelting companies.—A corporation which derives most of its profits from smelting ore, employing in the operation of its smelter twelve or fourteen men, was held to be a manufacturing corporation within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, although it mined the ore so smelted itself, employing two or three men only for that purpose, and incidentally conducted a store and boarding-house for its employees. In re Tecopa Min., etc., Co., 110 Fed. 120. See also In re White Star Laundry Co., 117 Fed. 570; In re Woodside Coal Co., 105 Fed. 56; In re Elk Park Min., etc., Co., 101 Fed. 422, 4 Am. Bankr. Rep. 131. Compare In re Rollins Gold, etc., Min. Co., 102 Fed. 982. But in People v. Horn Silver Min. Co., 105 N. Y. 76, 82, 11 N. E. 155, it appeared that a corporation was organized to conduct a business of mining in Utah and engaged also in reducing the ore which it mined to bullion in Utah, which bullion it then shipped to its refinery at Chicago and there refined, and afterward shipped to the United States assay office in New York, where the silver was further refined to standard bars at the expense of the company, this being the only manufacture, if any, carried on by it in New York. The court held that it was not a manufacturing corporation in New York, even if it could be regarded as such in Utah, saying: "According to common comprehension and the ordinary use of language, the process of refining this bullion at the assay office was not a manufacture, and the assay office was not a manufacturing establishment. But whether it was or not, the defendant which employed the assay office for a compensation to refine the bullion was not itself engaged in the manufacture. It was no more a manufacturer than a farmer is who takes his grain to the grist-mill to be ground into flour, for a part of the grain or a money compensation, or who takes his wool to a cloth manufacturer to be made into cloth for a compensation, and then to be returned to him. A railroad company may manufacture all its cars and engines, and yet it cannot be properly classified as a manufacturing company." A mining corporation is not a manufacturing corporation within the meaning of a constitutional provision exempting from double liability the stock-holders of manufacturing corporations. Cowling v. Zenith Iron Co., 65 Minn. 263, 68 N. W. 48, 60 Am. St. Rep. 471, 33 L. R. A. 508. See also Byers v. Franklin Coal Co., 106 Mass. 131; Com. v. Juniata Coal Co., 157 Pa. A waterworks company is not a manufacturing company. Kentucky Lead, etc., Co. v. New Albany Water-Works, 62 Ind. 63; Dudley v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp., 100 Mass. 183.

A company which publishes a newspaper, but does not own or operate any plant for that purpose, merely employing an agent to oversee the work done by a contractor, is not a manufacturing corporation. People v. Roberts, 155 N. Y. 1, 49 N. E. 248. But see Hendy v. Soule, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,359, 1 Dedy 400.

A corporation whose principal business is to own patents and license other corporations to use them is not a manufacturing corporation, within the tax laws. People v. Campbell, 88 Hun (N. Y.) 530, 34 N. Y. Suppl. 713 [reversed on other grounds in 148 N. Y. 759, 43 N. E. 177, where, however, it was held that the finding of the controller, on the point above stated, was conclusive].

A corporation whose business is mixing tea, and roasting, grinding, and mixing coffee is not a manufacturing corporation, because it does not produce a new article different from the material on which it operates. People v. Roberts, 145 N. Y. 375, 40 N. E. 7.

46. Press Printing Co. v. State Bd. of Assessors, 51 N. J. L. 75, 16 Atl. 173; Winona First Nat. Bank v. Winona Plow Co., 58 Minn. 167, 59 N. W. 997; Com. v. Juniata Coke Co., 157 Pa. St. 507, 27 Atl. 373, 22 L. R. A. 232.

47. In determining whether or not these terms apply, the courts consider the purposes set forth in the charter of the company. Thus a corporation may be authorized to manufacture and sell certain products, in which case the sale, being an incident to the manufacture, does not exclude it from the class of "exclusively manufacturing corporations." On the other hand it may be authorized to manufacture, buy and sell, or to deal in and manufacture, in which case it is not an exclusively manufacturing corporation. Or it may be authorized to furnish, alone, and while that may include the power of manufacturing what it furnishes, yet, since manufacture is not stated in its charter as its purpose, it cannot be regarded as a corporation "organized exclusively for the purpose of manufacturing." In every such case it is necessary to consider the particular statute with reference to which the question arises. See the statutes of the several states; and cases cited infra, this note.

A corporation formed "to furnish light, heat and power for public and private uses" is not "organized for purely manufacturing purposes," for, although it manufactures electricity which it furnishes, the purpose of its organization is the test, and that must be gathered from the charter, which does not mention manufacturing but only furnishing. Evanston Electric Illuminating Co. v. Kochersperger, 175 Ill. 26, 51 N. E. 719.

A corporation authorized to manufacture and deal in azotine and other fertilizing materials, grease and stearin, is not organized for the purpose of carrying on a manufacturing business exclusively. Commercial Bank v. Azotine Mfg. Co., 66 Minn. 413, 69 N. W. 217.

A company authorized only to engage in the business of "manufacturing lager beer and other malt liquors, and selling the same, together with such other business as may be incidental thereto," is a manufacturing corporation, as disposing of its product is merely incidental to manufacturing. Hastings Malt-ing Co. v. Iron Range Brewing Co., 65 Minn. 28, 67 N. W. 652 [distinguishing Winona First Nat. Bank v. Winona Plow Co., 58 Minn. 167, 59 N. W. 997, on the ground that the corporation there in question was authorized to purchase and sell as well as to manufacture].

A corporation authorized not only to distil and manufacture, but also to buy, sell, and deal in liquors, is not organized for the purpose of carrying on an exclusively manufacturing business. St. Paul Barrel Co. v. Minneapolis Distilling Co., 62 Minn. 448, 64 N. W. 1143.

A company authorized to manufacture and do other business is not "organized for the purpose of carrying on an exclusively manufacturing business" (Mohr v. Minnesota Elevator Co., 40 Minn. 343, 41 N. W. 1074; State v. Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co., 40 Minn. 213, 41 N. W. 1020, 3 L. R. A. 510), although it actually does nothing but manufacture (Winona First Nat. Bank v. Winona Plow Co., 58 Minn. 167, 59 N. W. 997; Densmore v. Shepard, 46 Minn. 54, 48 N. W. 528, 681; Arthur v. Willius, 44 Minn. 409, 46 N. W. 851).

Wholly engaged in manufacture.—Under N. Y. Laws (1890), c. 522, providing for a franchise tax upon corporations, and making exception in case of "companies wholly engaged in manufacture," it was held that a corporation engaged in manufacture and in other business as well was not protected by the exception, which is limited to corporations whose corporate business is exclusively that of manufacture, and that the capital employed in manufacture, as well as that employed in other business, is subject to the tax. People v. Roberts, 158 N. Y. 168, 52 N. E. 1104. A corporation engaged in manufacturing in New York and also purchasing and selling supplies of the kind in which it deals, but not manufactured by it, as authorized by its charter, is not "wholly engaged in carrying on manufacture within this state." People v. Campbell, 145 N. Y. 587, 40 N. E. 239. See also People v. Roberts, 158 N. Y. 162, 52 N. E. 1102. But where a New York corporation organized under the General Manufacturing Act was engaged to some extent in the ultra vires act of dealing in products not manufactured by itself, but necessary to completing its stock in trade, it was held that since it was strictly a manufacturing corporation, it was exempt from taxation as to the capital employed in its manufacturing business, but rightly taxed as to that part invested in other business. People v. Campbell, 144 N. Y. 166, 38 N. E. 990. See also People v. Roberts, 51 N. Y. App. Div. 77, 64 N. Y. Suppl. 494.

48. See Teaff v. Hewitt, 1 Ohio St. 511, 535, 59 Am. Dec. 634 (where it is said: "A manufacturing establishment including all its essential parts, may unite in the same pursuit and for producing the same result, portions of real estate with articles of personal property, retaining all the essential qualities of chattels"); Memphis Gaslight Co. v. State, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 310, 312, 98 Am. Dec. 452 (where it is said: "In order that a particular article or class of articles should constitute a part of a manufacturing establishment, it is not essential that they be actually employed in the process of manufacture. The establishment includes, also, all the usual and necessary appliances for storing, measuring, weighing, packing, and delivering the manufactured article, after the process of manufacture is completed").

The term has been held to include: A flour mill (Carlin v. Western Assur. Co., 57 Md. 515, 40 Am. Rep. 440. See also Lamborn v. Bell, 18 Colo. 346, 32 Pac. 989, 20 L. R. A. 241), gas-pipes laid through streets and owned by a gas company, as part of the "establishment" (Memphis Gaslight Co. v. State, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 310, 98 Am. Dec. 452), and real estate bought and reasonably necessary for the erection and operation of such "establishment" (Franklin Needle Co. v. Franklin, 65 N. H. 177, 18 Atl. 318). In Bogard v. Tyler, 55 S. W. 709, 710, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 1452, it was held that where a statute providing for lien in favor of persons furnishing labor and materials to a "manufacturing establishment" is relied on, there must be a manufacturing establishment and, under the evidence in the case, as the sawmill was en-

F. Manufactory; Factory. "Manufactory" and "factory" are different forms of the same word.⁴⁹ "Manufactory" has been defined as "a house or place where anything is manufactured,"⁵⁰ and "factory," as "a building, or collection of buildings, appropriated to the manufacture of goods."⁵¹ But a manufactory is something more than a building.⁵² It includes not only the building but the machinery necessary to produce the particular goods manufactured and the engines or other power necessary to propel such machinery.⁵³ It seems, however, that mechanical power and machinery are not always essential to the existence of a factory.⁵⁴ A single factory may include several buildings.⁵⁵ Factory is not gaged in manufacturing lumber for the market, there was such establishment.

Employment of children by manufacturing establishment see INFANTS, 22 Cyc. 526 note 29.

"Manufacturing purposes."—A covenant to use property for "manufacturing purposes" would imply the right to use it for all purposes incident to such object. Madore's Appeal, 129 Pa. St. 15, 17 Atl. 804.

It is otherwise defined as "a building, the main or principal design or use of which is to be a place for producing articles as products of labor." Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Brock, 57 Pa. St. 74, 82.

The manufacture of drugs in a laboratory by a wholesale drug company, not amounting to one-half per cent of the trade, has been regarded as merely incidental to the trade and not sufficient to show that the company was operating a factory within the meaning of an ordinance requiring fire-escapes. Hernischel v. Texas Drug Co., 26 Tex. Civ. App. 1, 61 S. W. 419.

Dec. 634, where it is said: "It is true, that where a manufactory or a mill is conveyed or delivered, by any general name or description which embraces all its essential parts as such manufactory or mill, the machinery and all the necessary parts of the establishment pass, whether affixed to the freehold or not." And see FIRE INSURANCE, 19 Cyc. 666, text and note 65.

"A starch manufactory substantially includes the fixtures, etc., necessary to the processes of such manufacture." Peoria M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 18 Ill. 553, 562.

It seems the term "flax factory" is broad enough to cover machinery for the manufacture of rope when a usual part of the business of the flax factory and the introduction of such machinery is not an increase of the hazard in insurance on a flax factory. Aurora F. Ins. Co. v. Eddy, 55 Ill. 213.

"The term 'factories' embraces the fixed machinery necessary to operate the factories, and the reason is, that without such necessary machinery, the buildings would not in fact be factories. A building is no more a factory without machinery, than machinery would be a factory without a building." Mayhew v. Hardesty, 8 Md. 479, 495. In this case it was so held, concerning the term as used in a covenant in a lease, to keep a factory insured.

54. See Hernischel v. Texas Drug Co., 26 Tex. Civ. App. 1, 4, 61 S. W. 419, where it is said: "In Black's L. Dict. the word factory is thus defined: 'In the English law the term includes all buildings or premises wherein, or within the close or curtilage of which, steam, water, or any mechanical power is used to move or work any machinery employed in preparing, manufacturing, or finishing cotton, wool, hair, silk, hemp, or tow. Later this definition was extended to other manufacturing places.' The American legal definition of the word is practically the same. We do not understand, however, that its meaning is confined to such enterprises as use machinery and mechanical power, especially in construing the ordinance in question. The rule should not extend beyond the reason for its application, but should extend at least that far. There are doubtless enterprises in this country using no machinery of any sort, and yet, in the strictest sense, coming within the proper definition of 'factory.' Such, for instance, are cigar factories, or factories where garments are made, and in each of which a large number of employes may be engaged in a single building or a small space."

55. Liebenstein v. Baltic F. Ins. Co., 45 Ill. 301, 303, where it is said: "The word 'factory' does not necessarily mean a single building or edifice, but may apply to several, where they are used in connection with each other, for a common purpose, and stand together in the same inclosure. This is popular usage, and also that of the lexicographers."

Where one of two buildings is specified by further description.—Where there were two buildings which might both have been included under the single term as one "manufactory," but an insurance policy specified one of them by further description, it was synonymous with mill, the former being a general term, while the latter is a specific term,⁵⁶ and a factory may contain several mills.⁵⁷ Various establishments have been held to be factories or manufactories under certain statutes,⁵⁸ and the statutory meaning is sometimes wider than the common definition.⁵⁹ The deed of a "factory" passes the land on which it stands, and the water privilege, if any, therewith⁶⁰ and, it has been held, the machinery and other articles essential to the factory;⁶¹ but the machinery in a factory is not always necessarily a part of it so as to pass by the term.⁶² A deed of land "on which is a factory" does not include personalty, although essential to the factory.⁶³ Machinery alone does

A concern carrying on the business of manufacturing for sale in the market, without reference to the supply of the local community, of a particular article, "is a factory and not a mechanic's shop." Atwood v. De Forest, 19 Conn. 513.

"Factory" or "work shop" is defined in an act to regulate the manufacture of clothing, wearing apparel and other articles, and providing for an eight hour day of labor, etc., as "any place where goods or products are manufactured or repaired, cleaned or sorted, in whole or in part, for sale or for wages." Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 40 N. E. 454, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 29 L. R. A. 79.

Sawmills.—It has been intimated in one decision that sawmills are "manufactories." State v. A. W. Wilbert's Sons Lumber, etc., Co., 51 La. Ann. 1223, 26 So. 106 (holding that sawmill operators were manufacturers within a constitutional exemption from license-tax); Plaquemine Lumber, etc., Co. v. Browne, 45 La. Ann. 459, 12 So. 485. Compare Jones v. Raines, 35 La. Ann. 996 [distinguished in State v. A. W. Wilbert's Sons Lumber, etc., Co., 51 La. Ann. 1223, 26 So. 106], holding that sawmills are not exempt from taxation under a constitutional provision exempting from taxation "the capital, machinery, and other property employed in the manufacture of . . . furniture and other articles of wood."

An annexed building commonly called an "ashery" and used since its erection for the purpose of depositing ashes therein and converting the same into potash is a factory within the meaning of a statute providing against burglary. Blackford v. State, 11 Ohio St. 327.

A shoemaker's shop where boots and shoes are made for customers, and a small stock of ready-made goods and misfits carried incidentally, has been held to be a manufactory within the meaning of an act giving mechanics employed in manufactories a preference for wages for six months next preceding an assignment for creditors, no distinction being taken between a manufacturing principally for customers and manufacturing for sale generally. Allen's Estate, 2 Pa. Dist. 87.

Ice-house.—Interpreting a New York statute in which "factory" was defined as including also "a mill, workshop or other manufacturing or business establishment where one or more persons are employed at labor," the court said: "We think that a commercial ice house, which is extensively equipped with machinery, and in which numerous operatives are employed, is a factory, within the meaning of the statute. The purpose of the statute is to throw a safeguard around the workmen employed in business establishments where machinery is in use. . . . By the statutory definition, a factory includes, not only a manufacturing establishment, but a business establishment where one or more persons are employed at labor, and the particular enumeration preceding the term, 'or other manufacturing or business establishment,' is too meagre to restrict the meaning of the term by the application of the rule ejusdem generis." Rabe v. Consolidated Ice Co., 113 Fed. 905, 907, 51 C. C. A. 535.

not constitute a manufactory.⁶⁴ A "store" is not a factory,⁶⁵ nor is a "storehouse," although used to some extent for manufacture.⁶⁶ "Factory prices," in the absence of a different established technical meaning, mean the prices at which goods may be bought at the factories.⁶⁷

II. ACTS AND POWERS INCIDENTAL TO MANUFACTURE.

A. In General. The question what acts and powers are incidental to manufacture so far as it concerns the business of manufacturing corporations may be answered broadly by the general rule that a corporation may acquire all such property and do all such acts as are reasonably necessary to enable it to carry on its proper business,⁶⁸ and that which is incidental to manufacturing as a corporate power is also incidental to it as carried on by a natural person.⁶⁹

B. Purchase and Sale. The incidents of manufacture, as such, apart from those which attach to business generally, consist in the acquisition of material and the disposal of the product.⁷⁰ property not made part of the realty, although essential to the purposes of the manufactory.

64. Halpin v. Insurance Co. of North America, 120 N. Y. 73, 23 N. E. 989, 8 L. R. A. 79, holding that where in a policy of insurance on "machinery and apparatus used in the business of manufacturing leather and morocco" there was the following clause: "If a building covered by this policy shall become vacant or unoccupied, or, if a mill or manufactory, shall stand idle or be run nights or overtime . . . this policy, if covering thereon, or on property therein, shall . . . cease and determine," the machinery did not constitute a "mill or manufactory," so that its standing idle did not work a forfeiture of the policy. And see Phenix Ins. Co. v. Holcombe, 57 Nebr. 622, 78 N. W. 300, 73 Am. St. Rep. 532, where machinery in a factory was held not to be the manufacturing establishment.

65. Thurston v. Union Ins. Co., 17 Fed. 127, 129, holding that "store fixtures" in an express exception from property insured under policies on a "building and additions, occupied for stores, and shoe factory," did not apply to the fixtures of the factory, the court saying: "Store is the American word for shop or warehouse, and is never applied to a factory."

66. Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Brock, 57 Pa. St. 74, holding that a building described in a policy of insurance as a storehouse, and used as such, is not a manufactory within an exception contained in such policy, although some articles are customarily made there.

67. Whipple v. Levett, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,518, 2 Mason 89.

Where the wholesale factory price was argued by one party to mean the wholesale factory price designated by the tariff; and by the other to mean other wholesale prices of different grades of goods, according to a custom among cotton manufacturers in Connecticut and Rhode Island, it was held that the question was properly left to the jury. Avery v. Stewart, 2 Conn. 69, 7 Am. Dec. 240.

68. See CORPORATIONS, 10 Cyc. 1096 et seq.

Mining when conducted by a corporation chiefly engaged in smelting, which in that case was held to be manufacture, was regarded as an incident of the smelting and not as a separate business. In re Tecopa Min., etc., Co., 110 Fed. 120.

Where the main business of a corporation was the manufacture of a product of chicory it was held that the other charter powers, to plant, cultivate, harvest, store, purchase, market, sell, and deal in chicory, were all incidental to the manufacture. Bolton v. Nebraska Chicory Co., 69 Nebr. 681, 96 N. W. 148.

69. See In re Chandler, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,591, 1 Lowell 478, 479, where it was said that "in the case of the lumber business, the land may be almost said to be incident to the lumber, which usually forms its chief value, and the manufacture itself is the main source of profit, independently of any cultivation or other use of the land."

70. Hastings Malting Co. v. Iron Range Brewing Co., 65 Minn. 28, 67 N. W. 652.

But the purchase or sale of that which is not the product of manufacture, or does not become so, even though it be a like article and convenient as an accessory to the business of a manufacturer in dealing with his own product, is not an incident to his manufacturing business. St. Paul Commercial Bank v. Azotine Mfg. Co., 66 Minn. 413, 69 N. W. 217; St. Paul Barrel Co. v. Minneapolis Distilling Co., 62 Minn. 448, 64 N. W. 1143; Winona First Nat. Bank v. Winona Plow Co., 58 Minn. 167, 59 N. Ultra vires.—The purchase by a manufacturing company of a license to sell the product of a foreign corporation is held to be ultra vires, and the issue of stock for that purpose unlawful. Powell v. Murray, 3 N. Y. App. Div. 273, 38 N. Y. Suppl. 233 [affirmed in 157 N. Y. 717, 53 N. E. 1130]. An executory contract for the purchase of goods by a manufacturing corporation, for the purpose of resale, is held to be ultra vires and

C. Borrowing Money. A manufacturing corporation may, it has been held, borrow money for the prosecution of its legitimate business and secure its payment by mortgage independently of statute.⁷¹

III. MANUFACTURER'S LIEN.⁷²

A. In General. The law is well settled that in general, where goods are delivered to be manufactured, the manufacturer has a lien on them for his labor and expenses bestowed on them.⁷³

B. Nature of Lien. A manufacturer's lien is a simple personal right of retainer and cannot be assigned or attached as personal property or a chose in action.⁷⁴

C. Possession Requisite. The lien attaches only to such goods as are in the possession of the manufacturer.⁷⁵

D. Effect of Special Agreements. The fact that a fixed price has been agreed upon does not prevent the lien from attaching.⁷⁶ But an express agreement fixing a future time of payment would be inconsistent with and destroy the right of lien.⁷⁷

E. Waiver or Discharge — 1. RELINQUISHMENT OF POSSESSION. A voluntary relinquishment of possession is a waiver on the lien.⁷⁸ But an involuntary relinquishment of the goods does not deprive the manufacturer of his lien.⁷⁹ cannot be enforced. Bosshardt, etc., Co. v. Crescent Oil Co., 171 Pa. St. 109, 32 Atl. 1120. But where a corporation was organized "for the purpose of manufacturing and selling all the varieties of glass" it was held that a contract for the purchase of goods intended to keep up the stock in trade, and that they might retain their old customers while the factory and machinery were under repair, was within the scope of the powers of the company, such purchase being auxiliary and incidental to the main purpose of its incorporation. Lyndeborough Glass Co. v. Massachusetts Glass Co., 111 Mass. 315.

2. PARTIAL DELIVERY. Partial delivery does not constitute a waiver of the lien

Power to borrow money and mortgage realty.—A corporation organized under the General Manufacturing Act (N. Y. Laws (1848), c. 40, as amended by Laws (1864), c. 517), may, it has been held, upon filing the requisite assent of two thirds of its stockholders mortgage its real estate to secure the payment of its debts, but not to raise money to carry on its operations. *Carpenter v. It is of the same nature as the lien of an attorney or solicitor on papers for his costs."

75. King v. Indian Orchard Canal Co., 11 Cush. (Mass.) 231 (holding that a manufacturer of brick made and burnt on land which the manufacturer does not own, and of which he has no lease, has not the possession of the brick requisite to entitle him to a lien); *Ruggles v. upon the remainder of the goods, where all the goods are to be manufactured at one entire price. In such case any part of the goods in the manufacturer's possession is subject to lien for the whole price.⁸⁰

3. ATTACHMENT OF GOODS. A lien is not discharged by attachment of the goods when the manufacturer receipts for them, asserting his lien, whether attached at the suit of another party or at his own.⁸¹

4. TORTIOUS CONVERSION. Where the manufacturer wrongfully converts the goods to his own use he cannot claim a lien on them.⁸²

MARINE COURT. A local court of record, which formerly existed in New York city, having original jurisdiction of civil causes, where the action was for personal injuries or defamation, and of other civil actions where the damages claimed did not exceed two thousand dollars. It was originally created as a tribunal for the settlement of causes between seamen.³³ (See, generally, COURTS.)

I. DEFINITION.

Marine insurance is a contract whereby one party, for a stipulated sum, undertakes to indemnify the other against loss arising from marine perils.¹

II. ORIGIN AND DEVELOPMENT.

The origin of contracts of marine insurance is clouded in obscurity and has been the occasion of much learned discussion by numerous and eminent writers on the subject. The conclusions reached can be hardly more than speculative, but the consensus of the best opinions is that insurance of marine risks was practised by the Greeks, the Rhodians, and the Romans during their respective periods of commercial supremacy. Whether it merely lay dormant after the fall of the Roman Empire or whether it continued to exist in another form is not satisfactorily explained. Its revival in modern times is traced to about the close of the twelfth or the beginning of the thirteenth century when it came into use in Italy and was subsequently introduced into England and the continental countries.²

III. INSURABLE INTEREST.

A. Necessity in General.³ As in other contracts of insurance,⁴ an insurable interest by the insured in the subject-matter of the insurance is essential to the validity of a contract of marine insurance.⁵

1. Williams v. New England Ins. Co., 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,731, 3 Cliff. 244, 248. See also North America Ins. Co. v. Com., 87 Pa. St. 173, 183, 30 Am. Rep. 352.

By statute in some states marine insurance is defined as "an insurance against risks connected with navigation, to which a ship, cargo, freightage, profits, or other insurable interest in movable property, may be exposed during a certain voyage or a fixed period of time." Cal. Civ. Code (1906), § 2655; Mont. Civ. Code (1895), § 3540; N. D. Rev. Codes (1899), § 4537; S. D. Civ. Code (1903), § 1883.

Policy covering risk of fire only.—The business of issuing ordinary fire insurance on boats navigating the Great Lakes and the high seas is marine insurance business, within Minn. Laws (1895), p. 392, c. 175. Dwinnell v. Minneapolis Fire, etc., Co., 90 Minn. 383, 97 N. W. 110. A policy of insurance on a vessel engaged in navigation, although it insures her against fire risks alone, is a maritime contract because of its subject-matter, and an action in personam to enforce payment thereon is within the jurisdiction of a court of admiralty. North German F. Ins. Co. v. Adams, 142 Fed. 439, 73 C. C. A. 555. But where the hazard is fire alone, and the subject is an unfinished vessel, never afloat for a voyage, the contract to insure must be regarded as a fire risk, especially in the absence of an express agreement that it shall have the incidents of a marine policy. Eureka Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 56 Pa. St. 256, 94 Am. Dec. 65.

Inland insurance.—The rules and principles of marine insurance must be applied to the interpretation of policies of insurance effected upon vessels exclusively employed in inland navigation, where not inapplicable by reason of the particular subject-matter. Caldwell v. St. Louis Perpetual Ins. Co., 1 La. Ann. 85.

B. General Requisites and Sufficiency.⁶ As a general rule if the insured will sustain loss from the destruction of the subject-matter or derive benefit from its preservation, this is sufficient to constitute an insurable interest.⁷

Insurable interest of reinsurer see infra, XI, B.

Interest defined and described.—"A man is interested in a thing to whom advantage may arise, or prejudice happen, from the circumstances which may attend it. . . . Interest does not necessarily imply a right to the whole, or a part of a thing, nor necessarily and exclusively that which may be the subject of privation, but the having some relation to, or concern in the subject of the insurance, which relation or concern by the happening of the perils insured against may be so affected as to produce a damage, detriment, or prejudice to the person insuring; and where a man is so circumstanced with respect to matters exposed to certain risks, or dangers, as to have a moral certainty of advantage or benefit, but for those risks or dangers, he may be said to be interested in the safety of the thing. To be interested in the preservation of a thing, is to be so circumstanced with respect to it as to have benefit from its existence, prejudice from its destruction. The property of a thing and the interest derivable from it may be very different. Of the first the price is generally the measure, but by interest in a thing every benefit and advantage arising out of or depending on such thing may be considered as being comprehended." Lucena v. Crawford, 3 B. & P. 75, 2 B. & P. N. R. 269, 302, 6 Rev. Rep. 623.

A direct interest is essential. Minturn v. Warren Ins. Co., 2 Allen (Mass.) 86; Marine Ins. Co. v. Walsh-Upstill Coal Co., 23 Ohio Cir. Ct. 191.

"It is the duty of a Court always to lean in favour of an insurable interest, if possible, for it seems to me that after underwriters have received the premium, the objection that there was no insurable interest is often, as nearly as possible, a technical objection, and one which has no real merit, certainly not as between the assured and the insurer."

A vested⁸ or proprietary⁹ interest is not essential, but such interest may be merely possessory,¹⁰ inchoate,¹¹ contingent,¹² defeasible,¹³ equitable,¹⁴ or expectant.¹⁵ However, in regard to expectant interests there must be a subsisting right or title in the insured at the time of the loss with respect to the subject out of which the expectancy arises.¹⁶ A person who, by reason of a contract or of his special

Statutory definition.—Every interest in property, or any relation thereto, or liability in respect thereof, of such a nature that a contemplated peril might directly damnify the insured, is an insurable interest. relation to the property, will incur a liability if a vessel or cargo is lost has an insurable interest.¹⁷

C. Time When Interest Must Exist. It was formerly the rule that the insured must be interested in the subject-matter at the time of effecting the policy and at the time of the loss;¹⁸ but the modern rule does not require that there be an interest existing at the time the insurance is effected, it being sufficient that such interest subsists during the risk and at the time of the loss.¹⁹ It is always necessary, however, that there shall be an insurable interest at the time of the loss,²⁰ except where the policy covers property "lost or not lost," in which case the insured is entitled to recover thereon, although he became interested in the subject-matter after a partial loss occurred, unless he purchased with knowledge of the damage.²¹ Where the insured parts with his interest after loss, he may nevertheless recover on the policy in his own name for the benefit of the real party in interest.²²

it was said by Lord Eldon: "In order to distinguish that intermediate thing between a strict right, or a right derived under a contract, and a mere expectation or hope, which has been termed an insurable interest, it has been said in many cases to be that which amounts to a moral certainty. I have in vain endeavoured, however, to find a fit definition of that which is between a certainty and an expectation; nor am I able to point out what is an interest, unless it be a right in the property, or a right derivable out of some contract about the property, which in either case may be lost upon some contingency affecting the possession or enjoyment of the party."

"A mere hope or expectation" is not an insurable interest. Riggs v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 125 N. Y. 712, 25 N. E. 1058, 21 Am. St. Rep. 716, 10 L. R. A. 684.

Mere practice to allow bounty.—In Devaux v. Steele, 6 Bing. N. Cas. 358, 8 Scott 637, 37 E. C. L. 663, it was held that the mere practice of the French government to allow a bounty to fishing vessels under circumstances which did not entitle them thereto under the law was a mere matter of expectation and did not constitute a vested interest which could be the subject of insurance.

D. Persons Who May Insure and Subjects or Interests Insurable—

1. OWNER. The owner of a vessel, cargo, or other property has in all cases an insurable interest in it to the full value;²³ and this is true even though he has made an executory contract for its sale,²⁴ or has sold the same conditionally, where the condition has not been performed,²⁵ or the legal title does not stand in his name,²⁶ or stands in his name as trustee only,²⁷ or is defeasible;²⁸ and where the subject of the insurance is a vessel, it may be insured by the owner, although it has been chartered and the charterer has stipulated to pay its value in case of loss during the voyage,²⁹ or it has been mortgaged, even to the full value,³⁰ or other

Registration.—Where by statute one has no title, either legal or equitable, in a vessel, unless it is registered in his name as required by the statute, one in whose name a vessel is not registered has no insurable interest as owner. Marsh v. Robinson, Anstr. 479, 4 Esp. 98, 3 Rev. Rep. 617; Camden v. Anderson, 5 T. R. 709, where it was held that one of several owners of a vessel whose name did not appear as one of the registered owners had no insurable interest in freight, since he was neither a legal nor equitable owner and the right to freight depended on ownership. In Moore v. Home Ins. Co., 14 L. C. Jur. 77, it was held that the deposit by the insured of bills of sale, and documents requisite for showing ownership of a vessel, with the collector of customs for registration was sufficient to give an insurable interest, although the actual registration was not made until after the loss of the vessel. It was further held in this case that if this were not so, the insured could fall back upon any anterior title registered, from which he could deduce insurable interest.

Subsequent forfeiture of vessel.—It has been held that the mortgagor of a vessel, with covenant for payment, and to insure for benefit of the mortgagee, had an insurable interest which was not destroyed by a subsequent forfeiture of the vessel by selling the same to an alien in violation of the act of congress of 1831. Wilkes v. People's F. Ins. Co., 19 N. Y. 184.

A mortgagor parting with the equity of redemption continues to have an insurable interest in the mortgaged property so long as he is liable for the mortgage debt. Buf-

wise transferred merely as security for a debt,⁸¹ except that where the vessel is bottomed the owner has an insurable interest only in the excess of its value over the amount of the bottomry bond.⁸² So also the indorsement and transfer of a bill of lading merely as security for a debt, even though the transfer is absolute in form, leaves an insurable interest in the indorser.⁸³ Of course if the owner of a vessel, cargo, or other property sells and transfers the same absolutely, reserving no lien or interest at all, he no longer has an insurable interest therein;⁸⁴ but he retains an insurable interest if he agrees with the purchaser to pay him if a loss shall happen,⁸⁵ or if he reserves a lien or takes back a mortgage for the purchase-money.⁸⁶

2. PART OWNERSHIP OR INTEREST — a. In General. One who is part-owner of a vessel, cargo, or other property may protect his own interest by insurance,⁸⁷ and the same is true of one who is otherwise interested with others in a marine adventure;⁸⁸ but a part-owner or person partly interested has no insurable interest in the shares of the other part-owners or persons interested.⁸⁹ This rule falo Steam Engine Works v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 401.

31. A transfer by bill of sale absolute in form, but which is intended merely as security, leaves an insurable interest in the transferrer. Gordon v. Massachusetts F. & M. Ins. Co., 2 Pick. Effect of reconveyance.—It has been held, however, that where the owner of a vessel sells and conveys the same absolutely, but afterward is revested with the title by a reconveyance, his insurable interest in the vessel is merely suspended during the time the title is vested in the vendee and is revived again on the reconveyance, so that, under a policy of insurance issued to him before the sale for a period extending beyond the time of reconveyance, he is entitled to recover for loss of the vessel after the reconveyance. Worthington v. Bearse, 12 Allen (Mass.) 382, 90 Am. Dec. 152.

policy previously taken out); Williams v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., Wright (Ohio) 542 (bill of sale reserving an interest as mortgagee). See Bell v. Western M. & F. Ins. Co., 5 Rob. (La.) 423, 39 Am. Dec. 542.

If the agreement does not create a lien, the seller does not retain an insurable interest. Folsom v. Merchants' Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 38 Me. 414, holding that a merchant who sells to a fishing vessel unconditionally an outfit for a voyage, under an agreement that he shall have a lien on the same, has no insurable interest therein after parting with the possession.

b. Stock-Holders. A stock-holder in a corporation owning a ship, cargo, or other property, while he has neither a legal title to the corporate property nor any equitable title which he can convert into a legal title, has such equitable rights of a pecuniary nature growing out of his situation as stock-holder as to give him an insurable interest in the corporate property to the extent of his shares.⁴²

The master of a vessel generally has no insurable interest either in the vessel or in the cargo,⁴⁹ and this is true, although his wife is a part-owner of the same;⁵⁰ but he may have such interest in the cargo where it is consigned to him.⁵¹ The master may insure his wages,⁵² commis-

When authorized to insure to secure advances.—Where a ship was purchased in the names of A and B, but the purchase-price was advanced by A alone, and B agreed to reimburse him and authorized him to insure the ship in his, A's, name, and in case of loss collect the whole insurance, this was held to give A an insurable interest in the whole ship. Provincial Ins. Co. v. Leduc, L. R. 6 P. C. 224, 2 Asp. 338, 43 L. J. P. C. 49, 31 L. T. Rep. N. S. 142, 22 Wkly. Rep. 929. But in Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 302, where A purchased the whole of a cargo in which B was to have one-third interest and which was charged to him by A, and the invoices and bills of lading were made out in their joint names, and B subsequently directed his correspondent to place the proceeds to A's credit, it was held that A had no insurable interest in the one third of the cargo which belonged to B.

Purchase by master.—The master of a ship who sells a cargo at public auction after an abandonment to the underwriters, and buys it in at the sale to prevent a loss, does not become owner of the property thereby, so as to acquire an insurable interest, for he cannot become the purchaser at a sale made by his authority as agent of the owners, and if he does so there is in effect no sale. Barker v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Fed. Cas. No. 992, 2 Mason 369. General average charges.—The charterer of a steamship, being primarily bound to secure or discharge general average contributions due upon the goods of the several cargo owners, and entitled to a lien thereon for his reimbursement, has an insurable interest in such goods, and under a policy insuring him against general average charges on the cargo may recover the amount of contributions so paid by him on cargo owned by others as well as by himself. *Dodwell v. 6. AGENTS.⁶⁶ Ordinarily an agent, who has no further interest than that usually arising from such relation, has no such insurable interest as will permit him to take out insurance on his own account,⁶⁷ but it is otherwise if the agent holds the legal title in trust,⁶⁸ or if he is also in the position of a bailee;⁶⁹ and if he is in possession of property upon which he has a lien for advances or disbursements he may insure for his own benefit.⁷⁰ So an agent may have an insurable interest by reason of expected commissions or profits.⁷¹ An agent of course may insure on behalf of the owners or others interested, if he is authorized to do so or his act is ratified.⁷²

7. CONSIGNEES.⁷³ A consignee who has no interest in the goods consigned cannot insure them on his own account;⁷⁴ but a consignee who has made advances,⁷⁵ or has accepted drafts or bills of exchange against shipments,⁷⁶ or has incurred liability toward⁷⁷ or is in possession of goods,⁷⁸ or who has power to sell,⁷⁹ has an insurable interest in them. And a consignee to whom goods are consigned for sale has an insurable interest in his expected commissions or profits.⁸⁰

8. PURCHASERS. One who has made a valid contract for the purchase of a vessel, cargo, or other property sufficient to transfer to him the title has an insurable interest,⁸¹ although the price has not been paid or even definitely agreed upon;⁸² and, in the case of goods, although the bill of lading taken in the seller's name remains undorsed.⁸³ So it has been held that an insurable interest in the purchaser exists where specific property has been appropriated by the vendor to the contract⁸⁴ or the property placed at the risk of the vendee⁸⁵ or put in his possession.⁸⁶ In like manner one who has an equitable interest under an executory contract for the purchase of a vessel has an insurable interest, although the vendor retains the legal title to secure payment of the balance of the price.⁸⁷ On the other hand, if the contract has not been completed and the title, possession, and risk remain in the vendor, the vendee has no interest which is insurable.⁸⁸

The form of contract and acts requisite to transfer title will be found fully treated elsewhere in this work. See SALES.

Necessity for writing under statute of frauds.—The fact that the contract is not in writing has in England been held to prevent an insurable interest accruing to the vendee (Stockdale v. Dunlop, 4 Jur. 681, 9 L. J. Exch. 83, 6 M. & W. 224), but a contrary view has been taken in Massachusetts (Amsinck v. American Ins. Co., 129 Mass. 185).

Registration.—Where by statute the purchaser or transferee of a vessel acquires no title, legal or equitable, unless the vessel is registered in his name, registration is necessary to give him an insurable interest in the vessel, or in freight, the right to which is dependent on ownership. *Camden v. "No arrival, no sale."—Persons who agree to purchase goods to be shipped by a certain vessel with a provision, "No arrival, no sale," have an insurable interest in the goods. *Harrison v. Partial deliveries.—Where the charterers of a vessel were also the purchasers of a cargo of wheat to be shipped on board, and the master of the vessel from time to time received delivery from the vendors, it was held that such delivery from time to time was a delivery to the purchasers, that it vested in them a right of possession and property, and that consequently they had an insurable interest in such wheat as had been so delivered. *Colonial Ins. 14. ASSIGNORS AND ASSIGNEES FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS. An assignee for the benefit of creditors has an insurable interest in the assigned property,¹² as has also the assignor, at least if the property assigned is of greater value than the amount of his debts.¹³

15. CAPTORS, PRIZE AGENTS, ETC. The captors of a vessel or cargo, even before condemnation, have an insurable interest in the property captured,¹⁴ although their right is liable to be defeated by an adjudication of the court of admiralty against them to restore the prize to the former owners.¹⁵ The sovereign also has an insurable interest in a prize,¹⁶ and the captors, who must be taken to represent him, may insure for his benefit as well as their own.¹⁷ A prize agent appointed to act on behalf of all interested in the capture may effect the insurance on their behalf.¹⁸ Commissioners appointed by the crown for the care, management, and sale of prizes have an insurable interest in ships captured by a British man-of-war on their way to England.¹⁹

16. INSURABLE INTEREST IN FREIGHT AND PASSAGE MONEY — a. In General. Freight has always been considered a proper subject for marine insurance.²⁰ The right to freight results from the right of ownership, and therefore the owner is generally the only person having an insurable interest,²¹ and he has such interest, although the vessel sails under a charter-party,²² or, although the freight has been prepaid, if there be no agreement that it is to be retained by the ship-owner in all events.²³ Neither the cargo owner²⁴ nor the charterer has such interest in the freight to be earned by the ship,²⁵ except when the charterer sets up the ship as a general freighter²⁶ or uses it for the carriage of his own goods,²⁷ in which case he has an insurable interest in the freight to be paid to him or benefit accruing to him.

b. When Interest Exists. Where there is no contract and no part of the goods expected to be carried are on board, there is no insurable interest in freight,²⁸ although there are goods ready for shipment²⁹ or the master is provided with funds for the purpose of purchasing a cargo.³⁰ But where a part of the goods has been loaded and the balance is ready, there is an insurable interest in the whole freight.³¹ If the ship-owner has made a binding contract for freight with a third party,³² or has goods to be shipped on his own account,³³ and the ship is in readiness to receive them,³⁴ or if he has done something with a view of enabling her to receive them,³⁵ such as commencing a voyage to the port of loading,³⁶ he has an insurable interest, and this notwithstanding the contract is not in writing.³⁷

Illustration.—Plaintiff chartered his vessel to sail from New York to San Francisco, thence to Callao, thence to the Chincha Islands, and there to take on a cargo of guano for Hamburg or Rotterdam. Defendants thereupon caused plaintiff to be insured, "lost or not lost," several sums, respectively, on charter, primage, and property on board, "at and from New York to San Francisco." The vessel sailed in accordance with the charter, and was wrecked between New York and San Francisco, and condemned and sold. In an action on the policy it was held that plaintiff's interest in the guano charter commenced when his vessel left New York for San Francisco, and that defendants were liable. Melcher v. Ocean Ins. Co., 60 Me. 77.

c. Advance Freight. One paying freight in advance under a contract expressly providing that it is not recoverable in any event may cause the same to be insured; but if the freight is merely prepaid without any such stipulation, so that it is recoverable back in case of non-performance of the contract of carriage, the cargo owner has no insurable interest in it.³⁸

d. Passage Money. Passage money is insurable and is governed by the same rules as are applicable to freight.³⁹

17. INSURABLE INTEREST IN PROFITS OR COMMISSIONS — a. In Profits. Profits expected to be realized from a marine adventure are a proper subject of marine insurance,⁴⁰ and may be insured by a valued policy⁴¹ against any of the events by which the realization of profit might be defeated, viz., loss of the ship, or of the whole or a part of the goods, or delay of the voyage.⁴² To have an insurable interest in profits the insured must have a legal interest in the goods or adventure out of which the profits are expected to be realized.⁴³

Joint owners of cargo.—Where two of several plaintiffs in an action on a policy of insurance were owners of the vessel insured, and all were in copartnership and joint owners of the cargo, it was held that a sufficient interest in plaintiffs was shown. Bulkley v. Derby Fishing Co., 1 Conn. 571.

Under agreement for share of profits.—In an action on a policy of insurance on profits valued at one thousand dollars, where it appeared that plaintiff had made a contract with a third person that, in consideration of one thousand dollars paid by him to such person, he should have a right to take one half of any palm leaf imported by such person, on paying one half of the costs and charges; that plaintiff agreed to take one half of a certain cargo, and advanced six hundred dollars on it before its arrival, but that such sum was repaid him on learning

b. In Commissions. The commissions to be paid to the master,⁴⁴ supercargo,⁴⁵ or consignee⁴⁶ for the disposal of goods are insurable interests. It must, however, appear that the goods were on board or were ready and had been contracted to be put on board at the time of the loss.⁴⁷ The assignee of commissions as security also has an insurable interest therein.⁴⁸ Commissions for procuring a charter-party are not insurable.⁴⁹

18. INSURABLE INTEREST IN ADVANCES AND DISBURSEMENTS.⁵⁰ Persons making advances or disbursements for the benefit of a maritime adventure under circumstances and conditions which give them a lien on the ship, cargo, or freight have an insurable interest in the property against which their lien exists,⁵¹ but if no lien that the palm leaf had been discharged at Charleston in a damaged condition, and that there would have been a profit if the palm leaf had arrived safely at Boston, it was held that plaintiff had an insurable interest in the profits. French v. Hope Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 397.

47. Knox v. Wood, 1 Campb. 543, 10 Rev. Rep. 746. In this case A, residing in Dublin, having agreed with B at Jamaica to send out two ships annually, for which they were to provide cargoes, to be consigned to him, chartered a ship which was to proceed from Bristol to St. Thomas where she was to deliver an outward cargo (the property of another person) and thence to Jamaica, where she was to take in a cargo from B for Dublin, and by the terms of the charter-party, A, in consideration of guaranteeing the homeward cargo, was to receive a commission on the homeward freight. The ship was captured on her passage from St. Thomas to Jamaica. It was held that A had not then an insurable interest either in the commission on the freight or in the commission on the sale of the homeward cargo.

Advances to obtain crew, etc.—Where a part-owner of a schooner engaged in a joint trading venture with the other owners to the West Indies, at the request of such other owners of the vessel and cargo, made advancements necessary to provide the vessel with a crew, means of subsistence, etc., for the is created there is no insurable interest.⁵² The facts and circumstances essential to give a lien to persons making advances and disbursements will be treated elsewhere.⁵³

19. LOST AND FORFEITABLE PROPERTY — a. Lost Property. Property irrecoverably lost may be insured under a policy "lost or not lost,"⁵⁴ even though the insured's interest was acquired after an unknown partial loss.⁵⁵ If the insured have knowledge of the loss before the contract is concluded the contract is not enforceable,⁵⁶ but it is otherwise if the agreement to insure is concluded before, although the policy is not executed until after, the loss is known.⁵⁷

b. Property Subject to Forfeiture. The fact that property is liable to forfeiture does not prevent the owner from effecting a valid insurance upon it,⁵⁸ although it is otherwise if there has been a forfeiture.⁵⁹

IV. CONTRACT IN GENERAL.

A. Parties, Formation, and Validity — 1. WHO MAY UNDERWRITE. At common law any individual or association of individuals may be insurers of cut-bound and in-bound voyage, it was held that such part-owner had an insurable interest in the advances and disbursements to the extent thereof. International Mar. Ins. Co. v. Winsmore, 124 Pa. St. 61, 16 Atl. 516.

59. Fontaine v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 293. In this case a vessel was in-marine risks.⁶⁰ However, the business of insuring marine risks is generally conducted by corporations. The powers conferred and restrictions imposed upon them are treated elsewhere in this work.⁶¹ In some jurisdictions the business is by statute restricted to corporations or to particular corporations or associations.⁶²

2. WHO MAY EFFECT INSURANCE. A part-owner,⁶³ master,⁶⁴ ship's husband,⁶⁵ charterer,⁶⁶ or agent⁶⁷ has not by reason of such relationship any general authority to insure anything further than his own individual interest. But any of them may insure for the owners or other part-owners, if authorized by them or subject to their ratification.⁶⁸ The ratification may be made even after they have knowlsured at and from New York to St. Bartholomew, and at and from thence back to New York, with liberty to touch and trade at Martinique. The vessel discharged her cargo at Martinique and had taken in part of a return cargo when a loss happened. It was held that if the cargo she had taken in at Martinique was intended for the United States, it was a breach of the Non-Inter-course Law of the United States of March, 1809, which was then in operation, by which the vessel would be forfeited and the property immediately vested in the United States, so that the owners would have no insurable interest.

The property continues in the owner until actual seizure, and the seizure relates back to the time when the property became liable to forfeiture, thus preventing a recovery against the underwriter for the loss resulting from such previous liability. Clark v. Protection Ins. Co., 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,832, 1 Story 109. See also Lockyer v. Offley, 1 T. R. 252, 1 Rev. Rep. 194.

In England in the year 1719 an act was passed which restricted the marine insurance business and confined it to private underwriters and the Royal Exchange and London Assurance. 3. FORM AND FORMATION OF CONTRACT — a. In the United States — (1) IN GENERAL. The formation of a contract of marine insurance is governed by the same principles as the formation of other contracts,⁷⁵ and particularly of other contracts of insurance.⁷⁶ No precise form of words is required to constitute a contract of marine insurance.⁷⁷ The contract is usually contained in a policy, but the policy is merely the formal written instrument in which the contract is usually embodied.⁷⁸ Except as restricted by statute, the contract need not be in writing.⁷⁹ A contract of insurance is completed, when there is an assent to the terms of it by the parties upon a valuable consideration, and neither payment of the premium nor giving a premium note, nor the delivery of a policy to the insured, is a prerequisite to its consummation.⁸⁰ There must, however, be a mutual consent to the terms⁸¹ and mutual obligations assumed—the underwriter to pay the loss, if any, the insured to pay the premium.⁸² The unconditional delivery and acceptance of a policy creates a contract binding on both parties,⁸³ but if a policy is duly executed, it is not necessary, to render it binding, that it shall be actually received into the possession of the insured.⁸⁴ The policy need not state the precise interest or kind of property intended to be insured,⁸⁵ nor specifically enumerate the risks insured against,⁸⁶ but the commencement and termination of the risk must be expressed.⁸⁷

(II) BINDING SLIPS. Memoranda or binding slips containing a description of the adventure and the subject-matter and amount of insurance are usually issued by the underwriters or their agent prior to the execution of the formal policy, being intended to protect the insured in the interim. Subsequent memorandum requiring approval.—Where the agent of an insurance company was fully authorized to make insurance of vessels and had in fact on a previous occasion insured the same vessel for the same applicant, and in the instance under consideration actually delivered to him on receipt of the premium note a policy duly executed by the officers of the company, filled up and countersigned by himself under his general authority, and having every element of a perfect and valid contract, it was held that the fact that after the execution and delivery of the policy the insured signed a memorandum stating, "The insurance on this application to take effect when approved by E. P. Dorr, general agent," etc., did not make the previous transaction a nullity until approved; and therefore, although the general agent sent back the application, directing the agent who had delivered the policy to return the premium note and cancel the policy, the insured was entitled to recover for a loss, the agent having neither returned the note nor canceled the policy. *Ætna Ins. avail themselves of the invalidity of the contract on that ground, the courts will refuse to take cognizance of a cause based upon an unstamped policy.¹

4. KINDS OF POLICIES AND THEIR PECULIARITIES — a. In General. Marine policies may be classified into interest and wager policies, valued and open, time and voyage, and floating or running.

b. Interest and Wager Policies — (i) INTEREST POLICIES. An interest policy is one which shows by its form that the insured has a real substantial interest in the thing insured.²

(ii) *WAGER POLICIES*³ — (A) In England. A wager policy is one in which the parties by express terms disclaim the intention of making a contract of indemnity.⁴ Under the statute of George II,⁵ the insurance of English ships or goods and effects laden on English ships "interest or no interest," "without farther proof of interest than the policy," or, "without benefit of salvage to the insurer," are declared to be illegal as wager policies; and all policies containing clauses of similar import have been held to be within the statute.⁶ The statute extends to insurances on profits, commissions, and advances, and insurances against loss in respect to the non-arrival of a ship by a specified time.⁷ Wager policies were good at common law,⁸ but since the passage of the statute they will not be enforced even though the insurer disclaims taking advantage of the illegality.⁹

(B) In the United States. A policy is not considered a wager policy because it contains one or more of the clauses specified in the English statute, and it is only where the parties intend to game that the policies will be treated as a wager;¹⁰ but such policies are deemed policies on interest and the insured is entitled to indemnity only for his actual loss.¹¹ But a policy which is strictly a gaming policy, that is one in which the assured has no interest in the property insured, is interdicted on the ground of public policy.¹²

c. Valued and Open Policies—(i) VALUED POLICIES—(A) Definition and Nature. Policies are further classified into valued and open policies. A valued policy is one in which the parties by express agreement in the policy agree upon the value of the subject-matter of the insurance.¹³ The agreement upon a value does not make the policy a wager but is considered merely the valuation of the insured's interest.¹⁴ The effect of the valuation as fixing the extent of liability of the underwriters for losses under valued policies is treated elsewhere.¹⁵

(B) Valuation Applies to Insured's Interest. The valuation in the policy is treated as a valuation of the insured's interest in the subject-matter and not as a valuation of the entire object or thing which is the subject of the insurance.¹⁶

(c) On Freight; Applies to Each Voyage. The valuation of freight in a policy covering distinct voyages is presumed to apply to the freight on each voyage,¹⁷ but the presumption may be rebutted by circumstances.¹⁸

(d) Short Shipments. Where cargo is insured under a valued policy and but part of the goods intended to be shipped are actually put on board, if the value of the whole is a datum, the valuation will be proportionately applied to the amount of goods loaded;¹⁹ but where the value of the whole intended cargo is not known

Every policy on profits is necessarily a valued policy, the amount insured being the valuation of the expected profits. Mumford v. Hallett, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 433.

Policies not valued.—Where in a policy of marine insurance the space "valued at $—" is left unfilled, and no valuation is named in the indorsement, but merely the sum insured, it is an open, and not a valued, policy. Snowden v. Guion, 101 N. Y. 458, 5 N. E. 322. See also Mellen v. National Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 500. Distinct voyages.—An insurance, for a premium, for the voyage round, at and from B to C, with the privilege of one other port, in the same island with C, and at and from either of them back to B, on freight laden or to be laden, valued at the sum insured, is upon separate and distinct voyages, during the prosecution of which distinct freights were at risk, and to each of which, as they successively came into existence, the whole valuation in the policy ought to be applied, and a total loss on the homeward voyage paid for accordingly. *Patapsco Ins. or fixed the valuation is not to be considered in the estimation of the value of the partial shipment and the policy will be treated as open.²⁰ The same rules apply to a valuation on freight.²¹

(ii) OPEN POLICIES. An open or unvalued policy is one in which the value of the subject-matter is not fixed by the policy.²²

d. Floating or Running Policies—(i) DEFINITION AND CLASSIFICATION. A "floating" or "running" policy, more frequently referred to as an "open" policy, is a contract whereby the underwriter agrees to insure property of the insured, the particulars of which are to be subsequently determined in accordance with stipulations contained in the policy.²³ There have been adopted various forms of these policies, some providing that the insurance shall cover all shipments of a particular class; others leaving it solely to the caprice of the insured to subsequently declare what property he shall elect to have protected by the insurance; and a third class requiring both a declaration by the insured and an approval by the underwriter before the attaching of the policy.

(ii) POLICIES COVERING ALL RISKS OF A PARTICULAR CHARACTER. Under an open policy on goods covering all shipments of a particular character, and which the insured is bound to declare, the policy attaches to the goods as soon as,²⁴

"Carried or not carried."—Insurance was made on freight valued at the sum insured, "carried or not carried." A part of the cargo was on board when the vessel was driven on shore and lost. Columbia Ins. Co.*, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 273. And where a policy was effected upon freight, to "be valued at as under," and in the margin, nearly opposite, but a little above these words, the sum of £1,300 was written in figures, it was held that this was not a valued policy. *Wilson v. The object of the declaration is to earmark and identify the particular adventure to which the insured elects to apply the policy. Arnold v. Pacific Mut. Ins. Co., 78 N. Y. 7; *Davies v. Goods not contemplated by policy.—The policy cannot be extended by the declaration so as to apply to things not contemplated by and described therein. Shearer v. Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co., 14 La. Ann. 797; Oteri v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., McGloin (La.) 198.

What interest covered; insurance by carrier.—A steamship company took out an open policy on merchandise to be shipped on its steamers, which the company might agree to insure prior to the sailing of its vessels; and in the order in which, they are shipped.²⁵ The declaration should be in the order of shipment;²⁶ and in case of mistake, the insured may and is bound to rectify the declaration,²⁷ which may, in the absence of fraud, be made even after knowledge of a loss.²⁸

(iii) POLICIES GIVING ASSURED RIGHT TO ELECT WHAT RISKS SHALL BE COVERED. Where the policy leaves it to the election of the assured to determine what property shall be covered, a declaration of such property is absolutely indispensable to the attaching of the policy,²⁹ and the declaration must be at the time

any losses to be paid to it or order. Goods shipped by plaintiff were insured under such policy. The evidence showed that the bill of lading issued to plaintiff exempted the steamship company from liability for nearly all the losses covered by the policy; that the policy provided that it should not inure to the benefit of a carrier; that stipulation permitting cancellation exempted "pending risks"; that the carrier could insure third persons by entries and notices thereof to defendant; that losses on goods shipped by other owners, and insured under the same circumstances, had been paid without question; and that cancellation of the insurance on plaintiff's goods was sought to be effected only when it was learned that he had other insurance. It was held that the general ownership of plaintiff was insured, and the contention of the insurance company that only the steamship company's interest in goods was intended to be insured was unsubstantiated. Insurance Co. of North America v. Forcheimer, 86 Ala. 541, 5 So. 870.

Cargo policy will not cover ship.—Where the hull of a boat is insured under a certificate "subject to the conditions of open policy No. 2,273," and it appears that there is no clause in such policy which could cover the hull of a boat, it being a cargo policy, no recovery can be had in case of loss. Barry v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 62 Mich. 424, 29 N. W. 31.

Declaration of value.—Some policies provide for a declaration of value as well as of the subject-matter, and in such cases the declaration of value is essential for the purpose of making the policy a valued one as to that shipment, but is not a condition precedent to the attaching of the risk. Davies v. National F. & M. Ins. Co., [1891] A. C. 485, 60 L. J. P. C. 73, 65 L. T. Rep. N. S. 560; Harman v. Kingston, 3 Campb. 150, 13 Rev. Rep. 775.

A marine insurance company issued an open policy for seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars to D and authorized D to issue certificates against it to that amount. D issued to A a certificate for a specified period of time for an indefinite amount covering all shipments made by A. Subsequently D issued certificates so as to exhaust the seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars. A sustained a loss on goods thereafter shipped, and it was held that his insurance, being prior in time to the exhausting of the policy, was good. Hartshorn v. Union Mut. Ins. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 538 [affirmed in 36 N. Y. 172].

A fraudulent declaration as to value and extent of shipments, thereby concealing the extent to which certain policies had been exhausted, was held to be sufficient ground for canceling subsequent open policies written for the same parties. *Rivaz v. Reasonable diligence in making the declaration is all that is requisite (E. Carver Co. v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 214. See also Wells v. Pacific Ins. Co., 44 Cal. 397), unless a particular time for making it is provided for in the policy (Shearer v. Louisiana Mut. Ins. Co., 14 La. Ann. 797).

The contract of insurance on an open or running policy does not become complete until a declaration of a desire to insure is made by the assured, and until this is done the contract is inchoate and incomplete, and if not made at all, the risk will be regarded as not having commenced. Arkansas Ins. Co. v. Bostick, 27 Ark. 539.

and in the manner provided for in the policy.³⁰ But a course of dealing contrary to the provisions of the policy as to the manner of making the declaration will be construed as a waiver of the requirements.³¹ The assent of the underwriter is not necessary, as he has no option to reject the risk.³²

(IV) POLICIES REQUIRING APPROVAL AND INDORSEMENT OR ENTRY OF RISK.

In policies requiring the underwriter's approval of the risk and his indorsement of such approval on the policy or entry thereof in a book furnished for that purpose, such approval and indorsement or entry are necessary before a risk can attach,³³ and they must be in the manner stipulated in the policy unless the contract is modified by a contrary course of dealing between the parties.³⁴ The

What shipments to be reported.—A provision in an open policy, "Shipments to be reported to the agents of said company," will not be construed to mean all shipments, so as to avoid the policy for failure to declare shipments, where it was well known to the insurer's agents that the insured did not insure all shipments, and previous policies contained an express agreement to report all shipments. Callaway v. Orient Ins. Co., 63 Fed. 830.

To whom declaration made.—The declaration must be made to the underwriters or someone on their behalf. Harman v. Kingston, 3 Campb. 150, 13 Rev. Rep. 775. And a course of dealing by the underwriter in accepting premiums and paying losses where the declaration has been made to an agent will estop the underwriter from relying upon a provision in the policy requiring notice to be sent to its home office. Insurance Co. of North America v. Bell, 25 Tex. Civ. App. 129, 60 S. W. 262. When an open policy is issued on property "as per indorsement hereon, accepted by the company," and the risk is agreed upon, the premium paid, and the indorsement made by the agent, the insurance is effected. Otherwise, where the risk is "to be accepted." Wass v. Maine Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 61 Me. 537.

Mailing a letter, prepaid and properly addressed, to an insurance company, if done by general direction of their agent, satisfies a condition in a policy that the facts stated in the letter shall be "reported" to the company. Edwards v. Mississippi Valley Ins. Co., 1 Mo. App. 192.

Acceptance of premium.—Where a warranty in an open marine policy stipulated that all risks should be reported to the insurer as soon as known to the assured, acceptance, after arrival of cargo, of premiums on risks not properly reported, was held not a waiver of the warranty, so as to estop the insurer to take advantage of his right to deny his liability on a loss because of previous failure to report risks promptly. Camors v. Union Mar. Ins. Co., 104 La. 349, 28 So. 926,

Oral acceptance.—A provision that no risk

indorsement may be made after a loss has occurred, if the fact of loss is unknown to the insured.³⁵

e. Voyage and Time Policies³⁶—(i) VOYAGE POLICIES. A voyage policy is one which limits the duration of the risk between designated termini.³⁷

(ii) *TIME POLICIES*³⁸—(A) Definition. A time policy is one in which the duration of the risk is limited to a specified period of time.³⁹

(B) Application of Amount of Insurance. The amount of the insurance stated in a time policy on goods is not exhausted when once goods to the value of the amount stated have been put at risk, but continues throughout the period of the contract to protect all goods coming within its terms at any one time up to the amount insured.⁴⁰

(iii) MIXED POLICIES.⁴¹ A mixed policy is one which combines the characteristics of both a voyage and a time policy.⁴²

5. ILLEGALITY⁴³—a. In General. A contract of insurance upon any property or interest covering a voyage or adventure undertaken in contravention of either the law of nations or the laws of the country where it is effected or to be enforced is void.⁴⁴ And where there is any illegality avoiding the insurance as to should be binding "until accepted by the company and indorsed herein" does not render invalid an oral acceptance of a new risk by the insurer, under an agreement to indorse it on the policy at a later date. Emery v. Boston Mar. Ins. Co., 138 Mass. 398. Compare Kaatzentzin v. Western Assur. Co., 1 N. Y. St. 712, where it was held that a written indorsement was necessary under a provision that no shipment should be considered insured until approved and indorsed on the policy.

39. Leeds v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 8 N. Y. 351; 1 Arnould Mar. Ins. (7th ed.) 11. A policy of insurance on a vessel for twelve months is a time policy, although the language of the printed part was appropriate to a voyage policy, terminating the risk on her arrival in port, and being there moored in safety. Leeds v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., supra. And see Dudgeon v. Pembroke, 2 App. Cas. 284, 3 Aspin. 393, 46 L. J. Q. B. 409, 36 L. T. Rep. N. S. 382, 25 Wkly. Rep. 499 [reversing 1 Q. B. D. 96, 34 L. T. Rep. Rep.* 914], where a policy was effected on a ship from Jan. 22, 1872, to Jan. 23, 1873, both inclusive, and these words were written on a printed form, which also contained in print the words "at and from," and "for this present voyage," and other similar words commonly found in the forms of a voyage policy, and which had not been erased or stricken through. It was held that the policy was really a time policy and its character was not affected by the printed words thus negligently left in the form. See infra, IV, B, 1, b.

In England a time policy for more than twelve months is made illegal by 54 & 55

Vict. c. 39, § 93. A policy for twelve months followed by a voyage policy covering ship until arrival at a final port is void under the act. *Royal Exch. Assur. Corp. v. Renewal.—Where a policy of marine insurance insured a vessel for a specified time for a particular voyage outward, and after making the voyage, but before expiration of the time specified, the same underwriter insured the vessel for the return voyage by a certificate of insurance which by its terms was made "under and subject to the conditions" of the existing policy, it was held that the underwriter was not liable for a loss occurring after the time specified in the original policy. *Pitt v. part it will avoid it in toto.⁴⁵ But the illegality must exist during the course of the voyage insured;⁴⁶ and it seems that knowledge or a privity to the illegality must be brought home to the masters or owners.⁴⁷ A mere intention to do an illegal act will not avoid the insurance.⁴⁸

b. Violation of Revenue and Trade Laws.⁴⁹ An insurance upon goods or upon a vessel engaged in transporting goods, which are intended to be taken into a country in violation of its revenue laws, is illegal and non-enforceable in that country,⁵⁰ and the same is true of adventures undertaken in violation of an embargo,⁵¹ or of a law prohibiting trading in particular places,⁵² or prohibiting the importation or exportation of particular articles of merchandise,⁵³ and other enactments relating to trade and navigation.⁵⁴ But the violation of the revenue or trade laws of a foreign country will not invalidate insurance upon property engaged in such adventures.⁵⁵

c. Violation of Shipping Regulations. As a rule laws or regulations pertaining to the licensing, enrolment, or registration of a vessel,⁵⁶ its equipment, officers, or crew,⁵⁷ or the manner in which it shall carry its cargo⁵⁸ are but collateral to the voyage or trade, and a violation thereof does not invalidate the insurance. It has been held that failure to comply with a statute requiring that every vessel bound on a voyage across the Atlantic shall have on board, well secured under deck, a certain quantity of water, under the penalty of forfeiting a sum of money to the crew or passengers in case they shall be put on short allowance, does not render the voyage illegal, so as to invalidate a policy of insurance.⁵⁹ And so it was held where a false clearance was taken out in violation of a statute imposing a penalty therefor.⁶⁰

d. Intercourse With Enemy. All insurances upon trading adventures which are carried on by the subjects of one belligerent country with the subjects of another are illegal and void, unless they are protected by a special license.⁶¹ But neutral property may lawfully be carried on a neutral ship to an enemy's port and covered by insurance.⁶² Sailing under an enemy's license⁶³ or convoy⁶⁴ invalidates the insurance. (ii) ALIEN ENEMIES. But the insurance of property belonging to any alien with whose sovereign the insured's sovereign is at war is illegal and void on the ground of public policy.⁶⁸ And such insurance, although effected prior to the commencement of hostilities, is not enforceable even after the restoration of peace,⁶⁹ unless the loss occurred before the commencement of hostilities, in which case the right to sue upon the policy is merely suspended during the continuance of hostilities.⁷⁰ But an alien enemy may be given a license to trade and the license validates the insurance and enables the licensee to sue on the policy even during the continuance of hostilities.⁷¹

ambiguity.⁸⁰ Where a policy contains words which have no application to the particular insurance they may be expunged.⁸¹

b. Written and Printed Portions and Marginal Clauses or Riders. The written and printed portions of the policy are to be construed, if possible, so that both can stand;⁸² but if there is any inconsistency the written portion will prevail over the printed portion.⁸³ The same rules apply to marginal clauses and riders as to written portions of a policy.⁸⁴

Illustrations.—Where a policy of insurance contained the usual covenants and conditions used in policies on voyages from port to port; but the names of the ports were left blank, and the risk was described as "port risk in the port of New York," it was held, in an action thereon, that these words controlled the printed part of the policy, and limited and defined the risk insured against. Nelson v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 71 N. Y. 453. And where the printed terms of an open marine policy were for perils of seas, rivers, fire, and overpowering thieves, and the insurance company, by its agent, indorsed thereon "$2,000 on cargo, canal-boat Ben. Franklin, at and from this port, per Miami and Wabash Canals, to Covington, Ind., and landed, at 3-8, $7.50," it was held that the policy, by the indorsement, covered the ordinary risks of canal navigation. Protection Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 6 Ohio St. 553. But where the policy contained a printed clause which prohibited the vessel from certain waters, including the Gulf of Campeachy, and had written into it the words "excluding the Gulf of Campeachy," it was held that the written words were not for the purpose of qualifying the printed clause, but for calling particular attention to the Gulf of Campeachy, near which the vessel was when insured. Parker v. China Mut. Ins. Co., 164 Mass. 237, 41 N. E. 267.

It is only when the law is unsettled that evidence of usage can be admitted to explain clauses in a policy of marine insurance. Winthrop v. Union Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,901, 2 Wash. 7. And see Bargett v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Bosw. (N. No particular person contemplated.—When such a policy is obtained without intending to cover any particular cargo, but only to protect whatever cargo may be shipped in a certain vessel for a certain voyage, it will not inure to the benefit of a party who afterward ships his goods on the faith of it, and adopts the act of the person who obtained it, but does not take a valid assignment of it. Augusta Ins., etc., Co. v. Abbott, 12 Md. 348. A policy made at the instance of N on account of whom it might concern, the loss payable to H, for the sum of fifteen thousand dollars, is an agreement by the underwriters to insure all the interest to the extent of fifteen thousand dollars which shall be owned in the vessel at the time of her loss within the policy, and to pay the loss to H for the benefit of the actual owners. Henshaw v. Mutual Safety Ins. Co., 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,387, 2 Blatchf. 99.

Presumption that individual interest was intended to be covered.—Where a purchaser of a steamboat had run her as his own property and on his own account, an insurance by him for the benefit of whom it may concern will be presumed to have been for his own benefit, and he will be entitled to recover the insurance, although there is a contest as to the validity of his title to the vessel. *Frierson v. 3. DESCRIPTION OF INTEREST — a. In General. As a general rule the particular interest of the insured in the subject-matter of the insurance need not be specified.⁶ Thus the interest of a mortgagee⁷ or one having a lien for advances,⁸ or of a carrier,⁹ part-owner,¹⁰ consignee,¹¹ administrator,¹² or reinsurer¹³ need not be specified. But where the nature of the interest is such as to vary the nature of the risk then it should be stated.¹⁴ If the interest of the insured is specified it must be stated correctly,¹⁵ or there will be a variance in an action on the policy.¹⁶

b. "As Interest May Appear." Where the policy insures the person named therein "as interest may appear" the insurance covers each and every interest of the person named, whether that interest be in an individual or in a representative capacity;¹⁷ but it will not cover the interest of any other person.¹⁸

must be set forth in the policy with sufficient certainty.¹⁹ The use of the word "premises" in a policy covering property subject to marine risks refers to and is applicable to the subject-matter of the insurance whatever it may be.²⁰

b. Profits and Commissions. Profits cannot be insured by a policy upon the thing out of which the profits are expected to accrue.²¹ It has been held, however, that by an insurance on "property" on board a ship, effected in behalf of the master, whose only interest is his commission of a certain per cent on the cargo homeward, such commission is insured.²²

c. Bottomry and Respondentia. Nor can bottomry or respondentia be insured by a policy on ship or cargo,²³ except where there is a usage in a particular trade to so insure them.²⁴

d. Vessel—(1) IN GENERAL. A policy on a ship²⁵ generally covers the hull, sails, rigging, tackle, and boats,²⁶ also furniture,²⁷ provisions,²⁸ outfits,²⁹ and appurtenances necessary, suitable, or usual for vessels engaged in the particular trade. Wages paid seamen, although under extraordinary circumstances, are not covered by a policy on ship.³⁰ Where a vessel insured by name is disintegrated with a view of disposing of its parts, or is reconstructed so as to amount to a substan-ture of the good ship or vessel called —," etc.

25. The usual form of policy on a ship is "upon the body, tackle, apparel, and furnitially different vessel, the insurance does not cover;³¹ but if the repairs are not of such a character as to materially change the vessel the policy continues in force.³²

(II) MISNOMER OF VESSEL. Where there is a mistake in the name of the vessel insured or in which insured goods are to be carried, if the description in the policy designates the vessel intended with sufficient certainty or suggests the means of doing so, the policy is effective.³³ But if the parties have in contemplation different vessels there can be no contract.³⁴

e. Furniture. "Furniture" includes all those fittings or things in the nature of fixtures which, although not actually affixed to the ship, are provided by the ship-owner for use on the ship and are reasonably necessary to carry properly the kind of cargo ordinarily carried by such a ship.³⁵

f. Outfits. "Outfits" is a term of similar import to "furniture" and embraces all those objects necessary to the navigation of the ship and includes sails, rigging, boats, and provisions for the crew,³⁶ but will not cover property forming part of the ship's cargo.³⁷

g. Cargo—(I) IN GENERAL. Subject to the exception of property stowed on deck,³⁸ a policy on cargo covers all merchandise laden on board the vessel,³⁹ and includes money,⁴⁰ household furniture,⁴¹ oil, and other products of a whaling voyage;⁴² but it does not generally cover live stock⁴³ or their provender,⁴⁴ nor the outfit of a vessel,⁴⁵ nor a yacht in tow.⁴⁶

(II) TIME POLICY OR TRADING VOYAGE. Under a time policy or on a trading voyage on cargo the risk assumed by the underwriter to the extent of his subscription covers subrogated or substituted cargo as often as a change takes place.⁴⁷

Policy on outfit of whaling voyage.—An insurance on the outfit in a whaling voyage

h. Goods, Wares, and Merchandise. "Goods," "wares," and "merchandise" are comprehensive terms and cover a variety of subjects,⁴⁸ including coin⁴⁹ and bills of exchange.⁵⁰

i. Property. A policy on "property on board" will cover money or bank-bills carried for the purchase of cargo or received from sale of cargo⁵¹ and the insured's commissions upon cargo on board,⁵² but will not cover freight.⁵³

j. Proceeds. "Proceeds" of a cargo covers any property which by sale or barter is substituted for the original cargo and taken on board in lieu thereof,⁵⁴ but does not cover the original cargo which remains on board.⁵⁵

k. Catchings. A policy covering "catchings" of a whaling voyage includes the "blubber" or pieces of whale flesh, cut and on deck,⁵⁶ the oils and casks,⁵⁷ and may also be shown, by usage, to include sea elephants.⁵⁸

l. Freight. Insurance on "freight" embraces the compensation for the use of the ship or for the carriage of merchandise;⁵⁹ also the increment to the owner for carriage of his own goods;⁶⁰ but it does not cover goods or cargo,⁶¹ or profits does not terminate pro tanto with its consumption or distribution, but attaches to the proceeds of the adventure. Hancox v. Fishing Ins. Co., 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,013, 3 Sumn. 132. See also Swift v. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co., 113 Mass. 287.

48. A policy of insurance on goods, wares, and merchandise will cover a curricule. Duplanty v. Commercial Ins. Co., Anth. N. P. (N. Y.) 157.

"Goods, specie, and effects" belonging to a captain has been held to extend, by usage of trade, to money expended by him in the course of the voyage for the use of the ship, and for which he charges respondentia interest. Gregory v. Christie, 3 Dougl. 419, 26 E. C. L. 274.

"Lawful goods" includes all goods not prohibited by positive law of the country to which the vessel belongs and includes goods contraband of war. American Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 463 [affirmed in 15 Wend. 9]; Juhel v. Rhinelander, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 120 [affirmed in 2 Johns. Cas. 487]; Skidmore v. Desdoity, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 77; Seton v. Low, 1 Johns. Cas. "Upon freight bill" is an insurance that the vessel shall earn freight. Field v. Citizens Ins. Co., 11 Mo. 50.

"One-third loss of freight as per charter party."—A policy covering "one-third loss of freight as per charter party," where the charter-party provides that insured shall receive but two thirds of the stipulated freight in case of sea damage, covers one third of the freight at risk by virtue of the clause in the charter-party and is not an insurance merely of one third of the freight. *Griffiths v. accruing to the cargo owner,⁶² or compensation for carrying deck cargo unless such a mode of carrying the particular cargo is customary.⁶³ The charterer cannot insure the prepaid charter hire as freight eo nomine,⁶⁴ but he may insure advance freight or charter money by such designation where the same is in no event refundable,⁶⁵ and he may insure the compensation to be paid to him from carrying goods for others,⁶⁶ but not, it has been held, the benefit derived from the transportation of his own goods.⁶⁷ Where the freight on a trading voyage is insured the policy covers freight to be earned on substituted cargo.⁶⁸

m. Effect of Stowage on Deck. Where property is insured under a general description such as cargo, goods, etc., it will only cover such property as is stowed under deck,⁶⁹ unless the policy specifies that it shall cover deck cargo⁷⁰ or there is a general usage to carry the particular kind of property on deck.⁷¹

n. Effect of Time and Place of Loading. Where a policy on cargo is "at and from" a named port, "from the loading thereof," or other equivalent expressions are used, the policy only attaches to such goods as are taken on board at the specified port.⁷² Goods taken on board at a prior port are not covered, although they are on board in good safety at the port named,⁷³ unless a usage of trade sanctions the taking of cargo at another port than that named⁷⁴ or the policy shows an intent to include property taken on board elsewhere,⁷⁵ as where the phrase "laden or to be laden" is inserted⁷⁶ or the insurance is upon a trading voyage.⁷⁷ Goods loaded at a prior port and discharged at the designated port and there reloaded are covered by the policy;⁷⁸ but if the goods are merely taken on deck at such port and restowed, such port is not to be considered their port of loading so as to bring them within the policy.⁷⁹ The fact that the underwriter knows that the goods intended to be insured were loaded at a prior port does not alter the rule.⁸⁰

5. CONVEYANCE OF CARGO. Where the insurance is on cargo, if it be attempted to designate any vessel or class of vessels by which the cargo is to be transported, the cargo is only covered while on board the vessel designated or belonging to the class designated,⁸¹ unless from necessity⁸² or by custom⁸³ a transshipment is made.⁸⁴

No designation of particular port.—In the absence of a distinct statement in the policy of the port whence the voyage is to be made, the risk will commence from a port where the vessel lay when the policy was made, and where the property insured was taken on board. Folsom v. Merchants' Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 38 Me. 414.

Date of loading.—Where goods were insured "at and from all and every port, etc., on the coast of Brazil, and after the 17th of September, beginning the adventure upon the goods from the loading aboard the same ship at all and every port, etc., on the coast of Brazil, and from the 17th of September, 1800," it was held that the policy did not cover a cargo originally taken in before, and which continued on board after the 17th of September, while the ship was on the coast of Brazil, and after she left it on her return. Robertson v. French, 4 East 130, 4 Esp. 246, 7 Rev. Rep. 535.

Shipment "between" certain days.—A policy of insurance on goods to be shipped between two certain days does not cover goods shipped on either of those days. Atkins v. Boylston F. & M. Ins. Co., 5 Metc. (Mass.) 430, 39 Am. Dec. 692.

"Shipped from H after August 1st" will cover goods laden on board a vessel at H before August 1, where the vessel departs from H after that date. Sorbe v. Merchants' Ins. Co., 6 La. 185.

75. Wheresoever loaded.—Where the insurance is "from the loading thereof on board the ship wheresoever," etc., goods laden prior to arrival at port "at and from" which the risk commences are covered. Gladstone v. Clay, 1 M. & S. 418, 14 Rev. Rep. 479.

"Outward cargo to be considered homeward interest twenty-four hours after arrival at first port of discharge" was held to qualify the clause as to the place of loading and to make the policy cover the outward cargo. Joyce v. Realm Mar. Ins. Co., L. R.

Continuation of former policy.—Where a policy was on goods at and from G to any port in the Baltic, beginning the adventure from the loading on board the ship, and the policy was declared to be in continuation of a former policy, which was a policy from V to her port of discharge in the United Kingdom, or any ports in the Baltic, with liberty to take in and discharge goods wheresoever, it was held to cover goods which were not loaded on board at G but at V. *Bell v. 6. VOYAGE AND ADVENTURE — a. In General. In a voyage policy only the particular voyage described in the policy is covered by the insurance, and if the vessel sails on a different voyage, that is, is bound for a different terminus, the policy does not attach even though a part of the voyage lies over the same course.⁸⁵ Where the course is not designated in the policy there is an implied condition that the voyage shall be by the usual and regular course,⁸⁶ commenced within a reasonable time,⁸⁷ and performed with all reasonable expedition.⁸⁸ Only ports specified in the policy may be touched unless it is customary on voyages between the places named in the policy to touch at others en route for some purpose connected with the voyage.⁸⁹

b. Port to Be Determined. Under a policy which gives the insured the right

New York.—Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 4 Johns. 443.

Pennsylvania.—Savage v. Pleasants, 5 Binn. 403, 6 Am. Dec. 424.

England.—Parkin v. Tunno, 2 Campb. 59, 11 East 22, 10 Rev. Rep. 422; Blackenhagen v. London Assur. Co., 1 Campb. 454, 10 Rev. Rep. 729.

The term "voyage" in a policy means the whole voyage, from its commencement to its termination. Paddock v. Franklin Ins. Co., 11 Pick. (Mass.) 227. It means the enterprise begun, and not the route taken. Friend v. Gloucester Mut. Fishing Ins. Co., 113 Mass. 326.

It is a new voyage where the original voyage is broken up and the cargo forwarded on another vessel, even though the vessel after making repairs returns to the original port of departure and takes a new cargo under the original charter. Parsons v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 463. Also where a vessel, being insured "at and from A. to B., with liberty to touch at C.," went to C, and commenced her voyage thence, not going to A at all. Murray v. Columbian Ins. Co., 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 443. If a vessel be insured to trade between New Orleans and any port in the West Indies, United States, or Gulf of Mexico, New Orleans is one of the termini, and the vessel is not protected on a voyage between the West Indies and Savannah. Lippincott v. Louisiana Ins. Co., 2 La. 399.

Variation between voyage insured and charter-party.—The charter-party may be varied by subsequent instructions, and an insurance upon the new voyage, although different from that described in the charter-party, may be good. Hall v. Brown, 2 Dow 367, 3 Eng. Reprint 897.

Outward voyage frustrated.—An insurance effected upon an outward voyage will not cover a return voyage or a voyage to a new port of destination, although the vessel was prevented from visiting the original port of destination by an embargo. Savage v. Pleasants, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 403, 6 Am. Dec. 424; Blackenhagen v. London Assur. Co., 1 Campb. 454, 10 Rev. Rep. 729.

"Intended to navigate."—Where a policy described a steamboat as "now lying in Tait's Dock . . . and intended to navigate the St. Lawrence and lakes," it was held that the words implied no agreement to navigate the steamboat, and that consequently the insurers were liable, although the steamboat never left the dock. Grant v. Aetna Ins. Co., 8 Jur. N. S. 705, 6 L. T. Rep. N. S. 735, 15 Moore P. C. 516, 10 Wkly. Rep. 772, 15 Eng. Reprint 589.

Further voyage not covered.—A policy covering a specific voyage cannot be extended by implication to cover a further voyage, although circumstances (of war) make the further voyage necessary. Parkin v. Tunno, 2 Campb. 59, 11 East 22, 10 Rev. Rep. 422.

Intermediate ports.—The statement in a policy of marine insurance of the ultimate and intermediate termini of the voyage does not prohibit stopping at other intermediate ports, which by the course of navigation or the usage of trade are usually entered in making the insured voyage. In the absence of words excluding it, the course of navigation prescribed by usage may and indeed must be presumed. McCall v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 505. A voyage from one port to another, stopping at an intermediate port to unload and reship the cargo, in order to avoid confiscation, may be insured as a voyage from the first port to the last, without mentioning to elect as to one or more ports of destination, the insured having made an election is bound by it and cannot substitute a different port.⁹⁰

c. To Several Ports. A policy to B, C, and D covers a voyage to all or any of those ports. The vessel is not obliged to visit more than one.⁹¹ But where the voyage is described as to B or C it is not permissible to visit more than one of them.⁹² The ports named, if more than one of them be visited, should always be touched in the order in which they are named in the policy.⁹³

d. To an Island. Where either of the named termini of the voyage is an island, or "port or ports" on an island, the vessel may go to any port on that island and from place to place thereon;⁹⁴ but if "to a port" on an island, only the port specified may be visited, and if none is named only one may be touched.⁹⁵

e. "Port"—(1) IN GENERAL. As used in policies of marine insurance the term "port" is not interpreted in its restricted sense as being limited to a harbor, but it embraces any place where it is customary to load or unload vessels, even though it be an open roadstead.⁹⁶ Where it is necessary to determine what is within the confines of a particular port, resort must generally be had to the the intermediate port. Steinbach v. Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 129.

Visiting port for information.—A voyage being insured to either or both of two ports, and the master having elected to go to the first mentioned port, and having been prevented from doing so by temporary causes insured against, it is permissible for him to put into a third port to gain information as to which of the two ports he had best go to. Clark v. United F. & M. Ins. Co., 7 Mass. 365, 5 Am. Dec. 50.

"To a port of call and discharge and loading" does not permit the vessel to discharge cargo at one port and then proceed to another to load. McGivern v. Provincial Ins. Co., 8 N. Brunsw. 311.

Under a policy giving liberty to use one port between T and G, and from thence to N, the vessel cannot use a port between T and G, and also go to G. Perkins v. Augusta Ins., etc., Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 312, 71 Am. Dec. 654. The description of a voyage in a policy of marine insurance to a port on the north side of Cuba, "with the liberty of a second port thereon," means that the second port must also be on the north side. *Nicholson v. Failure to touch ports in proper order as a deviation see infra, VII, D, 5, a, text and note 88.

"And a market."—A vessel insured from B to S "and a market," "and at and from thence to a port of discharge," does not confine the vessel to taking ports in their geographical order. Deblois v. Ocean Ins. Co., 16 Pick. (Mass.) 303, 28 Am. Dec. 245.

"Liberty" of second port.—Insurance "at and from Norfolk to Curacao, with liberty of going to any other island in the West Indies . . . and at and from thence to Richmond," must be understood as insurance on a voyage to Curacao in the first place, and from that port to any other island, etc. Alexandria Mar. Ins. Co. v. Stras, 1 Munf. (Va.) 408. A policy at and from Martinique and all and every West India island warrants a course from Martinique to islands not in the homeward voyage. Bragg v. Anderson, 4 Taunt. 229, 13 Rev. Rep. 584. To the same effect see Metcalfe v. Parry, 4 Campb. 123, 15 Rev. Rep. 734. As to policies granting liberty see infra, VII, D, 10.

customary understanding.⁹⁷ It has been held not necessarily to include every place within the custom port of that name;⁹⁸ and also that it may include places in different custom ports.⁹⁹ As used in clauses indicating the exact place of commencement or determination of the risk or the place where cargo shall be loaded or discharged, it is understood in a more restricted sense and means that spot where it is usual for vessels of the particular class to load or discharge their cargoes at the port named.¹

(ii) NUMBER INCLUDED. Where the term "port" is used in describing the voyage or the termini of the risk, only one port is included;² but if the phrase "port or ports" is used in the policy, it gives liberty to use more than one port.³

f. "Port Risks," "Lying Up," "While Running," "Safely Moored," Etc. There are various expressions used for the purpose of indicating the voyage, course, or risk intended to be covered or excluded by the policy, such as "port risks,"⁴ "lying up,"⁵ "while running,"⁶ "safely moored,"⁷ etc., and these are so diversified that it is not possible to classify them, but as many of them are frequently used their legal interpretation is given in the notes.⁸

No port at place.—Where the policy was from a "port in Amelia Island" evidence was admitted to show that by usage it embraced adjacent islands, there being no port in Amelia Island. Moxon v. Atkins, 3 Campb. 200, 13 Rev. Rep. 789.

"While in port."—In a policy for a voyage and "while in port after arrival," it was held that "in port" as applied to Greenock did not include the fairway of the navigable channel of the Clyde five hundred feet off the harbor works. Ports of loading and of discharge.—Where the voyage covered by a policy was described as "at and from N. to any port or ports, place or places, in any order, on West Coast of South America, and for thirty days after arrival in final port," it was held that the policy covered risks at both ports of loading and ports of discharge on the west coast of South America, and was not limited to risks at the port of final discharge of the cargo from N. and thirty days after. Crocker v. Sturge, [1897] 1 Q. B. 330, 8 Aspin. 208, 66 L. J. Q. B. 142, 75 L. T. Rep. N. S. 549, 45 Wkly. Rep. 271.

4. "Port risk."—An insurance against "port risk in a port" does not designate the particular risks but rather the scope of the adventure, and covers the vessel only while lying in port and before the commencement of any voyage to points beyond the limit of the port. Nelson v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 71 N. Y. 453 [affirming 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 417]. See also Slocovich v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 108 N. Y. 56, 14 N. E. 802.

5. "Lying up."—A policy on cargo on a vessel while "lying up" will cover, although the vessel is being towed in the harbor, there being a liberty for the vessel to be towed from place to place in the port. Dows v. Howard Ins. Co., 5 Rob. (N. Y.) 473. See also Pearson v. Commercial Union Assur. Co., 1 App. Cas. 498, 3 Aspin. 275, 45 L. J. C. P. 761, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 445, 24 Wkly. Rep. 951.

7. "Safely moored."—A change of moorings will not terminate a policy requiring the vessel to be safely moored. Anonymous v. Wetmore, 6 Esp. 109; Clarke v. Westmore [cited in Selw. 1003].

8. "New York harbor" has been held to include the whole of a voyage from Brooklyn

g. Waters To or From Which Vessel Is Confined or Excluded. The waters upon which the vessel is to navigate or is prohibited from navigating are written into the printed form and are varied according to the nature of the proposed adventure. The constructions placed by the courts upon some of these clauses are set forth in the note.⁹

7. DURATION OF RISK — a. Under Time Policy — (1) IN GENERAL. As we before noted, a time policy is one that limits the duration of the insurance to a specified period of time. The loss must therefore occur during the time named.¹⁰ If the policy is antedated it will cover the subject-matter from its date "lost or to Tarrytown. Petrie v. Phenix Ins. Co., 132 N. Y. 137, 30 N. E. 380.

"While at wreck."—A policy on four pumps "at and from Ardrossan to the 'Alexandra' steamer ashore in the neighborhood of Drogheda, and while there engaged at the wreck and until again returned to Ardrossan by the 'Sea Mew' salvage steamer, beginning the risk from the loading on board the said ship and (or) wreck, including all risk of craft and for boats to and from the vessel and while at the wreck," was held not to include the risks while the pumps were on board the wreck on a voyage to Belfast, a port of safety. Wingate v. Foster, 3 Q. B. D. 582, 3 Asp. 598, 47 L. J. Q. B. 525, 38 L. T. Rep. N. S. 737, 26 Wkly. Rep. 650. See also Difiori v. Adams, Cab. & E. 228.

"While at anchor" will not cover a vessel where it has been beached and her plugs taken out so as to permit the water to run in and out, and which, to prevent her moving, is fastened by iron rails to the bow and to one side of her stern and to her anchor on the other. Reid v. Lancaster F. Ins. Co., 19 Hun (N. Y.) 284 [affirmed in 90 N. Y. 382].

"Coasting trade."—A ship whilst on a voyage from Sunderland to Bordeaux is not employed in the "coasting trade." Harvey v. Beckwith, 2 Hem. & M. 429, 10 Jur. N. S. 577, 10 L. T. Rep. N. S. 632, 4 New Rep. 255, 12 Wkly. Rep. 896.

9. Atlantic ocean and Atlantic coast.—Under a policy covering a tug while navigating "all inland and Atlantic coast waters of the United States," the tug is covered while off Charleston bay and one and a half miles from the nearest mainland. The vessel is not confined to inland waters under such clause. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Knickerbocker Steam Towing Co., 93 Fed. 931, 36 C. C. A. 19. "To navigate the Atlantic ocean" coupled with a warranty not to use ports in eastern Mexico, Texas, or Yucatan, will cover a vessel, whose home port is New Orleans, while in the Gulf of Mexico on a voyage from New Orleans to Liverpool. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 121 U. S. 67, 7 S. Ct. 821, 30 L. ed. 858. But in New Haven Steam Saw-Mill Co. v. Security Ins. Co., 7 Fed. 847, the "Atlantic coast" was held to mean the coast of the Atlantic ocean and not the Gulf of Mexico. Compare infra, this note.

Inland waters are canals, lakes, streams, rivers, watercourses, inlets, bays, etc., and

Difference in time between place of contract and place of loss.—Where a vessel was lost on the day the policy expired, and the time of the place of loss and of the place of contract differed on account of the difference of their longitude, so that the loss occurred before noon by the time of the place where the contract was made, and after noon by the time of the place of the loss, it was held that the time must be reckoned according to the longitude of the place where the contract was made and to be performed. Walker v. Protection Ins. Co., 29 Me. 317.

Continuation of time policy by separate voyage policy.—Where a policy insured a vessel for a specified time for a particular voyage outward, and after the voyage was made, but before the time had expired, the same underwriter insured the vessel for the return voyage by a certificate made "under and subject to the conditions" of the exist-not lost," although that clause is not inserted.¹¹ In the absence of any clause continuing the insurance it is immaterial where the vessel is at the termination of the period insured.¹²

(ii) VESSEL "AT SEA"; CONTINUANCE "TO PORT OF DESTINATION." It is, however, frequently provided that if the vessel is "at sea" at the termination of the stated period, the risk shall continue until arrival at her "port of destination." The phrase "at sea" as here used means that period while the vessel is on her voyage and not lying in port.¹³ If, however, she has quit her moorings in complete readiness for sea or has in any way commenced her voyage, although still within the confines of the port, she is considered "at sea."¹⁴ It does not have the effect of continuing the insurance where the vessel is lying in a foreign port,¹⁵ unless she is there involuntarily as from stress of weather, capture, or detention.¹⁶ The "port of destination" as used in this connection does not mean the ultimate destination of the vessel, but the following destined port in the course of the voyage.¹⁷

b. Under Voyage Policy — (i) ON SHIP — (A) "At and From." In a voyage policy upon a vessel, the time at which the policy is to become operative is usually designated as "at and from" a specified port. The construction of this designation depends upon the situation of the parties at the time the policy is underwritten.¹⁸ If the vessel, when the policy is underwritten, is not at the port designated the policy attaches from her first arrival there¹⁹ in good physical ing policy, it was held in an action on the policy that no liability accrued for a loss occurring after the time specified in the original policy, but before the commencement of the return voyage. Pitt v. Phenix Ins. Co., 10 Daly (N. Y.) 281.

Extension of time; transhipment of goods. — Where a policy is limited to forty days, the time consumed in making, with the written consent of the insurers, a transhipment of the insured goods from an unseaworthy craft, is not to be counted therein. Plant v. Eufaula Home Ins. Co., 41 Ga. 130.

Freight may be insured by a time policy, although for a period short of the time necessary to complete the voyage on which such freight is to be earned. Michael v. Gillespy, 2 C. B. N. Where port of destination is specified. — An insurance for twelve months, with liberty of the globe, and, if at sea at the expiration of that time to continue until "arrival at port of destination in the United States," was held to terminate at the expiration of the twelve months unless the vessel was at sea and on a voyage to her port of destination in the United States. *Eyre v. (B) "From, From 'Sailing,' Etc." Where the insurance is "from" a port, the risk attaches only from the time the vessel sails in complete readiness for the voyage and does not cover any risk "at" the designated port.²⁴ And where a policy is made with reference to the time of sailing, the vessel is considered as having sailed from the time she is unmoored and got under way in complete preparation for the voyage²⁵ with intent to proceed directly on her voyage.²⁶

(C) "To, 'Arrives,' Etc." The risk on a vessel under a policy "to" a place, without any provision as to her safety there, continues until the vessel is safely moored at the designated port in the usual place and manner;²⁷ and where the policy is to cover until the vessel "gets into" or "arrives" at a specified port it is interpreted in the same way.²⁸

(D) "Port of Discharge," "Final Port of Discharge," Etc. It is the general rule that a policy to "a port of discharge" terminates at the first port at which cargo is discharged.²⁹ But where the terminus ad quem is described as "port or ports of discharge" the risk continues until arrival at the port where the cargo is substantially discharged.³⁰ And where the insurance is to the "last" or "final" port of discharge the underwriters are liable until the arrival at the port where the cargo is finally discharged.³¹

(E) "Until Moored in Good Safety." It is usual to continue the risk until the vessel is "moored in good safety" for a specified period. The place of mooring, within the meaning of this clause, is that place where the vessel is to be discharged, and a mooring at any other place for any other purpose is not to be considered.³² "Good safety" requires that the vessel be in good physical safety as distinguished from a vessel mooring in a sinking condition or as a mere wreck;³³ but the vessel may be in good safety, although she is damaged or has lost an anchor or is in hazard of loss.³⁴ The designated period mentioned in the policy as to the duration of the risk after the vessel is moored in good safety commences to run from the time of day the ship is safely moored and the number of days is to be taken as periods of twenty-four hours running from such time.³⁵

(F) Termination by Closing of Navigation. Policies on vessels navigating inland waters sometimes contain a provision that the risk shall cease if in consequence of ice or the closing of navigation the voyage cannot be finished the same season. Under this clause mere delay by ice will not amount to a stoppage of the voyage.³⁶

(II) ON CARGO—(A) "At and From." A policy on goods "from" or "at and from," a particular port commences when the goods are placed on board the vessel,³⁷ and does not cover goods while in warehouse or while on the wharf waiting to be laden.³⁸ But if it is customary to carry the cargo in boats or lighters from the shore to the ship for loading, the policy will commence from the placing of the goods on board such craft.³⁹

(B) "Until Safely Landed." Usually the risk on goods is continued by the policy "until safely landed." Under this clause the risk terminates with the safe landing of the goods at the usual place of delivery,⁴⁰ covering while on craft upon which it is customary to tranship the goods from the ship to the shore.⁴¹ A delivery to the consignee is not necessary.⁴² The risk terminates upon each parcel as it is landed.⁴³ If the consignee receives the goods before they have been actually landed, as where he uses his own lighters to convey the goods from the

Risk of craft till goods landed; transhipment from lighters into export vessel.—A policy of insurance on goods which includes "all risk of craft until the goods are discharged and safely landed" does not cover the risk to the goods while waiting on lighters at the port of delivery for transhipment into an export vessel. *Houlder v. ship to the shore, the risk is terminated upon delivery to the consignee;⁴⁴ but it is otherwise where the consignee merely has the goods placed on public lighters for a like purpose.⁴⁵ A policy on goods "to" a specified port is construed similarly to goods insured as "until safely landed" and the risk terminates only upon landing of the goods or delivery to the consignee.⁴⁶

(III) ON FREIGHT—(A) Commencement. A policy on freight, like a policy on any other subject-matter, cannot attach until there is an insurable interest in the assured in the subject-matter. We have already noted at some length when such interest exists.⁴⁷ However, it is not always when there is an insurable interest in freight that a policy on freight attaches, but, as in the case of other subject-matters, the question is governed by the particular provisions of the policy. If the policy is "at and from" a named port the risk commences from the arrival of the vessel at that port, there being then an insurable interest in the freight,⁴⁸ or if no insurable interest is then existing, from the time such interest accrues.⁴⁹ But if the policy is merely "from" a given port the risk commences upon sailing from that port;⁵⁰ and where the policy is "from the loading," no risk attaches until that time, and the freight on goods which are not actually loaded on board is not covered by the policy.⁵¹

(B) Termination. A policy on freight is not terminated by the arrival of a part of the cargo at its destination where the balance still remains subject to loss from the risks insured against.⁵²

c. Injury Within Term and Loss After Expiration of Policy. Where the vessel during the course of the voyage or within the time insured becomes so injured that her destruction is inevitable she is considered then lost, although the actual destruction or loss does not occur until after the termination of the policy.⁵³ In England, however, the underwriter is liable only for the average loss which has actually occurred during the life of the policy,⁵⁴ and under some of the earlier decisions he was held to be completely discharged where the actual total destruction of the vessel occurred after the stipulated time.⁵⁵

d. Suspension of Risk. The policy continues effective for the whole period or voyage covered unless there is an express clause suspending it for a specified period or while within certain designated waters or places.⁵⁶ But where the policy is on time and the vessel limited to certain waters the risk is suspended during any departure from such waters.⁵⁷

8. DOUBLE INSURANCE⁵⁸ — a. Definition. Double insurance is where the insured procures two or more insurances upon the same interest in the same property and for the same risk.⁵⁹ If the persons insured or the risks, interests, or property are different it is not a case of double insurance.⁶⁰

b. Effect — (1) IN ABSENCE OF STIPULATION. In cases of double insurance, and in the absence of a contrary stipulation in the policy, the insured may recover the whole amount of any loss from any of the insurers,⁶¹ up to the amount of the policy, and for any deficiency he can recover the balance from any of the other

By the continental law of Europe and by English law prior to the decision of Lord Mansfield in Newby v. Reed, 1 W. insurers to the amount of their policies;⁶² or he can recover proportionately from the several insurers.⁶³ He cannot, however, under any circumstances recover from all the underwriters more than the amount of his loss.⁶⁴

(II) ON VALUED POLICIES. Where the policies are valued the insured cannot recover beyond the agreed valuation, and if the policies are differently valued he can recover up to, but not beyond, the agreed value in the policy sued on, less any sums received upon the other policies.⁶⁵

(III) RIGHT OF UNDERWRITERS TO CONTRIBUTION. The insurers upon paying a loss have a right to call upon the other insurers for a ratable contribution.⁶⁶

(IV) AMERICAN CLAUSE. To offset the effect of the foregoing rules there is now generally contained in policies of marine insurance what is commonly known as the "American" clause.⁶⁷ Under this clause the underwriters become liable according to the order of date of their policies, and the insured can recover from the second underwriter only where the amount of the first policy is insufficient to pay the loss,⁶⁸ and they are in such cases liable but for such proportion of the Prior open policy; American clause.—Where the subsequent insurance is on cargo with the American clause, and is valued at so much per piece, parcel, or pound, it does not matter whether the prior insurance is valued or unvalued, as the liability on the subsequent insurance is, in either case, to be determined by deducting the amount to be paid by prior insurers, calculated at the value named in the subsequent policy. *Minturn v. The clause "answerable, in case of prior insurance on vessel, only for so much as the amount of such prior insurance may be deficient toward fully covering the risk," prevents plaintiffs from recovering the excess of the value of vessel, when lost, over the amount of the prior insurance, not exceeding the amount insured in said policy. Stephenson v. Piscataqua F. & M. Ins. Co., 54 Me. 55.

67. The American clause is as follows: "If there be any prior insurance, these insurers shall be answerable only for so much of the amount as such prior insurance shall be deficient toward fully covering the premises hereby insured, and, in case of any insurance upon said premises subsequent in date to this policy, this company shall nevertheless be answerable for the full extent of the sum by them subscribed hereto, without right to claim contribution from such subsequent insurers," etc.

Part of risk covered by prior policy.—Where a prior policy covers a part of a voyage insured and a loss occurs during the voyage but after the termination of the prior policy, the underwriters on the second policy are liable for the entire loss. Kent v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 19.

A judgment against the first insurers is not conclusive that they, and they alone, were liable for the whole loss. Whiting v. Independent Mut. Ins. Co., 15 Md. 297.

Effect of special memorandum.—Where at the time a policy containing the American clause was signed, a memorandum was made by the president of the company, stating that in case insurance on the property should be loss as the amount they insure bears to the whole value.⁶⁹ And if the amount of property or interest at risk does not exceed the amount of insurance under the first policy, the second policy does not attach,⁷⁰ even though the prior underwriters have become insolvent.⁷¹ The clause is limited in its operation solely to cases of double insurance,⁷² and does not operate where the policies are concurrently executed.⁷³

V. PREMIUM.

A. Necessity of. The premium, paid or promised, being the sole consideration for which the underwriter agrees to indemnify the assured against loss, it is requisite to the validity of the contract.⁷⁴

B. Liability For—1. IN GENERAL. The party directing the insurance to be written, if he has any insurable interest, is liable for the premium.⁷⁵ Others interested in the subject-matter or adventure are not liable either directly or by Suspension of prior policy.—Where the prior policy provided that in case the insured vessel left certain waters the policy should be suspended until its return to those waters, it was held that a subsequent policy, containing the American clause, took effect only on the suspension of the prior policy and was itself suspended when the vessel returned within the limits covered by the prior policy. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Knickerbocker Steam Towage Co., 93 Fed. 931, 36 C. C. A. 19.

Continuing insurance.—One accepting a policy of marine insurance, providing for a continuance of the insurance at a pro rata premium after the term for which it was taken, if, at the end of the term, the vessel should be on a passage, is bound by the provision, and becomes liable, in the event stated, for the additional premium. Insurance Co. of North America v. Rogers, 78 Me. 191, 3 Atl. 283.

way of contribution for any part of the premium unless they authorized the party ordering the policy or have ratified his action.⁷⁶ In the United States the assured is liable directly to the underwriter for the premium.⁷⁷ In England, by the custom of Lloyd's, premiums of insurance are matters of account between the underwriter and the broker, and between the broker and the assured, without any privity between the assured and the underwriter. The broker has therefore a claim upon the assured for the amount of the premium, as the policy takes effect whether he has paid the underwriter or not, and whether the underwriter has, by the policy, confirmed the premium to be paid, or has taken the covenant of the broker to pay it.⁷⁸ And the underwriter cannot recover from the assured even though the policy contains an express promise by the assured to pay the premiums to the underwriter.⁷⁹

2. POLICY NOT ATTACHING. If the policy issued does not conform with the contract as previously agreed upon,⁸⁰ or the adventure is illegal,⁸¹ or for any other reason the policy fails to attach or the risk to run, there can be no recovery of premium from the assured.⁸²

C. When Payable. In the absence of agreement to the contrary, the premium is payable upon the delivery of the policy,⁸³ and a delivery without receiving the premium is not a waiver of the obligation to pay on delivery.⁸⁴

D. Amount. The amount of the premium is usually fixed in advance and stated in the policy. However, in open policies on goods and in other cases where the nature of the risk is not ascertainable at the time the policy is written, clauses are inserted stating a mode by which the amount of the premium is to be ascertained.⁸⁵ The mode stated in the policy is to be followed, and where the provision

Vessel out of time.—Under an open policy providing that the premium is to be fixed at time of indorsement, when the character of the vessel and time of sailing are known, if the insured, on giving timely notice of a shipment, state all the facts, the circumstance that the vessel was out of time does not exonerate the insurers; but it is for them to object on that account, and require the proportionate premium. *Rolker v. is merely that the amount of the premium is to be "arranged" or "fixed," the amount is fixed at a reasonable sum commensurate with the risk undertaken.⁸⁶ If the amount cannot be agreed upon by the parties, it will be fixed by the court.⁸⁷

E. Effect of Non-Payment. Payment of the premium is necessary before a policy of marine insurance will take effect, unless there is an agreement to the contrary or prepayment is waived by the insurer or its authorized agent.⁸⁸ In the absence of a custom or of a stipulation in the policy the insurance, where it has once attached, is not terminated by the failure of the insured to pay the premium or a premium note given therefor before the occurrence of a loss.⁸⁹ Promissory notes are frequently given for the premium at the time of effecting the policy, and where this is done the policy generally contains a clause declaring the effect

Rating of vessel.—Where a policy requires that a vessel shall not be below a certain "rate," this rate is not, in the absence of agreement to that effect, to be established solely by the rating register of the office making the insurance, certainly not unless the vessel was actually rated there; nor by a standard of rating anywhere in the port merely where that office is. If the vessel insured be not actually rated on the books of the office insuring, the rate may be established by any kind of evidence which shows what the vessel's condition really was. *Orient Mut. Insurance on cargo "as interest shall appear."—Where insurance is effected on the cargo of a vessel, in port and at sea, for a certain term, "as interest shall appear," the amount of the premium is to be regulated by the actual value of the cargo on board, from time to time, during the term of the insurance. Pollock v. Donaldson, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 510, 1 L. ed. 699, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,254.

Under an open policy reciting payment of premium at a specified rate, but providing that the premium on each risk is to be fixed at the time of indorsement, according to the rates of the company when the character of the vessel and time of sailing are known, if the insured, on giving timely notice of a shipment, states all the facts, the circumstance that the vessel was out of time does not exonerate the insurers; but it is for them to object on that account. Rolker v. Great Western Ins. Co., 4 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 76, 3 Keyes 17.

Expiration of contract on assured's failure to furnish particulars.—If a contract of insurance on the chartered freight of a vessel, in the form of a memorandum which purports on its face to contemplate the subsequent issuing of the policy, leaves the rate of premium "open for further particulars," and the particulars, of which the parties were then ignorant and which determine such rate, as shown by the charter-party, which is received by the assured ten days before the vessel sails on the voyage by which the freight is to be earned, he is bound to furnish the particulars to the insurer within a reasonable time, and, upon his failure to do so the contract expires by limitation. *Scammell v. Vessel unseaworthy.—Where the policy provided that the property should be held covered in case of breach of warranty, "at a premium to be hereafter arranged," and the vessel failed to supply sufficient fuel for the voyage necessitating the burning of its fittings, it was held that the value of the fittings so burned was not an excessive premium. *Greenock Steamship Co. v. Where the custom of an insurance company is to dispense with the signature of the assured to the premium note until after the policy is recorded, the omission to sign the note when the risk is taken does not render the contract void from want of consideration. *Warren v. of a failure to pay the note at maturity. These clauses are not uniform and there is some inconsistency among the cases construing them.⁹⁰

F. Right to Return—1. IN GENERAL. It is the general rule that where the risk for which the premium has been paid has not been incurred or run, whether owing to the fault, pleasure, or will of the insured, or to any other cause,⁹¹ or the policy, for any reason other than its illegality or fraud of the assured, becomes void, thereby preventing the risk from attaching, the premium shall be returned,

90. Not void, but voidable.—Under a provision that if the premium note should not be paid within fifteen days after maturity and demand, the policy would be void, it was held that the non-payment of such note did not ipso facto render the policy void, but only voidable at the underwriter's option; and that the underwriter could not wait until after the loss to exercise his option. Louisville Underwriters v. Pence, 93 Ky. 96, 19 S. W. 10, 14 Ky. L. Rep. 21, 40 Am. St. Rep. 176.

Return of pro rata premium.—Where the underwriter exercises its option of avoiding the policy it cannot recover the whole premium, but only a pro rata proportion thereof. Pennsylvania Ins. Co. v. Geraldin, 31 Mo. 30.

Set-off of contribution against loss.—By the rules of a marine insurance association the members insured each other's ships from noon of February 20 in any year, or from the date of entry of a vessel until noon of February 20 in the succeeding year; and the managers were empowered to levy contributions of one-fourth part of the estimated annual premium quarterly in each year, such premiums of insurance to form a fund for the payment of claims, and if any member should refuse to pay his contributions; thereto, his ship should cease to be insured, and he should thenceforth forfeit all claims in respect of any loss. On April 5, 1881, a loss, incurred in the years 1880-1881 upon a ship belonging to plaintiff, and insured in the association, was fixed by an average adjuster at $180. A call of $41, 10s., made on plaintiff on May 5, 1881, for the second quarter of 1881-1882, was by mutual consent set off against the loss. On May 13, 1881, the association paid plaintiff $100 on further account of the loss. On June 23, 1881, a call was made on plaintiff of $52, 16s., 8d., and on July 5, 1881, another call of $31, 4s. Plaintiff having tendered the balance due from him, the association refused to accept it, and during the pendency of an action to recover the full amount of the two calls one of plaintiff's ships insured in the association was wholly lost. It was held that plaintiff's ship did not cease to be insured, and that he had not forfeited his claim in respect of the loss. Williams v. British Mar. Mut. Ins. Assoc., 57 L. T. Rep. N. S. 27, 6 Asp. 134.

A clause making the policy void for non-payment of a premium note will not bar a suit on the policy to recover for a loss because the note is not paid at the time the action is brought, there being a further provision in the policy that in case of loss the premium note should be deducted before payment of loss, and the note not being shown to be due at the time of the loss. Meagher v. Home Ins. Co., 10 U. C. C. P. 313; Meagher v. Aetna Ins. Co., 19 U. C. Q. B. 530.

Unless note "satisfactorily secured."—The failure of the underwriter to return a guarantee of a premium which he had demanded of the insured will be considered as fulfilling the requirement of satisfactorily securing the premium. Corbett v. Anchor Mar. Ins. Co., 14 Nova Scotia 375 [affirmed in 9 Can. Sup. Ct. 73].

Waiver.—A policy provided that, in case any note given for the premium should not be paid at maturity, such failure of payment should terminate the insurance, and said note should be considered the premium for the risk thus terminated. The boat was lost after maturity of the note given for the premium, and a voluntary payment of the note, with interest, was made after the loss, to the clerk of the insurer at his office, against the expressed wish of the clerk made at the time of the payment. It was held that such payment did not waive the forfeiture. Muhleman v. National Ins. Co., 6 W. Va. 508.

Premium considered earned.—Where the policy provides that it shall become void for non-payment of the premium note at its maturity and the full amount of the premium shall be considered earned, the policy becomes ipso facto void after the date of the maturity of the premium note, and its subsequent payment will not restore the policy. *Wall v. and an action may be maintained to recover the same.⁹² But if the policy once attaches and any risk whatever is run the premium is considered earned and no part of it is required to be returned.⁹³

2. ABSENCE OF INSURABLE INTEREST. If the assured has no insurable interest in the subject-matter no risk is assumed by the underwriter⁹⁴ and consequently he is not entitled to retain the premium.⁹⁵ But if the assured have any interest, even though the same be contingent,⁹⁶ the premium paid is not recoverable.⁹⁷ And although the assured has no interest, yet if he waits until the risk has been run and the adventure safely completed, he will not be permitted to obtain a return of the premium on the ground of his lack of insurable interest.⁹⁸

3. MISTAKE. If from a mistake of fact a risk for which a premium has been paid is not run the underwriter is required to repay such premium.⁹⁹

4. MISREPRESENTATION AND CONCEALMENT. In cases of misrepresentation¹ or concealment² which are not fraudulent but which are of such a nature as to avoid the policy and prevent it from attaching to the risk, the premium must be returned.

5. BREACH OF WARRANTY. Where there is any breach of either an express or implied warranty whereby the policy fails to attach the insured is entitled to a return of the premium.³ But if the breach of warranty occur after the policy has attached there can be no return.⁴ Thus a policy on a vessel "at and from" a port attaches while the vessel is in port and a subsequent breach of warranty as to time or manner of sailing or as to its seaworthiness on sailing gives no right to require any part of the premium to be delivered up.⁵

6. DEVIATION. Where a policy is avoided on the ground of a deviation no part of the premium need be returned, unless the risk is divisible, as the policy must first attach before it can be avoided for a deviation.⁶

7. FRAUD. Although there are early cases to the contrary,⁷ it is now the settled law that any actual fraud on the part of the assured in procuring a policy to be underwritten will deprive him of any right he might otherwise have to a return of the premium.⁸ But fraud on the part of the underwriter in concealing or misrepresenting material facts will give the assured the right to recover back any premium paid.⁹

8. ILLEGALITY. Where a policy is void for illegality, as being a wager policy,¹⁰ or as being designed to cover any unlawful trade or adventure,¹¹ or for other reasons,¹² the insured as a general rule cannot compel a return of the premium, as the courts will not assist either party in enforcing an illegal contract.¹³ But it is otherwise if the illegality was not intended by the insured.¹⁴

9. WHERE RISK IS DIVISIBLE. Where the risk insured is from its nature or from the terms of the policy divisible and the policy is terminated before the whole of the risk is run, the premium is to be apportioned and the part covering the risk not run returned to the assured.¹⁵ The risk is considered divisible where the policy covers distinct voyages,¹⁶ but a policy "at and from" a port is not

Partial shipment under valued cargo policy.—Under a valued policy on cargo if the insured ships less than the agreed quantity or diverts a part of the original shipment he is entitled to a pro rata return of premium. Mutual Mar. Ins. Co. v. Munro, 7 Gray (Mass.) 246.

16. Rothwell v. Cooke, 1 B. & P. 172. In an insurance on a ship at and from Hull to Bilbao, warranted to depart from England with convoy, it was held that the voyages from Hull to Portsmouth, where she was to divisible so as to apportion the premium between the parts of the risk "at" and "from" the port.¹⁷ Nor where the whole risk is insured at one entire premium can there be any apportionment.¹⁸ And where a policy is at a certain per cent a month for several months or a year it is considered one entire premium for the whole period.¹⁹ The quantum of the return depends upon the circumstances of each case.²⁰

10. SHORT INTEREST AND DOUBLE INSURANCE.²¹ If the property be insured to a larger amount than its real value a proportionate part of the premium is recoverable for the short interest.²² But where the policy is a valued one no inquiry can be made as to the real extent of the interest unless it is fraudulent, and consequently there can be no surplus premium to recover.²³ In cases of double insurance the underwriters repay a part of the premium in proportion to their respective subscriptions.²⁴

11. STIPULATIONS FOR RETURN. It is sometimes stipulated in the policy that a part of the premium shall be returned under certain conditions or the happening of certain events.²⁵ The stipulation of this kind which has probably received the meet the convoy, and thence to Bilbao, might be considered as distinct; and in case of a loss between the two latter places, an apportionment and a return of premium might be demanded. Rothwell v. Cooke, supra. Upon a policy at and from London to Halifax, warranted to depart with convoy from Portsmouth, the contract and risk are divisible at Portsmouth, as two independent contracts and risks. Tyrie v. Fletcher, Cowp. 666. A vessel was insured from Malta to St. Petersburg for a premium "at and after the rate of forty per cent., to return fifteen per cent. if the vessel passed the Gut of Gibraltar on or before the twentieth of June last, and the risk ends without loss; or fifteen per cent. if the risk ends in safety at Gottenburgh." The vessel passed the Gut on the 9th of July, and while on her voyage in the English channel the supercargo received information which induced him to abandon the voyage to St. Petersburg, and go to London, where the vessel and cargo were seized. In an action for a return of the fifteen per cent last mentioned, it was held that the voyage was divisible, and that the underwriters, being discharged by the act of the insured from all risk from Gottenburgh to St. Petersburg, were bound to return the fifteen per cent. Ogden v. New York Firemen Ins. Co., 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 114.

17. Meyer v. Gregson, 3 Dougl. 402, 26 E. C. L. 264.

"At and from."—An insurance on a ship and goods at and from A to B, during her stay and trade there, at and from her port or ports of discharge in C, and at and from thence back to A, is an entire contract. Bermon v. Woodbridge, Dougl. (3d ed.) 781.

18. A custom to return part of the premium where the insurance is on a round voyage and the insured has no property on the return voyage is in conflict with a note given for the entire premium and cannot be set up as a defense to a suit on the note. Homer v. Dorr, 10 Mass. 26.

Where a policy was expressly apportioned on time and an abandonment was made for detention, it was held that the abandonment related back to the beginning of the detention and the risk was then terminated and a return of the unearned premium from that time should be made. Lovering v. Mercantile Mar. Ins. Co., 12 Pick. (Mass.) 348.

Variation in risks covered.—If the risks covered by the two policies vary it is not a case of double insurance and the above rule has no application. Columbian Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 233. See also Insurance Co. of North America v. Rogers, 78 Me. 191, 3 Atl. 283; and supra, IV, B, 8, a.

25. If "employed in eastern trade during whole currency of policy."—Where a policy on plaintiff's ship from March 13, 1899, to March 13, 1900, provided for the return of a part of the premium, "should the vessel be employed in the Eastern trade during the whole currency of this policy," and the ship was employed in such trade from March 13, 1899, until July 23, 1899, when she was lost, it was held that the ship had been employed in the Eastern trade during the whole currency of the policy. Gorsedd Steamship Co. v. Forbes, 5 Com. Cas. 413.

Vessel laid up.—A stipulation in a time policy for a return of a part of the premium for every uncommenced month if sold or laid up, the term "laying up" means a laying up for the season without being further employed most attention of the courts is the provision to return a part of the premium if the ship "sails with convoy and arrives." This has been held to mean a safe arrival,²⁶ but it is considered that there is a "safe arrival" notwithstanding there has been a general average loss²⁷ or the ship and cargo have been required to pay salvage.²⁸

12. DEDUCTION OF ONE-HALF PER CENT. In England there was formerly a well established custom to allow one-half per cent to the underwriter where the premium was returned; but there is no trace of this custom ever having existed in the United States, and it appears to have become obsolete in England.²⁹

VI. ALTERATION, CANCELLATION, ASSIGNMENT, AND REFORMATION OF POLICY, AND TRANSFER OF PROPERTY.

A. Alteration of Policy — 1. IN GENERAL. Any material alteration in the policy, after the same has been executed, if made without the consent of the underwriters, will vitiate the insurance.³⁰

2. ALTERATION OR MODIFICATION BY CONSENT. A policy may be altered or modified by the consent of both parties,³¹ and subject to the same exceptions as in the case of other contracts and restrictions, if any, imposed by statute, the alteration or modification may be by parol agreement.³² Where several underwrite on the same policy the consent of part of them to an alteration will serve to keep the policy in force as to them but it will be void as to those who were ignorant of the making of the alteration.³³

B. Cancellation of Policy — 1. BY PARTIES — a. In General. After the inception of the risk the underwriter cannot cancel the policy, unless there is a during the current year. Hunter v. Wright, 10 B. & C. 714, 8 L. J. K. B. O. S. 259, 21 E. C. L. 301.

Premium not recoverable in addition to total loss.—Where a total loss is recovered, there cannot also be a return of premium for convoy, because the total loss includes the entire premium added to the invoice price. Langhorn v. Allnutt, 4 Taunt. 511, 13 Rev. Rep. 663.

26. May v. Christie, Holt N. P. 67, 17 Rev. Rep. 608, 3 E. C. L. 36; Leevin v. Cormac, 4 Taunt. 483, 13 Rev. Rep. 654.

Arrival under circumstances relieving the underwriters for loss gives the right to receive back the agreed portion of the premium. Dalglish v. Brooke, 15 East 295, 13 Rev. Rep. 476.

Breaking up of the convoy does not terminate the right to a return of the premium where the vessel arrives. Audley v. Duff, 2 B. & P. 111, 5 Rev. Rep. 549.

27. Simond v. Boydell, Dougl. (3d ed.) 268.

30. French v. Patten, 1 Campb. 72, 180b, 9 East 351, 9 Rev. Rep. 571. See, generally, ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS.

Material alterations.—Inserting in the printed form of a policy any specific subject-matter after the policy has been executed will render it void. Langhorn v. Cologan, 4 Taunt. 330, 13 Rev. Rep. 613. The same is true of an alteration by changing the port of destination (Laird v. Robertson, 4 Bro. P. C. 488, 2

Eng. Reprint 333), giving a liberty to make an additional call (Forshaw v. Chabert, 3 B. & B. 158, 6 Moore C. P. 369, 23 Rev. Rep. 596, 7 E. C. L. 659), inserting an alternative port of destination (Campbell v. Christie, 2 Stark. 64, 3 E. C. L. 318), or enlarging the time within which the vessel is to sail (Fairlie v. Christie, Holt N. P. 331, 3 E. C. L. 135, 1 Moore C. P. 114, 7 Taunt. 416, 18 Rev. Rep. 515).

Immaterial alterations.—A policy "at and from A. and B." is not vitiated by inserting the words "both or either." Clapham v. Cologan, 3 Campb. 382. And inserting "and trade" in a policy "to Africa, and during her stay there and back with liberty to sell, barter, exchange, load, unload and reload cargo," is an immaterial alteration. Sanderson v. Symonds, 1 B. & B. 426, 4 Moore C. P. 42, 21 Rev. Rep. 675, 5 E. C. L. 721.

31. Ridsdale v. Shedden, 4 Campb. 107; Bates v. Grabham, Holt K. B. 469.

An agent generally has no authority to make an alteration in the policy. Bunten v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 254 [affirmed in 1 Abb. Dec. 257, 2 Keyes 667, 31 How. Pr. 640].

reservation to that effect in the contract, without the consent of the insured.³⁴ But the parties to the contract may mutually agree that the policy be canceled. There is nothing peculiar to marine insurance in regard to such agreements, but, as in other contracts, both parties must act upon any offer to cancel before any change has intervened in their relative situation.³⁵

b. Ignorance of Prior Loss. Where a policy has been canceled by consent of the parties in ignorance of an antecedent loss the underwriter is not discharged from liability for such loss, but only for losses occurring subsequent to the time of cancellation.³⁶ A cancellation under such circumstances will be rescinded in equity, although the mistake was of one party only.³⁷

2. BY COURT. If a policy is liable to be completely avoided, as on the ground of fraud, misrepresentation, or concealment, a court of equity may direct its delivery up and cancellation.³⁸ But where the policy cannot be so avoided, a court of equity cannot direct its cancellation as to any claim on which there is a good legal defense or declare that there is no liability upon it.³⁹

C. Assignment of Policy and Transfer of Property — 1. TRANSFER OF PROPERTY INSURED. A transfer of the property insured does not operate as a transfer of the insurance upon it, and where the transfer is absolute so that the insured ceases to have any insurable interest there can be no recovery upon the policy in case of loss.⁴⁰ But if the transfer is conditional the insured continues to Offer to cancel must be accepted as an entirety.—Wilkins v. Tobacco Ins. Co., 30 Ohio St. 317, 27 Am. Rep. 455 [affirming 1 Cine. Super. Ct. 349].

Authority of broker to cancel.—The authority given to a broker, when he is to effect a policy, does not extend to warrant him in canceling it. Xenos v. Wickham, L. R. 2 H. L. 296, 36 L. J. C. P. 313, 16 L. T. Rep. N. S. 800, 16 Wkly. Rep. 38.

Cancellation by corporation.—The cancellation must be made in the manner in which the underwriting company is enabled to act and if it is only authorized to act by writing the cancellation must be made in that manner. Head v. Providence Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 127, 2 L. ed. 229.

Notice of cancellation.—A policy of marine insurance dated April 5, 1880, for six months, provided: "This policy to continue in force from the date of expiration until notice is given this company of its discontinuance, the assured to pay for such privilege pro rata for the time used." October 9 the insured wrote to the insurer, inclosing a check for one monthly premium from October 5 to November 5. On November 6 there was a loss by a peril of the sea. It was held that the sending of the check for one month's insurance was a monthly payment, and not the notice of discontinuance provided for in the policy. Greenwich Ins. Co. v. Providence, etc., Steamship Co., 119 U. S. 481, 7 S. Ct. 292, 30 L. ed. 473.

Where an insured became insolvent and the premium remained unpaid, and the underwriter notified the assignee that it would not be bound unless the premium was secured, to which the assignee paid no attention, it was held that the underwriter was justified in treating the agreement to insure as abandoned. *Hubbell v. Pending salvage claim.—One who settles with the insurers for a partial loss, and surrenders his policy without notifying them of a claim pending for salvage, cannot, if the salvage be decreed, recover such further loss. It would be different if the notice were given. Batre v. Louisiana Ins. Co., 13 La. 577.

have an insurable interest and can recover.⁴¹ A mere change of ownership or interest in the subject-matter of a marine insurance will not avoid the policy, provided there be an insurable interest at the time of loss, unless there is a provision to such effect in the policy.⁴² A change in interest after a loss has happened clearly cannot be set up by the insurer to defeat a claim for the loss.⁴³

2. ASSIGNMENT OF POLICY. In the absence of a prohibition as to the assignment of a policy, a transfer or assignment thereof is valid and the policy remains in force for the benefit of the assignee, although no notice of the assignment is given to the underwriters.⁴⁴

3. EFFECT OF ASSIGNMENT. A valid assignment of a policy passes to the assignee all the rights of the insured,⁴⁵ and the assignee takes subject to the rights of the underwriter against the assignor.⁴⁶

4. ASSIGNMENT AFTER LOSS. Where the interest of the insured ceases before loss a subsequent assignment of the policy is ineffectual to give the transferee a right to recover for the loss.⁴⁷ But if the interest of the insured continues until

Indorsement of certificates.—Where certificates of insurance are indorsed without assignment of the policy, and the policy contains a provision that it may be assigned, the assignment of the certificates may be considered to have been made for the purpose of enabling the assignee to claim the insurance, and not as an assignment of the policy, where the transaction is for collateral security for advances made on the cargo insured. Delahunt v. Aetna Ins. Co., 97 N. Y. 537.

Short indorsement.—A cargo of wheat, fully insured, having fallen in value, was sold, including the freight and the full insurance at a reduced price. The policies were transferred to the purchaser, but with an indorsement limiting the transfer to an amount sufficient only to cover the price at which the cargo was sold. It was held that the policy might have been indorsed short by express reservation but that the insured had here failed to do so and therefore could recover no part of the insurance after a total loss. Partial assignment.—An assignment may be made to give the right to recover for an antecedent loss without conveying the right to recover for an unearned premium under the policy. Boddington v. after a loss the policy may be assigned and the assignee may recover thereon in his own name.⁴⁸

5. CLAUSES PROHIBITING TRANSFER OF PROPERTY OR ASSIGNMENT OF POLICY. Policies of marine insurance frequently contain clauses providing that the policy shall be void if the property be sold or transferred or the policy assigned without the consent of the underwriter.⁴⁹ These clauses are strictly construed and are interpreted as contemplating a complete change of ownership,⁵⁰ so that the policy is not affected if the insured gives a chattel mortgage on the property,⁵¹ or if he sells the same and takes a mortgage thereon for the purchase-money, with control of the property,⁵² or if the property is seized by a sheriff or marshal.⁵³

D. Reformation of Policy. When the contract of insurance is agreed to, the underwriter is bound to insert in the policy whatever that contract by a just and reasonable interpretation includes, and if he omits to do so a court of equity will direct its reformation.⁵⁴ The mistake must be mutual.⁵⁵ It may be either one of law or of fact,⁵⁶ and be in regard to the names of the persons insured,⁵⁷ to the voyage,⁵⁸ or to the time of commencement of the risk.⁵⁹ The reformation may be made even after knowledge of a loss.⁶⁰ The power, however, should be exercised with great caution.⁶¹

VII. AVOIDANCE AND FORFEITURE OF POLICY.

A. Misrepresentation⁶² — 1. DEFINITION. A misrepresentation is a false statement or assertion made by one party to the other, before or at the time of entering into the contract, with respect to some matter or circumstance relating to it.⁶³

2. DISTINGUISHED FROM WARRANTY. A representation is to be distinguished from a warranty in that it forms no part of the contract but is entirely collateral to it.⁶⁴ Also a warranty must be strictly complied with while a representation only requires a substantial compliance.⁶⁵

3. CONSTRUCTION. A representation is to be taken in the ordinary meaning as of the place where made,⁶⁶ and in case of ambiguity it is to be construed most favorably to the insured, it being the duty of the underwriter in such cases to ask explanation.⁶⁷

4. CONTINUATION. A representation of an existing fact once made continues until altered or withdrawn.⁶⁸

5. TO WHOM REPRESENTATION EXTENDS. A representation affects the contract only as to the person to whom it was made, and the fact that a misrepresentation was made to one underwriter will not affect the insurance made by a subsequent underwriter.⁶⁹

6. EFFECT OF MISREPRESENTATIONS — a. As to Facts. A substantial misrepresentation of any material fact or circumstance relating to the insurance avoids the policy,⁷⁰ even though it may be made innocently and without any fraudulent

As to amount of insurance.—In a proposal for the reinsurance of a ship in a company, it was stated that she was "insured only for four thousand pounds." This was the amount of the original insurance. The proposal also contained the amounts of insurances effected in other offices, but from this list an insurance effected without the assured's knowledge by a mortgagee was omitted. It was held that the words "insured only for four thousand pounds" must be construed as stating the amount of the original insurance, and not as a representation of the sum total insured in all offices whatever; the occasion on which, and the purpose for which, the words were used suggesting some limitation on their generality. *Anderson v. intent.⁷¹ But if the fact or circumstance misrepresented is not material to the risk it has no effect upon the insurance,⁷² unless made with intent to deceive.⁷³

b. Promissory Representations. A promissory representation must be substantially, but need not be literally, complied with.⁷⁴

c. Intention, Expectancy, Opinion, and Belief. A mere representation as to intention, expectation, opinion, or belief, although not fulfilled, will not avoid the policy unless made with a fraudulent intent.⁷⁵

Time of sailing substantially correct.—Representations that a vessel is about nine weeks out, when in fact she has been out ten weeks and four days, is not material, provided the latter period be within the usual time of voyage. Mackay v. Rhineland, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 408.

Nationality of cargo.—The representation of the insured that the cargo is American is not falsified by the vessel's carrying the baggage of French passengers. Vasse v. Ball, 2 Yeates (Pa.) 178. But a representation that a cargo is American is falsified if the cargo belongs to Spanish subjects notwithstanding it is furnished with American papers. Price v. Depeau, 1 Brev. (S. C.) 452, 2 Am. Dec. 680.

Last metaling of vessel.—A ship-owner stating that his ship had been last metalized in 1867, whereas only the bottom was then overhauled, and new metal put where required, does not make a material misstatement so as to vitiate the policy. Alexander v. Campbell, 1 Aspin. 373, 447, 41 L. J. Ch. 478, 27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 25.

Destination of vessel.—A representation as to the destination of a ship, if true at the time and not fraudulently made, does not avoid the policy, although the destination be afterward changed. Hubbard v. Coolidge, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,816, 2 Gall. 353.

A breach of a promissory condition not contained in the policy will not avoid it. Higginson v. Dall, 13 Mass. 96.

To "sail in ballast."—A representation in an insurance policy in time of peace that a vessel will sail in ballast is not violated by carrying ten barrels of powder taken on board without the knowledge of the owner. Suckley v. Delafield, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 222.

Substantial compliance is excusable where subsequent events not happening through misconduct prevent compliance. Driscoll v. Passmore, 1 B. & P. 200, 4 Rev. Rep. 782.

d. As to Information. A representation that the insured has information of a particular character relating to the risk does not make the insured chargeable with the truth of such information, but he is merely chargeable with the fact of having received it.⁷⁶

e. Fraudulent Intent. Any misrepresentation, whether of a matter which is material or not, if it is wilfully made with a fraudulent intent, avoids the policy.⁷⁷ But where the misrepresentation is of a material fact the fact that it was made innocently and without any improper motives will not prevent a forfeiture of the insurance.⁷⁸

7. MATERIALITY OF MISREPRESENTATIONS — a. In General.⁷⁹ A matter is said to be material to the risk where it is of such a nature that it would influence a rational underwriter in determining whether to accept a risk or in fixing the amount of the premium.⁸⁰

b. Particular Matters Material. A representation may be material, although it is of a matter which it is not necessary to disclose, and a misrepresentation as to the age,⁸¹ equipment,⁸² or particular condition⁸³ of a vessel is fatal to the insurance.⁸⁴ But if it does not appear that the underwriter was thereby induced to accept the risk, a misrepresentation as to the nature of the cargo is not material.⁸⁵ In a voyage policy a representation as to the situation of the vessel⁸⁶ or the time of sailing is immaterial;⁸⁷ but it is otherwise in a time policy.⁸⁸

c. Replies to Inquiries. Inquiries made of the insured must be truthfully answered, and the fact of making inquiries implies that the underwriter considers the matter material to the risk.⁸⁹

B. Concealment⁹⁰—1. OBLIGATION OF PARTIES. Contracts of marine insurance are uberrimæ fidei and there is an obligation to voluntarily disclose all facts and circumstances which are material to the risk and not within the knowledge of both parties.⁹¹ This obligation is not limited to disclosures to be made by the insured but includes also the underwriter.⁹²

2. REQUISITE DILIGENCE OF AGENTS AND BROKERS. The obligation to disclose material facts is not confined to facts which are within the personal knowledge of the insured,⁹³ but the law imposes upon his authorized agents the duty to exercise reasonable diligence in communicating such facts to the principal by the earliest and most expeditious usual route of mercantile communication.⁹⁴ The same degree of diligence is not required of all the insured's agents as is required of one having ordered or advised the insurance.⁹⁵ Where the insurance is effected through an agent or a broker;⁹⁶ the agent or broker must communicate to the underwriter all the material facts within his knowledge and the insured must exercise diligence to inform such person of the facts of which he is possessed.⁹⁷ But if material facts are known to the insured or his agents, other than the one effecting the insurance, and through no lack of diligence they are not disclosed to the underwriter, it is not a concealment.⁹⁸

3. MATERIAL FACTS — a. In General. The law only requires that material facts be disclosed, by which is meant facts which are material to enable a rational underwriter, governing himself by the principles on which underwriters in practice act, to judge whether he shall accept the risk at all, or upon what terms.⁹⁹

b. Sufficiency of Disclosure. The facts are not required to be set forth with unnecessary detail, but only sufficiently to call the attention of the underwriters thereto in such a manner that they can see that if they require further information they ought to ask for it.¹

c. Nature and Extent of Interest. The nature of the particular interest or the extent of the interest of the insured in the subject-matter is not generally material. Thus, a part-owner, mortgagor, mortgagee, or insurer need not disclose his particular interest unless asked.² But if the interest be special, and such as is Concealment by intermediate broker.—Brokers who had knowledge of a loss were employed to effect insurance on an overdue vessel. Without disclosing their knowledge they telegraphed their agents at L, in the name of the owner, to effect insurance with underwriters there, which, after some negotiations between the owner and brokers at L, resulted in a policy being issued. It was held that the concealment by the original brokers avoided the insurance. Blackburn v. Haslam, 21 Q. B. D. 144, 6 Aspin. 326, 57 L. J. Q. B. 479, 59 L. T. Rep. N. S. 407, 36 Wkly. Rep. 855.

d. National Character. Generally the national character of the vessel is not a material fact;⁴ but if it is such as to expose it to belligerent risks or otherwise increase the risk it is material.⁵

e. Directions For Procuring Insurance. The directions for procuring insurance, where they tend to show that the vessel is out of time, should be disclosed.⁶

f. Loss, Injury, or Peril of Subject-Matter. The loss of the subject-matter of the insurance is of course material to the acceptance of the risk, and in a retroactive policy so is the fact that the vessel has sustained damage;⁷ but the fact that the vessel has sustained damage is not necessarily material if the policy is not retroactive, as such damage forms an exception to the risk assumed.⁸ Information to show the subject-matter to be in extraordinary peril should be disclosed.⁹

g. Time of Sailing or Being Spoken. The time of a ship's sailing is not generally material,¹⁰ except in the case of a ship overdue or out of time.¹¹ In the latter case information as to when she was last spoken¹² and as to what special perils she fell in the track of is material.¹³

h. Voyage and Its Incidents. Ordinarily the name of the vessel is not material,¹⁴ nor that of the master,¹⁵ nor that the latter is sailing the vessel on shares,¹⁶ nor the length of time she has already been in port.¹⁷ That the vessel must remain in port for repairs beyond the time required for loading;¹⁸ that she intends visiting a port for which she has been granted liberty to call,¹⁹ or intends taking a course other than the usual one,²⁰ or has sailed from a second port in the course of her voyage;²¹ or that she has made a false clearance,²² or carries a general bill of lading,²³ are not facts which the insured is required to disclose in the absence of inquiry. But the true port of loading,²⁴ an intention to visit a port not in the regular course of the voyage,²⁵ the giving of special instructions to the master which violate the admiralty rules,²⁶ or the taking on board of papers increasing the risk of capture²⁷ are matters material to the risk and which require a voluntary disclosure.

i. Cargo. It is not necessary to disclose the particular nature of the cargo,²⁸ its condition²⁹ or ownership;³⁰ that it is contraband,³¹ or that other cargo is to be carried on deck.³²

j. Special Contracts. Where the insured has made any special contract in relation to the subject-matter, whereby others are relieved from their usual obligations, the terms of such contract are material to the risk.³³ It has been held, however, that failure to communicate the fact that the vessel is under charter-party is not such a concealment as will avoid the policy.³⁴

k. Matters Covered by Warranty. There is no necessity of communicating any fact which is covered by either an express or an implied warranty.³⁵

1. Seaworthiness. Therefore as a rule, in a voyage policy whatever forms an ingredient of seaworthiness need not be disclosed unless particular inquiry is made therefor,³⁶ and although a general inquiry is made in regard thereto, all the particulars affecting the vessel's seaworthiness need not be stated.³⁷ But under the English law, if the policy is on time, a full disclosure of facts pertaining to the seaworthiness of the vessel is requisite, there being no implied warranty covering the premises.³⁸

m. Other Applications For Insurance. The insured is not bound to disclose the fact that the risk has been declined by others or the estimate they put upon it, unless information on the subject is particularly called for.³⁹

4. FEARS OR APPREHENSIONS AND OPINION OR EXPECTATION. Mere fears or apprehensions founded on peculiar facts need not be communicated.⁴⁰ Nor is there any duty to disclose mere opinion, speculation, or expectation.⁴¹ But if the insured has reasonable ground to believe that facts material to the risk exist, the ground of such belief should be communicated.⁴²

5. RUMORS. There is no obligation to communicate loose rumors;⁴³ but if there is any material fact in connection with such rumor which is known to the insured he should disclose it,⁴⁴ and a failure to do so will avoid the policy even though the rumor prove false.⁴⁵

6. PUBLISHED INFORMATION. Published information as to matters of marine intelligence contained in papers received by and on file in the office of the insurer are generally presumed to be known to him;⁴⁶ but this presumption may be rebutted by proof that the person actually accepting the risk had no knowledge of such information.⁴⁷ If the insured have knowledge of any particular facts, material fact which the insured is under an obligation to disclose will vitiate the policy,⁶⁰ whether such omission is intentional or results from mistake, accident, forgetfulness, or inadvertence,⁶¹ and even though the insured may believe the facts to be immaterial.⁶² Fraud is not necessary.⁶³

b. False Information. If the insured has information material to the risk, the fact that such information turns out to be false does not counteract the effect of the concealment of such information.⁶⁴

c. Information Acquired Pending Negotiations. If, pending negotiations for a policy of marine insurance and before the same have culminated in a contract between the parties, material facts come to the knowledge of the insured, he is under the same obligation to make disclosure of them to the underwriter as if he had such information before making the application.⁶⁵ The obligation terminates, however, upon the acceptance of the risk so as to create a binding contract, although no policy be then issued.⁶⁶

10. WAIVER. The underwriter may waive the right to avoid the contract because of concealment of a material fact by the insured or by his agent or broker, and it does so if, with knowledge of such concealment, it elects to treat the contract as valid or fails to rescind within a reasonable time to the prejudice of the insured.⁶⁷ Mere delay in rescinding, however, where there are no acts indicating an election or conduct inducing the insured to refrain from procuring other insurance or otherwise act to his prejudice, does not amount to a waiver.⁶⁸ And where the risk has been accepted and a binding slip issued before knowledge of the concealment, the issue of a policy after acquiring such knowledge, in accordance with the custom, without any protest or notice that the contract will be treated as void, does not amount to an election and waiver, unless it is so intended or the circumstances are such as to induce the insured to act to his prejudice in the belief that it is so intended.⁶⁹ If the underwriter pays a loss after knowledge that the insured concealed material facts, he cannot recover back the money so paid.⁷⁰ Acts on the part of the underwriter with knowledge of a disaster to the vessel, but without knowledge that it was known to and concealed by the insured, do not waive the right to avoid the policy because of such concealment.⁷¹

A new contract operating as a waiver of concealment of the fact that the vessel had been aground and injured is not shown by a letter from the underwriter, after knowledge of the concealment, stating that he considered that his risk did not commence until the vessel should be surveyed and repaired, to which letter no reply was made by the insured. *Russell v. Intention to elect.—But where an underwriter who, after issuing a binding slip, has acquired knowledge of a concealment by the insured of a disaster to the ship, issues a policy, not because of any supposed obligation under the binding slip, but because he elects to take the risk notwithstanding the disaster and its concealment and cannot afterward avoid the policy. *Royal Canadian Ins. D. Deviation and Change of Risk ⁷⁴—1. DEFINITION. A deviation is a voluntary departure without necessity or reasonable cause from the prescribed or usual course of the voyage or of the manner of performing it.⁷⁵

2. DISTINGUISHED FROM CHANGE OF VOYAGE. A deviation is to be distinguished from a change of voyage. Where there is any unreasonable delay in commencing the voyage, the voyage is different from the one insured and the policy does not attach.⁷⁶ Also where the master or authorized agent determines, prior to the commencement of the risk, not to sail upon the insured voyage or to abandon the original termini of the insured voyage, there is a non-inception of the risk,⁷⁷ and the policy does not attach, although part of the voyage lies over the same course.⁷⁸ But the determination to abandon the voyage should be made to appear by clear terms or unambiguous conduct.⁷⁹ If the ultimate termini of the intended voyage

Several courses.—A ship insured from A to B sailed with intent to touch at C, an intermediate point. To a certain point the voyage was the same, from that point there were three tracks to B, one by the way of C, the two others by different courses. There were advantages and disadvantages attending each, and the captain must elect according to circumstances. The ship took the track by C, with intent to put in there, but was taken before she actually came to the point where she must have turned out of the track to B, by the way of C, for the purpose of putting into the harbor of C. The underwriter was discharged, because he was entitled to the advantages of the captain's judgment in electing which of the three tracks it was best to pursue when he came to the first dividing point. Middlewood v. Blakes, 7 T. R. 162, 4 Rev. Rep. 405.

Under liberty to "reship."—Under a policy of insurance which grants the privilege "to reship at all times and places," if the goods which were put on board one steamboat to be carried to a certain place were reshipped on the way, although unnecessarily, upon another boat bound to that place, in an action on the policy, such reshipment cannot be claimed as a deviation and avoidance of the policy, whatever might have been the result had defendants relied upon the delay or abandonment of the voyage. Fletcher v. St. Louis Mar. Ins. Co., 18 Mo. 193. See also Oliveron v. Brightman, 8 Q. B. 781, 55 E. C. L. 781, 1 C. & K. 360, 47 E. C. L. 360, 10 Jur. 875, 15 L. J. Q. B. 274. As to policies granting liberty see infra, VII, D, 10.

Open policy.—Where an insurance was made on shipments of gold to defendant by steamers generally, it was held that the insurance could not be limited to a line of steamers in which defendant was interested, although only such were contemplated by him in effecting the policy, and therefore the sale of his interests in such line did not terminate the contract. New York F. Mar. Ins. Co. v. Roberts, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 141.

96. Changing national character.—If a vessel be described in the policy to be a prize vessel, and afterward her national character is changed, so as to increase the risk, this discharges the underwriters. Seamans v. Loring, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,583, 1 Mason 127. The act of an American consul, in whose hands the vessel was placed by the crew after the death of all the officers at sea, in appointing a British master, which increases the risk, making the vessel a good prize if captured by a French cruiser, is not chargeable to the insured, and is no defense to the policy. Winthrop v. Union Ins. Co., 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,901, 2 Wash. 7.

Taking alien enemies on board.—The taking of Spaniards on board a British vessel at a time when England and Spain were at war was held not to be a deviation. Toulmin v. Inglis, 1 Campb. 421, 10 Rev. Rep. 715.

Removing copper sheathing.—Where the copper is taken off an insured vessel, the alteration being rendered necessary by sea damage, there is no deviation. Waller v. Louisiana Ins. Co., 9 Mart. (La.) 276.

97. Employing the vessel as a receiving ship for slaves is a deviation. Hartley v. Buggin, 3 Dougl. 39, 26 E. C. L. 37.

Increasing risk of capture.—If the insured do any act which increases the risk of capture and detention according to the common practice of the belligerent, it may avoid the policy. Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506, 3 L. ed. 421. See also supra, note 96.

Acts to avoid confiscation.—No acts done by the insured to avoid confiscation under the laws of a foreign power, if justified by the usage of trade, can avoid the policy. Livingston v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 506, 3 L. ed. 421.

A trial trip, after making repairs, to a port sixteen miles distant is a deviation from a policy "at and from" N to H. Fernandez v. Great Western Ins. Co., 48 N. Y. 571, 8 Am. Rep. 571. But a trial trip taken by a new vessel before beginning the voyage insured against is not a deviation. Thebaud v. Great Western Ins. Co., 84 Hun (N. Y.) 1, 31 N. Y. Suppl. 1084.

"Mating of vessels" not a deviation as a matter of law. Child v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 26.

6. DELAY. Unnecessary and unreasonable delay either in commencing or in prosecuting the voyage will constitute a deviation avoiding the policy.⁹⁹ The delay necessary to constitute a deviation must be an unreasonable delay,¹ or for a purpose not connected with the prosecution of the voyage.² Delays for the purposes of the voyage³ and not for an unreasonable length of time are not deviations. What is to be deemed reasonable depends on the nature of the voyage and the custom of trade.⁴

Waiting for permission to enter the port of destination, under a reasonable expectation of finally obtaining it, is not a deviation. Suydam v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 138. See also Schroder v. Thompson, 1 Moore C. P. 163, 7 Taunt. 462, 18 Rev. Rep. 540, 2 E. C. L. 448.

Coming to anchor off the port of destination where the vessel might have come directly in is a deviation. West v. Columbian Ins. Co., 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,421, 5 Cranch C. C. 309.

Illustrations of unreasonable delays.—One hundred and thirteen days' delay in commencing the voyage of a pleasure yacht insured "at and from" a port is a deviation. Palmer v. Fenning, 9 Bing. 460, 2 Moore & S. 624, 23 E. C. L. 660. Delay of four months at a Cuban port on a trading voyage was not a deviation. Gilfert v. Hallet, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 296. On a voyage from Dundee to St. John and thence to England, a detention of seventeen days at St. John was held a deviation. Reed v. Philips, 13 N. Brunsw. 171; Reed v. Weldon, 12 N. Brunsw. 460. Delay in sailing for thirty-three days was held a deviation. Augusta Ins., etc., Co. v. Abbott, 12 Md. 348. And fifteen months' delay was held unreasonable. Mount v. Larkins, 8 Bing. 108, 1 L. J. C. P. 20, 1 Moore & S. 165, 21 E. C. L. 466. Six months' delay, on the other hand, was held not necessarily unreasonable. Earl v. Shaw, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 313, 1 Am. Dec. 117.

Visiting several ports when time allowed therefor is exhausted at first port.—Where a vessel is permitted, by usage of trade, to go from one port to another to collect her cargo, and she unnecessarily exhausts at one port

7. CRUISING, ETC. Cruising, pursuing a vessel, or merely stopping to take possession of a prize, constitutes a deviation, unless authorized by the policy,⁵ even though the insured vessel is, to the knowledge of the underwriter, armed and equipped and authorized to carry a letter of marque;⁶ but the pursuit or capture of a hostile vessel in necessary self-defense is not a deviation.⁷

8. IN TIME POLICY. Under a time policy the vessel may pursue any track within the limits of the policy, and it has not the effect of a deviation for the vessel to depart from those limits,⁸ or to delay in the prosecution of a voyage.⁹

9. WHEN EXCUSABLE OR JUSTIFIABLE—a. Force and Necessity—(1) IN GENERAL. A deviation is said to be justifiable or excusable where it becomes necessary as the result of physical or moral force,¹⁰ and whatever is necessary for the safety of the ship, provided it is not excluded by the terms of the policy, may be done by the master.¹¹ However, the delay or departure must be strictly commensurate with the necessity which justifies or excuses it,¹² and the necessity sufficient to justify or excuse the deviation must be real and imperious,¹³ imminent and obvious.¹⁴ What is such must be determined by the circumstances of each case.¹⁵ A mere convenience is never sufficient to justify or excuse a deviation;¹⁶ nor is the whole time allowed by such usage, she cannot go to the other port without being guilty of such a deviation as will avoid the policy. Oliver v. Maryland Ins. Co., 7 Cranch (U. S.) 487, 3 L. ed. 414.

To expedite voyage.—A vessel being refused permission to enter or land any part of a deviation excused by a mere apprehension of danger not founded upon reasonable evidence.¹⁷

(ii) STRESS OF WEATHER. Where from stress of weather a vessel is compelled to alter her course, put into port, or otherwise delay her voyage, the deviation is excused.¹⁸

(iii) TO REPAIR, PROVISION, AND OUTFIT VESSEL. Where a vessel at the time of sailing is in all respects seaworthy, properly manned, equipped, and supplied, and a deficiency in any of these respects arises during the course of the voyage from an unforeseen cause, it is justifiable for the vessel to deviate to supply or correct the insufficiency of the vessel.¹⁹ Thus the vessel may deviate to make repairs which have become necessary during the voyage,²⁰ or to supply or augment the crew where a part of the original crew have been lost or become incapacitated after sailing,²¹ and where supplies have become exhausted or lost a deviation to replenish them is justifiable.²² But if the necessity of such deviation results from any insufficiency in the ship, its equipment, men, or provisions, it is not excused.²³ her cargo at the port of destination without performing a quarantine of forty days is not justified in proceeding to another port to enter and land its cargo. Robertson v. Columbian Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 491.

And see Leigh v. Mather, 1 Esp. 412, 5 Rev. Rep. 740.

Not bound to first jettison cargo.—The master is not bound to sacrifice his deck load before deviating, from stress of weather, to seek a port of refuge, unless the vessel was suffering from overloading. American Ins. Co. v. Francia, 9 Pa. St. 390.

Need not necessarily return to port from which driven.—If a ship is driven out of her loading port into another, and being there she does the best she can to get to her port of destination, she is not obliged to return to the port whence she was driven. Neither is it a deviation if she completes her lading at the port into which she was driven. Delany v. Stoddart, 1 T. R. 22, 1 Rev. Rep. 139.

Trying to dock.—A lighter insured for a voyage from Norwalk, Conn., to Jersey City is not guilty of a deviation because she makes fast to a Brooklyn dock, as a proper precaution to overcome the force of the wind and tide. New Jersey Lighterage Co. v. New York Mut. Ins. Co., 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 165.

A policy "at and from" a port will permit the vessel to go to the nearest port for repairs necessary to make her seaworthy for the voyage. Motteux v. London Assur. Co., 1 Atk. 545, 26 Eng. Reprint 343. Nor under such a policy will a delay during the time requisite for making necessary repairs be considered a deviation. Smith v. Surridge, 4 Esp. 25, 6 Rev. Rep. 837.

Nearest port.—The master is not bound to proceed to the nearest port geographically to make the repairs, but the matter rests in his discretion. Turner v. Protection Ins. Co., 25 Me. 515, 43 Am. Dec. 294. See also Silloway v. Neptune Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 73.

(iv) TO AVOID CAPTURE, ETC. When there is imminent danger of capture or seizure a vessel is justified in so altering her course as to avoid the same;²⁴ and pursuit or capture of a hostile vessel in necessary self-defense is not a deviation.²⁵

(v) TO JOIN CONVOY. It is not a deviation for a ship to leave the regular track for the purpose of seeking convoy, when bona fide for the benefit of all concerned, unless expressly prohibited by the terms of the policy.²⁶

(vi) TO OBTAIN MEDICAL ASSISTANCE. On humanitarian grounds a deviation to obtain necessary medical or surgical assistance for those lawfully on board the vessel is justifiable;²⁷ but not where the necessity arises from default on the part of the master or owner in failing to have such medicines and attendants as the nature of the voyage requires.²⁸

(vii) TO SAVE PROPERTY OR HUMAN LIFE. Stoppage on the high seas or a departure from the regular course for the purpose of saving property is a deviation;²⁹ but a stoppage or departure for the purpose of saving human lives is not a deviation.³⁰

25. Haven v. Holland, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,229, 2 Mason 230. Every vessel, whether armed or not, has a right of self-defense against hostile attacks, and the master has a large discretion on this subject. He is not bound to attempt an escape in the first instance, and only to repel an attack when made. He is, on the other hand, at liberty to lie to or attack the enemy ship, or chase her, if he deems that the best means of self-defense, and not wait till a direct attack is made on his own vessel; for self-defense may be then fruitless by his being crippled. Haven v. Holland, supra.

b. To Avoid Perils Not Insured Against. A departure from the course of the voyage, if necessitated by overbearing force, although of a kind not insured against, excuses a deviation;⁸¹ but a voluntary departure in order to avoid a peril not insured against is not justifiable so as to excuse the deviation.⁸²

10. POLICIES GRANTING "LIBERTY"—a. In General. Where the policy contains a clause giving "liberty" to take some course or to do some act which, but for such clause, would be a deviation, the taking of such course or doing such act is covered by the policy;⁸³ as is also the doing of anything which under the circumstances is usual to accomplish the end in view.⁸⁴ There is, however, no obligation to do anything for which merely a "liberty" is given, as the liberty is nothing more than a permission.⁸⁵

b. Limited to Purpose and Course of Voyage. Under a liberty "to touch," "to stay," "to call," etc., the vessel is only justified in putting into port for a purpose connected with and in furtherance of the main scope and object of the adventure;⁸⁶ and it is only ports within the course of the voyage to which the

When duty to proceed to nearest land.—Where the safety of life and property requires an instant and entire departure from the course of a contemplated voyage, it is the duty of the master to seek the nearest land he can hope to reach, if the peril be so great as to outweigh all other considerations; and he should proceed directly on his new course, without delay or deviation, unless prevented by some unforeseen obstacle. But it is not the master's duty to seek the nearest land he can hope to reach if the state of the weather be such that it would be more safe to attempt to seek another port. *Turner v. liberty applies.³⁷ These clauses give the right to a reasonable delay at the authorized port to accomplish the purposes for which the liberty was given.³⁸

c. To Carry Letters of Marque, Etc. Where the vessel is granted liberty merely to carry a letter of marque it does not authorize direct cruising out of the course of the voyage.³⁹ Where the liberty is coupled with a liberty to capture, the vessel is permitted to convoy her prizes if the risk be not thereby increased;⁴⁰ but if convoying the prizes delays the progress of the insured vessel it is not permissible.⁴¹ A liberty to chase, capture, and man prizes does not authorize the ship to lie in wait for them.⁴²

11. TRADING AND OTHER ACTS AT PORT OF CALL. Where a vessel enters a port within the scope of the insured voyage or under a liberty contained in the policy, or from necessity or justifiable cause, the vessel may load or discharge cargo, take on provisions and supplies, and do other things of a similar nature without the same amounting to a deviation,⁴³ unless the doing of such thing prolongs the delay at such port or otherwise varies the risk.⁴⁴

12. WAIVER. A deviation may be waived by the conduct of the underwriters in making the insured believe the policy continues to cover.⁴⁵ But it has been held that if the parties describe in the usual terms the voyage they insure, both knowing that the adventure has deviated from that description, they are nevertheless bound by the description they have chosen, and the previous deviation is fatal.⁴⁶

E. Breach of Warranties⁴⁷—1. DEFINITION OF WARRANTY. A warranty is a stipulation forming part of the policy, either expressed or implied, as to some fact, condition, or circumstance relating to the risk.⁴⁸

2. CONDITION PRECEDENT. A warranty in a policy of marine insurance, whether express or implied, is a condition precedent to the attaching of the policy,⁴⁹ and it must be strictly and fully complied with in every particular or no liability will be incurred.⁵⁰

3. EFFECT OF BREACH.⁵¹ If there be any breach of a warranty the policy is null and void,⁵² and the underwriters are relieved from their liability notwithstanding the loss is not connected with the breach or that the breach is cured prior to the loss.⁵³ If, however, the policy covers two distinct subjects it is severable and a breach of warranty as to one will not avoid the policy on the other.⁵⁴ The same rules apply equally to a promissory warranty.⁵⁵

4. WAIVER OF BREACH AND ESTOPPEL — a. In General. The knowledge of the underwriter, at the time of effecting the insurance, of the falsity of a warranty has been held not to amount to a waiver or exception to the warranty.⁵⁶ It is a waiver of a breach of warranty if the underwriter with a knowledge of the breach voluntarily accepts notice of an abandonment for a constructive total loss.⁵⁷ But it is not a waiver for the underwriter not to state the breach as a ground of refusal to pay when proofs of loss are presented.⁵⁸ Nor will a failure to offer to return the premium estop the underwriter from relying on a breach of warranty,⁵⁹ unless the insured has thereby been induced to rely on the policy as in force.⁶⁰ Nor is a warranty waived or abrogated by indorsing upon the policy a permission to use one of several ports, the use of which is prohibited in the policy.⁶¹

b. Warranty of Seaworthiness. Knowledge that the vessel is not and cannot reasonably be made seaworthy for the intended voyage prevents the underwriter from relying on a breach of the warranty.⁶² A general offer to insure goods loaded on designated vessels or an express approval of certain vessels will amount to a waiver;⁶³ and an agreement to consider a vessel seaworthy will estop the underwriter from relying upon a breach of the warranty to defeat a claim.⁶⁴ A clause in the policy providing for the insurance to cover in case of a breach of warranty, at a premium to be arranged, prevents the avoidance of the policy for breach of warranty of seaworthiness.⁶⁵ But a provision excepting liability for loss from particular conditions of unseaworthiness does not exclude the implied warranty.⁶⁶

5. EXPRESS WARRANTIES — a. Form. An express warranty must always be inserted in the policy,⁶⁷ and is thereby distinguishable from a representation which is but a collateral agreement.⁶⁸ The matters need not be inserted in any particular part of the policy and may be written on the margin;⁶⁹ but matters contained in a separate paper or a paper wafered to the policy⁷⁰ or referred to therein⁷¹ are not warranties unless the policy expressly so stipulates.⁷² The word "warrant" is not necessary to make the statement a warranty, and the word "warranted" is often used where there is no warranty in fact, as in clauses wherein the subject-matter is "warranted free" from certain enumerated risks, which merely has the effect of excepting such risks from the perils insured against.⁷³

b. Construction. A warranty is not to be construed so as to include anything which is not necessarily implied in it.⁷⁴ Thus a statement in a policy that a vessel is "intended" to navigate certain waters is not a warranty that she shall actually navigate them.⁷⁵ Nor is a warranty that a vessel shall have a certain number of guns a warranty that she shall have the necessary complement of men to work all of them.⁷⁶

c. Nationality.—(i) WHAT AMOUNTS TO WARRANTY. A description of the subject-matter as "American" property, or other national designation, amounts to a warranty that the property is of the nationality designated.⁷⁷

(ii) MEANING OF WARRANTY. A warranty of nationality does not mean that the vessel was built in such country,⁷⁸ but that the property belongs to a subject thereof,⁷⁹ and that it will so continue.⁸⁰ It requires that the vessel be conducted⁸¹

License.—A warranty to have on board a license was construed as requiring a license in such form as to be a protection to the vessel and cargo for the voyage. Bulkley v. Derby Fishing Co., 1 Conn. 571.

Meaning of "the cargo."—An insurance declared to be on "the cargo," being one thousand and thirty-one hogsheds wine, does not amount to a warranty that the wine constitutes the whole cargo, and that no other goods will be taken on board. Muller v. Thompson, 2 Campb. 610, 12 Rev. Rep. 753.

An exception of liability for injury to a particular construction of vessel is not a warranty that the vessel is so constructed. Martin v. Fishing Ins. Co., 20 Pick. (Mass.) 389, 32 Am. Dec. 220.

Ports "in" substituted for ports "of."—A policy contained a condition not to use the ports of Big Glace bay, Schooner pond, Blockhouse mines, or Bridgeport. A loss occurred at a place known as "Port of Caledonia," about three quarters of a mile from the workings of Big Glace bay. The "port of Big Glace bay" had ceased to exist as a port for vessels, and the port of Caledonia, which was within the limits of the bay, had been substituted therefor. It was held that the loss was within the risk excepted, and that the policy might reasonably be construed as if the word "in" were substituted for the word "of." *Campbell v. Canada Ins. Scotch ownership of "British vessel."—The term "British vessel" in a policy is satisfied by the vessel's belonging to a Scotchman, who navigated her under a clearance and license from the British custom-house at New Providence. (iii) PROPERTY INCLUDED. The warranty extends to all the property covered by the policy.⁸³

d. Neutrality — (i) WHAT INCLUDED. A warranty of neutrality imports that the property insured is neutral in fact, and shall be so in appearance and conduct;⁸⁴ that the property shall belong to neutrals;⁸⁵ that it shall be so documented as to prove its neutrality;⁸⁶ and that no act of the insured or his agent shall be done which can legally compromise its neutrality.⁸⁷

(ii) PROPERTY AND INTEREST INCLUDED. The warranty extends to the insured's interest in all the property intended to be covered by the policy,⁸⁸ but not to the interest of a third party not covered by the policy.⁸⁹

(iii) TIME TO WHICH IT RELATES. The warranty is merely that the property is neutral at the time the risk commences and not that it shall continue neutral throughout the adventure.⁹⁰

ship's papers,⁹⁴ to resist search,⁹⁵ or to attempt to enter a blockaded port.⁹⁶ But it is not a breach of neutrality to sail for a port believed to be blockaded,⁹⁷ or for a neutral ship to carry enemy's property from its own to the enemy's country.⁹⁸

e. Safety and Navigation of Vessel.⁹⁹ A warranty that a vessel is "well" on a particular day is complied with if the ship was safe at any time of that day.¹ A warranty "to go out in tow" is not complied with by the vessel being towed from the loading berth to another part of the harbor.²

f. To Sail. A warranty "to sail" on a particular day requires that the vessel be got under way in complete readiness for the voyage with the purpose of proceeding thereon without further delay at the port of departure.³ If it is intended or is necessary that the vessel stop for any purpose before proceeding to sea, she has not sailed within the meaning of the warranty.⁴ But if after breaking ground in complete readiness and with intent to proceed, the vessel is detained by some unforeseen cause, the warranty is complied with.⁵ An Dropping down river.—A policy contained a warranty not to sail after the 15th of August. The vessel on the morning of the 15th of August was cleared at the custom-house and ready for sea. She was then lying in the custom-house dock, which opens into the river L, which forms part of D harbor. She was afterward, on the same day, hauled out of dock and warped down the river L about half a mile, toward the mouth of the harbor, which was some miles distant, for the purpose of proceeding on her voyage. At the time of so moving the vessel, the master and crew knew it to be impossible to get to sea that day. The next day she was warped a little farther down the river, and on the 17th, when the wind changed, she got to sea. The jury having found that the master and crew fully intended to sail on the 15th of August, if it had been possible, and did all they could, and used every means and exertion so to do, and that they intended by so doing to put themselves in a better situation for the prosecution of the voyage, and not merely and solely to fulfil the warranty, it was held that the vessel was in the prosecution of her voyage on the 15th of August, and that the warranty not to sail after that day had been complied with. Cockrane v. Fisher, 1 C. M. & R. 809, 1 L. J. Exch. 328, 5 Tyrw. 496.

"To sail in a few days."—Where a vessel warranted to sail in a few days was detained forty-five days after the date of the policy in making necessary repairs, testing the machinery, etc., it was held that the policy was not thereby avoided. Wallerstein v. Columbian Ins. Co., 3 Rob. (N. Y.) 528 [reversed on other grounds in 44 N. Y. 204, 4 Am. Rep. 664].

In the month of October.—The meaning of a statement that a ship insured would sail "in the month of October" from the West Indies was explained by evidence of merchants to mean after October 25. Chaurand v. Angerstein, 1 Peake N. P. 43.

Insufficient crew.—A warranty to sail on or before a particular day is not complied with by leaving the harbor on that day, without having a sufficient crew on board, although the remainder of the crew is engaged and ready to sail. Graham v. Barras, 5 B. & Ad. 1011, 3 N. & M. 125, 27 E. C. L. 424; Ridsdale v. Newnham, 4 Campb. 111, 3 M. & S. 456, 15 Rev. Rep. 327.

unforeseen cause preventing a vessel from commencing the voyage at the time named does not excuse the non-compliance with the warranty.⁶ A delay in one stage of the voyage which must necessarily produce a breach of a warranty in regard to the sailing on a future stage does not terminate the policy before the arrival of the vessel at the port where the second stage commences.⁷

g. To Depart. A warranty "to depart" from a place on a specified date requires that there be an effectual leaving behind of that place on that day.⁸

h. To Sail With Convoy. A warranty "to sail with convoy" requires that the vessel join and depart with convoy⁹ from the customary place where convoys are to be had¹⁰ and to have sailing instructions on board.¹¹ She may sail unprotected from her loading port to the place of rendezvous for convoy;¹² and it is no breach of the warranty that she does not continue with the convoy during the whole course of the voyage,¹³ but the convoy must be one intended for the whole voyage.¹⁴ This does not mean that the same ship shall act as convoy for the entire voyage.¹⁵ The warranty is not complied with by sailing under the protection of an armed ship not appointed by the government.¹⁶

i. Waters To or From Which Vessel Is Confined or Excluded. If a vessel is "prohibited from" or warranted "not to use" any designated place or waters it is a breach of warranty to enter¹⁷ or touch¹⁸ such places or waters. Clearing for

To enter St. Lawrence after certain date.—When a ship is insured on a time policy containing a stipulation "not allowed . . . to enter the Gulf of St. Lawrence before the 25th day of April, nor to be in the said Gulf after the 15th day of November. Nor to proceed to Newfoundland after the 1st day of December," the vessel is neither to be in the Gulf after November 15, nor to proceed to Newfoundland after December 1. *Provincial Ins. Co. v. and sailing toward a prohibited port has been held not to be a breach of the warranty,¹⁹ but the decisions are not in harmony and the weight of authority seems to be to the contrary.²⁰ Where the vessel is "confined to" or is "to navigate only" designated waters, a departure therefrom is a breach of warranty.²¹ The meaning of particular designations of bodies of water and watercourses contained in warranties have already been considered.²²

Where a vessel sails for a port and river which she is forbidden by the policy to use, and anchors at a buoy near the entrance of the river, whence she is driven ashore by a storm, this is a using of the place and a breach of the policy. *Thames, etc., Mar. Officers and crew.—A warranty that the ship shall sail with a certain number of competent men must be literally complied with. De Hahn v. Hartley, 1 T. R. 343. See also Grant v. Lexington F., etc., Ins. Co., 5 Ind. 23, 61 Am. Dec. 74; St. Louis Ins. Co. v. Glasgow, 8 Mo. 713, 41 Am. Dec. 661. The breach of such a warranty avoids the policy whether the thing warranted is material or not. Grant v. Lexington F., etc., Ins. Co., supra. A warranty on the margin of a policy, "thirty seamen besides passengers," means thirty persons belonging to the ship's company, including cook, surgeon, boys, etc. Bean v. Stupart, Dougl. (3d ed.) 11. The cook is a competent hand, within the meaning of a requirement of a policy on flatboats that they shall be manned with not less than a specified number of competent hands. Grant v. Lexington F., etc., Ins. Co., 5 Ind. 23, 61 Am. Dec. 74.

A warranty that a ship has twenty guns is not broken where she has that number of guns, although she has not enough men to man them. Hide v. Bruce, 3 Dougl. 213, 26 E. C. L. 146.

Charge of watchman.—A warranty that a vessel shall be in charge of a watchman does not necessarily mean that the watchman shall be on board. Plyer v. German-American Ins. Co., 1 N. Y. Suppl. 395 [reversed on other grounds in 121 N. Y. 689, 24 N. E. 929].

Captain to hold certificate.—Where a policy of insurance on a ship contained a warranty "that the vessel be commanded by a captain holding a certificate from the American Shipmasters' Association," and where at the loss of the ship the captain had such certificate, of a certain date, which under the rules of the association required its presentation for examination before the date of loss, and, although not so presented, it was unrevoked, the warranty was complied with. McLoon v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 100 Mass. 472, 97 Am. Dec. 116, 1 Am. Rep. 129.

Notice of change of masters.—Under a policy providing for notice to the insurers of a change of masters or owners, it is necessary for the owners or their assigns to give notice of every change of masters. Eddy v. Tennessee M. & F. Ins. Co., 21 Mo. 587; Tennessee M. & F. Ins. Co. v. Scott, 14 Mo. 46. The insurers are entitled to notice of a change of masters, notwithstanding the fact that they have assented to a previous change of both masters and owners. Eddy v. Tennessee M. & F. Ins. Co., supra.

Vessel under seizure.—Under a warranty that the vessel shall, during the continuance of the policy, be completely found with master, officers, and crew, the policy cannot be avoided because the vessel is not so found while she is laid up under seizure and in the custody of the sheriff. Marigny v. Home Mut. Ins. Co., 13 La. Ann. 338, 71 Am. Dec. 511.

Vessel in charge of workmen for repairs.—A stipulation in a policy on a boat that it shall be completely provided with "master, officers and crew" is not broken by placing the boat temporarily in charge of workmen

k. Loading and Carriage of Cargo—(i) IN GENERAL. Warranties in a policy as to the loading and carrying of cargo must be strictly complied with, and a breach will avoid the policy whether they were material or not and whether or not the risk has been increased by the breach.²⁵

(ii) "LAWFUL" AND "CONTRABAND" GOODS. Policies frequently contain a warranty of "no contraband." What goods are contraband is considered elsewhere in this work.²⁶ Goods contraband of war are "lawful" goods within the meaning of a clause warranting the policy to be on "lawful" goods.²⁷

(iii) EXPLOSIVE OR EXTRAHAZARDOUS ARTICLES. A warranty not to carry or store explosive or extrahazardous articles does not prohibit the having on board a sufficient quantity of oil for the purpose of oiling the engine of the vessel;²⁸ but it prevents the carrying of articles which are of that description, although it is customary to carry them in the particular trade for which the vessel is insured.²⁹

(iv) REGISTERED TONNAGE. Breach of a warranty not to load or carry in excess of the net registered tonnage of the vessel will avoid the policy.³⁰ "Ton-for the purpose of repairs. St. Louis Ins. Co. v. Glasgow, 8 Mo. 713, 41 Am. Dec. 661.

A warranty that orders will be given that the ship shall not cruise must be complied with. Express orders to the captain not to cruise are necessary, and it is not sufficient that there is an implied direction not to cruise by reason of the fact that no orders are given to cruise, or that his orders do not empower him to cruise. Ogden v. Ash, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 162, 1 L. ed. 82.

Failure to comply with orders of underwriters.—The rules of an insurance association provided that the managing underwriters should survey each ship insured, in hull and materials, once a year, and order such stores and repairs as they might deem necessary, which stores must be got and repairs done on due notice being given, otherwise the ship should not be insured. The policies were all to be time policies for one year. The effect of not complying with an order of the managing underwriters was that the ship must be considered unseaworthy, and the policy which had before been effected on her void. Steward v. Wilson, 7 Jur. 1020, 13 L. J. Exch. 27, 12 M. & W. 11.

A warranty not to carry grain in bulk across the Atlantic is broken if the vessel, at the time when the policy takes effect, is just entering the harbor at the end of a voyage across the Atlantic with such a cargo. Sawyer v. Coasters' Mut. Ins. Co., 6 Gray (Mass.) 221.

Taking additional cargo.—A policy will be avoided by breach of a warranty not to take cargo additional to that specified in the policy, whether or not the risk is thereby increased. See Maryland Ins. Co. v. Leroy, 7 Cranch (U. S.) 26, 3 L. ed. 257. But where an insurance was declared to be "on the cargo, being 1031 hhds. wine," it was held that this did not amount to a warranty that the wine should constitute the whole cargo and that no other goods should be taken on board. Muller v. Thompson, 2 Campb. 610, 12 Rev. Rep. 753.

Property on board.—Where a policy of insurance is "on property on board the boat," etc., and from certain points, this is not a warranty that the property insured is on board at the time of effecting the insurance. Whitney v. Haven, 13 Mass. 172.

The words "loading off shore prohibited" in a policy of marine insurance are capable of being construed by the court without the aid of extrinsic evidence, and in the absence of such evidence they are merely intended to prohibit loading while the vessel is lying at anchor away from the shore, and not to prohibit loading at the end of a bridge pier, fifteen hundred feet from shore; but parol evidence of experts is admissible to show that the words have acquired a certain definite and notorious meaning among nautical men, according to which they include loading at a bridge pier. Johnson v. Northwestern Nat. Ins. Co., 39 Wis. 87.

"Iron" and "steel".—A warranty in a marine policy against carrying "iron" in nage," however, is the capacity of a vessel to carry cargo, and does not cover dunnage, ballast, stores, or equipment;⁸¹ but it has been held that such a warranty is broken if the vessel carries more cargo in weight than such tonnage, even though the excess is used as dunnage.⁸² A warranty that a vessel shall not load more than her registered tonnage refers to the vessel's carrying capacity as stated in the ship's papers under which she is sailing at the date of the policy.⁸³

1. Against Encumbrances. A warranty against "all liens" is broken if the subject-matter is encumbered with a mortgage, although the policy is payable to the mortgagee.⁸⁴

m. Against Other Insurance. A warranty of "no other insurance" means that there shall be no other insurance on the subject-matter during the continuance of the risk.⁸⁵ An insured who warrants that part of the ship's value shall remain uninsured commits no breach of his warranty by taking out further insurance to cover a portion of the original sum insured which he has notice is likely to become ineffective by reason of the insolvency of the underwriters.⁸⁶ A warranty against other insurance is not broken by taking out other insurance policies on different property or interests or against a different risk.⁸⁷ An overinsurance of the freight to be earned by a voyage or of the cargo is not a breach of warranty by the owner of the vessel not to insure his interest in the vessel, "or any other insurable interest in said interest, during the continuance of the policy," beyond a specified amount.⁸⁸ A warranty "not to insure more" refers only to subsequent policies.⁸⁹ A warranty against other insurance is not broken by taking out policies which are invalid.⁴⁰ excess of the net registered tonnage was held to be broken by shipping a quantity of steel in excess of the net registered tonnage, as the term "iron" in the warranty included steel. *Hart v. Other insurance by different interest unknown to insured.—Where a consignor of a vessel effected an insurance on the freight, with the warranty, "no other insurance," and the consignee, who had accepted a draft against such freight, without instructions from the consignor, effected another insurance on the freight at the place of destination, it was held that this last insurance would not be considered a violation of the warranty contained in the former. *Williams v. 39. Where insurance was effected for eleven thousand dollars, with warranty not to insure more, on account of the owners of a schooner two of whom effected another insurance for ten thousand dollars with similar warranty, it was held that the warranties related to subsequent policies only, and, as a breach of warranty had made the former void, the last insurance was valid. *Mussey v. 40. Knight v. Eureka F. & M. Ins. Co., 26 Ohio St. 664, 20 Am. Rep. 778, holding that a warranty against other insurance was not broken by further insurance taken out by an unauthorized agent, whose act had not been ratified.

n. To Report Risks Under Open Policy. A breach of a warranty in an open policy to report all risks as soon as known gives the underwriter the option of avoiding the policy as an entirety and not merely as to risks not reported.⁴¹

6. IMPLIED WARRANTIES — a. Seaworthiness — (1) VOYAGE POLICIES — (A) In General. In every voyage policy of marine insurance there is an implied warranty that the vessel is in all respects seaworthy.⁴²

(B) On Cargo, Freight, Etc. This implied warranty of seaworthiness is not limited to cases of insurance upon vessels but applies equally to insurances on cargo, freight, and other subjects of marine insurance.⁴³ It has been held, how-insurance is paid by the insurer does not make the taking out of such policy a breach of a warranty against other insurance. Knight v. Eureka F. & M. Ins. Co., 26 Ohio St. 664, 20 Am. Rep. 778.

"Honor" policies.—In Roddick v. Indemnity Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 836, 64 L. J. Q. B. 423, it was said that honor policies were sufficient to constitute a breach of warranty against other insurance, although such policies were void at law under 19 Geo. II, c. 37, so that no recovery could be had thereon at law. In the same case on appeal a contrary opinion was expressed by Smith, L. J., although the point was not decided, a decision thereon being unnecessary. Roddick v. Indemnity Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., [1895] 2 Q. B. 380, 387, 64 L. J. Q. B. 733, 72 L. T. Rep. N. S. 860, 14 Reports 516, 44 Wkly. Rep. 27.

Other insurance canceled.—By the usual clause in policies as to prior insurances the underwriter is exonerated if prior insurances to the full value of the vessel and cargo have been actually made by the assured on the same voyage and are in full force at the time, although by a subsequent agreement between the assured and such prior underwriter, before the risk is commenced, the prior policies are canceled. *Seamans v. Statutory provision.—Cal. Civ. Code, § 2681.

An insurance on a floating dock implies a warranty that the dock is seaworthy and fit ever, that there is no implied warranty that the cargo is fit to encounter the ordinary vicissitudes of the voyage.⁴⁴

(c) Conveyances Used in Loading and Discharging. Where the insurance is on goods "until safely landed" and the mode of landing is by lighters, there is no warranty that the lighters will be seaworthy for that purpose.⁴⁵

(ii) TIME POLICIES — (A) In the United States. In the United States there is some difference of opinion as to the exact extent of the warranty of seaworthiness in policies on time. The better doctrine seems to be that if the vessel is in port at the time of the commencement of the risk there is an implied warranty that the vessel is seaworthy for the port risk and before sailing will be made seaworthy for the voyage.⁴⁶ But if the vessel is at sea there is no implied warranty that she is then seaworthy.⁴⁷ Nor is there a warranty that the vessel will be seaworthy at the commencement of each stage.⁴⁸ In some jurisdictions the warranty extends to an implied undertaking on the part of the insured to use due diligence to maintain the vessel in a seaworthy state during the continuance of the policy.⁴⁹ In Illinois the courts do not recognize any implied warranty of seaworthiness in this class of policies.⁵⁰ By statute in California there is in every time policy an implied warranty that the ship is seaworthy at the commencement of each stage.⁵¹

(B) In England and Canada. In England there is no implied warranty of seaworthiness where the policy is on time, either at the commencement of the risk or at any subsequent period.⁵² The same rule prevails in Canada.⁵³

(iii) OPEN OR RUNNING POLICIES. An open or running cargo policy also contains an implied warranty that the vessel upon which the insured goods will be shipped is seaworthy.⁵⁴

(IV) REQUISITES OF SEAWORTHINESS—(A) In General. To comply with the implied warranty of seaworthiness the vessel must be in a fit state as to repair, equipment, crew, and in all other respects to perform the voyage insured and to encounter the ordinary perils.⁵⁵ A perfect vessel or one impervious to the assaults of the elements is not required.⁵⁶ The best and most skilful form of construction is not required but only sufficient for the kind of vessels insured and the service in which they are employed.⁵⁷

(B) Hull. The hull must be sufficiently tight, staunch, and strong to resist the ordinary action of the winds and waves.⁵⁸

(C) Equipment and Appliances. The vessel must have equipment and appliances commensurate and appropriate to the voyage and trade in which it is engaged;⁵⁹ and these must be in proper condition.⁶⁰ What are proper equipments and appliances must be determined according to the general custom of the port or country to which the vessel belongs.⁶¹ The vessel must have sufficient ballast,⁶² proper and sufficient dunnage,⁶³ cables, and anchors⁶⁴ for the voyage.

(D) Fuel, Stores, and Provisions. Sufficient fuel to last for the ordinary length of the voyage is requisite to the seaworthiness of the vessel;⁶⁵ and stores, provisions, and water for all persons lawfully on board must be on board at the commencement of the voyage.⁶⁶ Fodder reasonably sufficient to supply the live stock on board for the expected duration of the voyage is also requisite.⁶⁷

(E) Loading and Stowage. The cargo must be properly loaded, stowed, dunnaged, and secured, so as not to imperil the navigation of the vessel or to cause injury to the vessel or cargo.⁶⁸ Carrying a deck cargo does not necessarily render a vessel unseaworthy.⁶⁹

(F) *Officers and Crew.*⁷⁰ To render the vessel seaworthy it is necessary that she shall have on board a sufficient number of competent men.⁷¹ The master must be a man of skill, prudence, discretion, and integrity, with ability to navigate the vessel on the insured voyage,⁷² and it seems that there should

According to usage.—Stowage according to custom and usage and the best judgment of experienced persons is sufficient to protect the ship from the charge of negligence as against insurers. Leitch v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 66 N. Y. 100; The Titania, 19 Fed. 101.

Depends on capacity of vessel whether overladen, not on depth of water.—If a steamboat or other vessel be overloaded or unduly laden, she is unseaworthy; but whether or not she is unduly laden depends upon the capacity of the boat or vessel, not upon the depth of water upon the shoals and bars in the river in which she is navigated. Reference is to be had to the capacity of the craft, and not to the capacity of the river, in deciding that question. Cincinnati Mut. Ins. Co. v. May, 20 Ohio 211.

The occasional absence of the crew upon other duties during the voyage will not avoid a policy of insurance for unseaworthiness. Caldwell v. Western M. & F. Ins. Co., 19 La. 42, 36 Am. Dec. 667. That the registered master is incompetent does not render the vessel unseaworthy if she is actually under the direction of a competent person appointed by the owner to take charge of her. Draper v. Commercial Ins. Co., 21 N. Y. 378.

The master's becoming incompetent to command the vessel at a foreign port on the voyage out and home does render the vessel

also be on board a person who is competent to take the master's place in case of the latter's incapacity.⁷³

(g) Pilots. Where the persons on board are not fully competent⁷⁴ to navigate the vessel in the harbors and inland channels which the vessel enters during the course of the voyage it is a breach of the warranty of seaworthiness if a competent pilot is not taken on board,⁷⁵ if by the exercise of reasonable diligence one can be obtained.⁷⁶ That the pilot is unlicensed does not render the vessel prima facie unseaworthy.⁷⁷

(v) STATUTORY REGULATIONS. The question whether a vessel is seaworthy is to be determined without reference to statutory regulations.⁷⁸

(vi) RELATIVE TERM—(A) In General. Seaworthiness is a relative term depending on the nature of the ship, the voyage, and the trade in which it is engaged,⁷⁹ but not upon the amount of premium.⁸⁰

(B) Dependent on Voyage. The same sufficiency is not required of a vessel while in port as on commencing a voyage, and it is enough that the state of the ship be commensurate with the risk at that time. The ship being sufficient to encounter the ordinary perils of the port, repairs, equipment, and crew necessary for the voyage may be added at any time prior to sailing.⁸¹ But while a vessel is in port she must be in such a condition as to enable her to lie in reasonable security until she is properly repaired and equipped for the voyage.⁸² A vessel, although not adequate for ocean traffic, may be entirely sufficient for inland or river navigation; but if a vessel sufficient only for river navigation sails upon a lake or ocean voyage there is a breach of warranty.⁸³

(c) Dependent on Cargo. The seaworthiness of a vessel is also to be deter-unseaworthy. Copeland v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 2 Metc. (Mass.) 432.

mined with regard to the nature of the cargo which she undertakes to transport, the requirement being that she is reasonably capable of safely conveying the cargo to its port of destination.⁸⁴

(VII) DURATION OF WARRANTY—(A) When Attaches. The warranty of seaworthiness has application to the commencement of the risk and each stage thereof.⁸⁵ Unseaworthiness prior to the time of the attaching of the risk does not affect the insurance.⁸⁶ Where the policy is retrospective, seaworthiness at the time of making the insurance is not a necessary condition.⁸⁷

(B) Continuance. There is no implied warranty that the vessel will remain in a seaworthy condition throughout the life of the policy.⁸⁸ It is, however, the duty of the master to use reasonable diligence to keep the vessel seaworthy,⁸⁹ although the underwriter is not relieved from liability under the policy because of the failure of the master to perform his duty in this respect unless the loss results therefrom.⁹⁰

When master must put into port and repair.—The completion of the voyage without necessary delay is the primary purpose of the owner of a vessel and of the cargo, and of others interested. If the vessel suffers such injury that she cannot safely proceed to her port of discharge without repair, the master need not proceed to the nearest port geographically, for repairs. So long as she can be expected by an intelligent and faithful master to pursue her voyage in safety, she will be entitled so to do. Turner v. Protection Ins. Co., 25 Me. 515, 43 Am. Dec. 294. After a boat has been injured by one of the perils insured against, and partially repaired, so as merely to enable her to run, running her in this unseaworthy state, in good faith, until she is finally repaired, does not avoid the policy. Gazzam v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 6 Ohio 71. But where a vessel which has been insured has a leak on the voyage insured for, if the leak be of such a character that a prudent and discreet master, of competent skill and judgment, would deem it necessary to examine and repair the leak before proceeding on the voyage, and in consequence of his failure to do so the vessel is lost, no recovery can be had on the policy of insurance. Adderly v. American Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Fed. Cas. No. 75, Taney 126. The master must have reasonable cause to believe that the vessel is unable to proceed safely home without having her repaired. *Starbuck v. (c) Voyage in Stages. Where the voyage is in stages the warranty of seaworthiness does not require that the vessel, at the commencement of the risk, be in sufficient state to complete the whole voyage, but it is sufficient if, at the commencement of each stage of the voyage, she be in all respects seaworthy for that particular stage.⁹¹ If at the commencement of any stage she is not seaworthy for the stage of the voyage commenced there is a breach of the warranty.⁹² The stages must be separate and distinct in order to have a different degree of seaworthiness for particular parts.⁹³ A vessel insured for a round voyage must at the inception of the risk be sufficiently seaworthy to complete the voyage without repairs in the absence of any damage from extraordinary perils.⁹⁴ Where the policy covers the risk in port as well as on the voyage, the warranty is complied with if the vessel at the time of attaching of the policy is seaworthy for the port risks and before leaving port is made seaworthy for the voyage.⁹⁵

b. Neutrality. Where insurance is effected upon a vessel the insured impliedly warrants that she is neutral,⁹⁶ and that it will have on board the necessary papers to prove its neutrality.⁹⁷ But there is no warranty that the cargo is neutral,⁹⁸ or that the vessel will not change her national character.⁹⁹ It seems that the underwriter can only rely on the failure to have proper documents to defeat a claim under the policy, there being no express warranty, where the loss results from the want of such documents.¹

VIII. RISKS AND CAUSES OF LOSS.

A. In General. The underwriters are only liable for such losses or damages as are occasioned by some one of the perils enumerated in the policy.² The loss

Effect of bad faith.—A defect arising after the commencement of the risk and permitted to continue from bad faith discharges the insurer from liability for any loss which is the consequence of that bad faith, but does not affect the contract as to any other risk or loss covered by the policy and not caused or increased by such particular defect. *Union Ins. must be of the subject-matter,³ and must be actual and not merely imaginary.⁴ Thus no recovery can be had for damage to the reputation of goods,⁵ or for the mere fact that a vessel strained, where its value is not shown to have been thereby impaired.⁶

B. Must Be Extraordinary. E. Enumerated Perils — 1. PERILS OF THE SEA — a. Definition. Perils of the sea embrace all kinds of marine casualties, such as shipwreck, foundering, stranding, collision, and every specie of damage done to the ship or goods at sea by the violent action of the winds or waves.¹⁵ They do not embrace all losses happening on the seas.¹⁶

b. What Included. The term "perils of the sea" includes losses from stranding or grounding,¹⁷ collision,¹⁸ tempestuous weather,¹⁹ action of the tides,²⁰ heavy cross seas,²¹ dangers from taking a malposition in tidal harbors,²² the entering of sea-water through an open port, seam, or other opening in the vessel,²³ dangers from making landing,²⁴ injuries to live stock by kicking and bruising each other in consequence of storm,²⁵ or a vessel settling on a projection of a wharf.²⁶ But the term does not cover fire,²⁷ barratry,²⁸ jettison,²⁹ bursting of boilers,³⁰ accidental

2. PERILS OF RIVERS, ETC. Where the policy is to cover risks on inland waters, the phrase "perils of the rivers, lakes and canals" is generally substituted for "perils of the sea." The words include the same character of losses as are included within perils of the sea,³⁹ and in addition thereto those perils which are peculiar to inland waters, such as ice,⁴⁰ and swells.⁴¹ This clause has also been held to cover damage from escape of steam⁴² or bursting of boilers.⁴³

3. PERILS OF NAVIGATION. "Perils of navigation" includes perils in making landings in river navigation;⁴⁴ and damage from rain in consequence of improper stowage, unless such improper stowage was occasioned or acquiesced in by the insured or his agent, is damage from the perils of navigation.⁴⁵

4. IMPROPER NAVIGATION. Improper navigation embraces acts done in the management of a vessel as a vessel,⁴⁶ and does not include acts done in the loading, stowage, or care of the cargo.⁴⁷ It is not limited to acts done after the vessel

Collision.—Where a policy of insurance upon a steamer employed in inland navigation, after enumerating certain risks to be borne by the insurer, recites that, besides those particularly mentioned, the insurer will be answerable for "all other perils, losses and misfortunes which shall come to the damage of the said boat, according to the general laws of insurance," a loss resulting from a collision produced by the negligence of the officers of another steamer, although not an enumerated risk, will be covered by the policy, being one of the perils of the river. breaks ground, but includes negligence before commencement of the voyage, as by insufficiently closing a port, so that goods are damaged on the voyage.⁴⁸

5. STRANDING. A stranding implies a settling of the ship, some resting, or interruption of the voyage under extraordinary circumstances.⁴⁹ It is not confined to cases in which the vessel is upon the beach, but includes the striking and resting upon a rock,⁵⁰ grounding on piles in a river or settling upon a projection of a wharf.⁵¹ It may result from stress of weather,⁵² or the acts of those in charge of the navigation of the vessel bona fide performed to prevent other impending loss or injury.⁵³ A taking of the ground in a tidal harbor in the ordinary course of navigation is not a stranding.⁵⁴ The vessel must remain stationary for a time; if it strike and run there is no stranding.⁵⁵

6. COLLISION — a. In General. Collision, in marine insurance, means the act of two ships or navigable objects striking together.⁵⁶ It does not include the striking against a submerged or sunken object,⁵⁷ against ice,⁵⁸ or against the bank or any projection of the land.⁵⁹ The object should be one which is navigable,⁶⁰ but it need not be in condition to be navigated at the time of the contact.⁶¹ The vessel need not be in motion at the time of the impact.⁶² It is not limited to the striking of any particular part of the vessel but includes the hull,⁶³ the upper works, and also the equipment.⁶⁴

b. Damage to Other Vessel. The general rule is that only the direct damage sustained by the insured vessel is recoverable, and damages sustained by the vessel or object with which the insured vessel collided, the whole or a part of which the insured vessel is obligated to pay, are not included.⁶⁵ A contrary rule, however, prevails in Massachusetts.⁶⁶

c. "Running Down" Clause. The "running down" clause is a distinct contract under which the underwriters agree to pay a proportion of the damages sustained by the other vessel in collision.⁶⁷ The risk is confined to damage done and actually paid⁶⁸ to the owners of the vessel run down,⁶⁹ its cargo,⁷⁰ or passengers.⁷¹ It does not include damage done to the assured's vessel, life salvage payable under statutory provision,⁷² or the expense of removing the wreck of the other vessel.⁷³

7. TOWER'S LIABILITY. Under the usual form of "tower's liability" clause⁷⁴ there is covered the loss or damage to which the tug is subjected whether arising out of a towage or salvage service.⁷⁵ The liability must be determined by suit,⁷⁶ but the amount of the recovery against the tug is not conclusive as to amount unless the underwriters are parties to such suit.⁷⁷ It has been held that the

11. CAPTURE. Capture includes all hostile⁹⁵ takings made with intent to keep or obtain condemnation,⁹⁶ or made for the purpose of putting the property taken to a specific use for the benefit of the captor.⁹⁷ It is none the less a capture whether the taking be by friends or allies,⁹⁸ enemy or belligerent,⁹⁹ or by pirates.¹ A condemnation is not necessary to complete the capture or to render the underwriter liable.²

12. SEIZURE. "Seizure" is a broader term than "capture" and includes every forceable taking of possession,³ whether by lawful authority⁴ or overwhelming force,⁵ legal, illegal,⁶ or piratical.⁷ It was formerly considered essential that the taking be hostile,⁸ but this is not now the law.⁹

13. PIRATES. An insurance against pirates includes seizure by mutinous passengers,¹⁰ but not a wrongful seizure by a governmental official¹¹ or by a de facto government.¹²

"Walking to be deemed safe arrival."—A policy of insurance on a dog contained the following clause: "This insurance is against all risks, including mortality from any cause, jettison, and washing overboard, but walking at Lahore, Punjab, to be deemed a safe arrival." The dog was injured during the transit, and on arrival at Lahore could only walk on three legs. It was held that the dog did not walk at Lahore, within the meaning of the policy. *Jacob v. like kind to any of the perils previously enumerated, and none other.⁴⁴ Where the perils of the sea are among the enumerated perils it will cover damage sustained in taking ground in a tidal harbor,⁴⁵ or from the winds while the vessel is in a graving-dock for repairs,⁴⁶ and damages sustained in getting out of dock⁴⁷ or being sunk by another vessel firing upon her in consequence of mistaking her for an enemy.⁴⁸ But the breaking of machinery is not included.⁴⁹ And where the insurance is upon live stock it covers the risk of their rushing overboard.⁵⁰ When coupled with insurance against enemies, a capture or seizure by the Confederate states was held included.⁵¹ Fire being enumerated, loss sustained by putting into port and discharging and selling a part of the cargo, which consisted of coal and which had become overheated, was held to be covered.⁵² And, where assailing thieves are insured against, loss from seizure by a mob is covered.⁵³ Barratry is not covered unless particularly enumerated.⁵⁴

19. USUAL RISKS. Where insurance is made against the "usual risks" it covers barratry,⁵⁵ capture,⁵⁶ and mutiny where the insurance is upon slaves;⁵⁷ but not an extraordinary duty laid upon the insured goods,⁵⁸ or damage by worms,⁵⁹ rats,⁶⁰ or climate.⁶¹

F. Effect of Negligence, Fraud, and Misconduct — 1. NEGLIGENCE IN GENERAL. The general rule is that where the immediate cause of a loss is a peril insured against, the underwriters are liable notwithstanding such loss would not have occurred, except for the negligence of the insured,⁶² or that of the master, crew, or other agents or servants.⁶³

G. Proximate Cause of Loss — 1. IN GENERAL. The underwriter is liable for only such losses as are proximately caused by the perils insured against.⁶⁶ The maxim "causa proxima non remota spectatur" is applicable to contracts of marine insurance.⁶⁷ The application of the maxim largely depends on the facts and circumstances in each case,⁶⁸ and should not be applied too literally.⁶⁹

2. SEQUENTIAL CAUSES. Where there are two or more causes contributing to the production of the loss the proximate cause is not necessarily the cause nearest in point of time to the loss,⁷⁰ but it is the efficient, predominating cause⁷¹ of which the loss was the natural and almost inevitable result.⁷² It need not be in active operation at the time of the loss.⁷³

"In applying this maxim, in looking for the proximate cause of the loss, if it is found to be a peril of the sea, we inquire no further; we do not look for the cause of that peril. But if the peril of the sea, which operated in a given case, was not of itself sufficient to occasion, and did not in and by itself occasion the loss claimed, if it depended upon the cause of that peril whether the loss claimed would follow it . . . then we must look beyond the peril to its cause, to ascertain the sufficient cause of the loss." 3. INDEPENDENT CAUSES. Where the causes are independent, the only peril which the law considers is that nearest in point of time,⁷⁴ and not a peril but for the occurrence of which the insured property might not have been brought within the reach or operation of the subsequent peril.⁷⁵

4. INCIDENTAL LOSSES AND EXPENSES. It also includes all incidental losses which are a legal or natural consequence of the direct injury or loss.⁷⁶ Thus up to the extent of the amount of the insurance the underwriters are liable for all expenses which are the direct and inevitable result of the perils insured against, such as repairs,⁷⁷ salvage,⁷⁸ amounts paid in good faith to captors for the redemption of captured property,⁷⁹ towage,⁸⁰ or other expenses which are necessary for the protection and preservation of the insured property.⁸¹ But consequential damages which the insured may suffer are not covered.⁸²

Expense of a survey properly made to ascertain the propriety of making repairs is chargeable against the underwriters. Potter v. Ocean Ins. Co., 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,335, 3 Sumn. 27.

Marine interest.—To render the insurer liable for marine interest, it ought clearly to appear that there were no other means of raising money than by a bottomry bond. Reade v. Commercial Ins. Co., 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 352, 3 Am. Dec. 495.

Expenses incident to sale of cargo partially damaged.—The charges and expenses incurred in handling and disposing of the goods, in case of a partial loss, in order to be considered a part of the loss, must be reasonable and proper, for the purpose only of ascertaining the amount of the loss. Thus items for surveys, inspection, and sale at auction would be included, but not charges for storage, nor the amount paid by the consignee for insurance of the goods while in store at the place of delivery. Lamar Ins. Co. v. McGlashen, 54 Ill. 513, 5 Am. Rep. 162.

82. Expenses in discharging and disposing of worthless cargo, which has become so by a sea peril, is not a charge against the underwriters on the ship. Field Steamship Co. v. Burr, [1898] 1 Q. B. 821, 8 Aspin. 384, 67 L. J. Q. B. 528, 78 L. T. Rep. N. S. 293, 46 Wkly. Rep. 490 [affirmed in [1899] 1 Q. B. 579, 8 Aspin. 529, 68 L. J. Q. B. 426, 80 L. T. Rep. N. S. 445, 47 Wkly. Rep. 341].

Neglect of the insured to preserve his lien for freight after a loss of a part of the cargo by perils insured against is not a loss chargeable to the underwriters. *Williams v. Canton Ins. contributions are considered the proximate result of the peril which occasioned the general average sacrifice.⁸³

6. ACTS INDUCED BY PERIL INSURED AGAINST. The underwriters are not liable for the acts of third persons directly producing loss or injury, although such acts may have been induced by the happening of some peril insured against.⁸⁴

7. SALES TO SATISFY CHARGES. A loss caused by the sale of property to satisfy a lien or charge which the insured was bound to pay and which lien arose from the failure to pay the charges and expenses incurred for repairs,⁸⁵ salvage,⁸⁶ or bottomry⁸⁷ is not the proximate result of the peril which necessitated such repairs, etc.

The erroneous payment of the insured's interest in the proceeds of a salvage suit to another party is not a claim against the underwriter. The Clintonia, 105 Fed. 256.

Loss sustained by the operation of the cesser clause in a charter-party for payment of freight in case of break-down is the proximate result of the peril which caused the break-down. The Bedouin, [1894] P. 1, 7 Aspin. 391, 63 L. 8. SACRIFICES TO AVOID PERIL. Where a vessel is voluntarily scuttled, stranded, burned, or otherwise injured to avoid an impending peril, such peril is the proximate cause of the loss.⁸⁸

9. ILLUSTRATIONS OF PROXIMATE CAUSE — a. Perils of the Sea. The following losses have been held to be the proximate result of a peril of the sea: The plundering of a vessel after its wreck and while on shore;⁸⁹ or its burning,⁹⁰ capture,⁹¹ or destruction in a gale⁹² while in such situation; the going ashore of a vessel because of the impressing of members of the crew who had been sent ashore to cast off her ropes,⁹³ or because of absence of a coast light extinguished by a belligerent during hostilities;⁹⁴ the freezing of the cargo after sinking of the vessel;⁹⁵ or damage by injurious flavor imparted to goods from putrefaction of other goods caused by shipping sea-water.⁹⁶ But damage done to perishable goods in handling them in discharging and reshipping them at an intermediate port so that repairs, rendered necessary by perils of the sea, could be made to the ship, is not the proximate result of such perils;⁹⁷ nor is the jettison of cargo because of its becoming putrid owing to delay of the voyage caused by tempestuous weather,⁹⁸ or the death of slaves because of the failure of provisions produced by delay resulting from bad weather.⁹⁹

b. Capture and Seizure. The proximate cause of a loss is held to be by capture where, after capture, the vessel is plundered, fired, wrecked, or otherwise destroyed;¹ and capture is also considered the proximate cause of a loss where the vessel has stranded or been driven by tempests into an enemy's port and there captured.² The expenses incurred in procuring the release of a vessel seized for smuggling are the proximate result of the seizure and not the barratrous act of the master in smuggling.³

c. Fire. Fire is the proximate cause of a loss where a vessel sinks because a fire produced by a collision prevents the use of the pumps to keep the vessel afloat;⁴ where after a collision a fire burns her upper parts, thereby so lessening her floating capacity as to cause her to sink;⁵ or where fire causes an explosion producing damage to the vessel.⁶

d. Barratry. Loss by fire or other peril occasioned by the direct act and agency of the master and crew barratrously committed is the proximate result of such barratry.⁷

e. Bursting of Boilers. The destruction by fire occasioned directly by the bursting of the boiler is the proximate result of the bursting of the boiler.⁸

H. Discrimination of Damages From Concurrent Perils. Where there is a concurrence of two causes of loss, one insured against and the other not insured against, or where they are insured against by different underwriters, if the damage caused by each can be discriminated it is to be separately borne by the parties respectively chargeable therewith.⁹ But if the damage done by each cannot be distinguished the maxim proxima causa is then applicable.¹⁰

I. Excepted Risks — 1. FORM AND EFFECT OF EXCEPTION. A clause in a policy providing that the subject-matter is "warranted free" from a particular peril or loss means that for such peril or loss the underwriter exempts himself from liability.¹¹ It does not create a technical warranty so as to avoid the insurance if such peril or loss occur.¹² An exception in the policy has the same effect, and in either case there can be no recovery for losses from such perils.¹³ Perils which are excepted by the underwriters are construed the same as when they appear in the body of the policy as risks which the underwriters assume.¹⁴

2. APPLICATION OF CAUSA PROXIMA. The rules as to proximate cause of perils insured against apply equally in determining whether a loss falls within an excepted peril.¹⁵

Where the bursting of a boiler while the boat was running drove out the adjacent boiler and tore away the stanchion supporting the upper deck, so that it fell down into the furnace and took fire, the bursting of the boiler was held to be the immediate and proximate cause of the loss. Roe v. Columbus Ins. Co., 17 Mo. 301.

Insurance against loss occurring "subsequent" to peril.—A policy which excepts loss by the bursting of boilers, but covers that "occurring subsequent to and in consequence of such bursting," does not cover a loss occasioned by an explosion so violent as to tear open the sides of the vessel to such an extent that the water admitted sinks her in five or ten minutes. Such a loss is immediate upon, not subsequent to, the explosion, within the meaning of the policy. Evans v. Columbian Ins. Co., 44 N. Y. 146, 4 Am. Rep. 650.

A. 801, a vessel stranded and subsequently a fire broke out which was the proximate result of the stranding. The vessel was insured to the amount of twelve thousand dollars by fire insurance companies; to the amount of ten thousand dollars in marine policies covering loss by fire; and five thousand dollars in a marine company not covering loss by fire. In an action to apportion the loss, which was total and amounted to eighteen thousand dollars, it was found that the loss due to the stranding was six thousand dollars. This latter sum was ordered to be paid solely by the marine underwriters; nine thousand dollars to be paid proportionately by all underwriters; and three thousand dollars by the fire underwriters alone.

3. PARTICULAR EXCEPTIONS — a. Leakage. An exception of liability for leakage applies to leakage from sea perils as well as ordinary leakage.¹⁶ The exception usually provides that the underwriters shall not be liable unless the leakage is occasioned by stranding or collision.¹⁷

b. Damage From Dampness. The usual exception as to damage from dampness¹⁸ exempts the underwriter from damage from vapor and moisture in the hold of the vessel,¹⁹ and from vapor from other cargo which has come into contact with sea-water;²⁰ but where one part of a cargo of grain becomes wet with sea-water, damage to the other part from contact with the first is not within the exception.²¹

c. Capture in Port. "Free from capture in port" discharges the underwriters if the seizure takes place there.²² It does not include a capture on the high seas,²³ but includes any place where it is customary to load or discharge vessels.²⁴

d. Bursting of Boilers. The exception as to damage from bursting of boilers excludes liability for damage to the vessel on account of the bursting of the boiler,²⁵ and all damage, partial or total, notwithstanding the policy contains a memorandum clause.²⁶ Where the exception is limited to cases of external causes, it means causes which are external to the boat, not to the boiler.²⁷

e. Negligence or "Want of Ordinary Care." An exception as to damages from negligence or from "want of ordinary care" relieves the underwriter where the damage was occasioned by running the vessel at excessive speed,²⁸ failure to properly station the lookouts,²⁹ overloading the vessel to a point where danger becomes apparent,³⁰ or any other negligent management or navigation.³¹ But it does not relieve the underwriter where the negligence of those in charge of another vessel causes injury to the property insured.³²

law or ordinance of the country where the trade is carried on.³³ It may consist of carrying contraband.³⁴ Under this exception the underwriters are not liable for losses from illicit trade or from attempting to trade illicitly;³⁵ but for any illegal seizure,³⁶ or for a seizure not provided for by the laws of the country,³⁷ or for seizure on account of illicit trade barratrously carried on,³⁸ the underwriters are liable. A judicial condemnation is not necessary.³⁹ The seizure may be made where there is probable cause,⁴⁰ but a seizure not made in good faith but on a pretext of the trade being illicit is not excluded by the exception.⁴¹ That the underwriter has knowledge that the trade is to be illegal does not alter the effect of the exception.⁴²

g. Loss of Time. The clause, "Warranted free from any claim consequent on loss of time," in a marine insurance policy exempts the insurers on freight from loss from delay in repairing machinery which frustrates the object of the adventure.⁴³

h. Miscellaneous Exceptions. Various other exceptions less frequently used have been the subject of construction by the courts, including exceptions of blockade,⁴⁴ denial of entry,⁴⁵ insurrection,⁴⁶ ice, except when lying between piers,⁴⁷ melting of ice,⁴⁸ towing,⁴⁹ collision of governments,⁵⁰ overloading,⁵¹ and negligence of those in charge of boat.⁵²

4. IMPLIED EXCEPTIONS. There is in all policies an implied exception to damage existing prior to the taking effect of the policy, and the expenses incurred for repairing such damage, although occurring during the life of the policy, are not insured against.⁵³

IX. EXTENT OF LOSS AND LIABILITY OF INSURER.

A. In General. The amount stated in the policy fixes the limit of the underwriter's liability for any one loss.⁵⁴

B. Successive Losses. Where there are several successive losses to the subject-matter during the term of the policy, the underwriters are liable for all of them notwithstanding their aggregate amount exceeds the amount named in the policy.⁵⁵

C. Merger of Losses — 1. IN GENERAL. Where a partial loss occurs and is followed by a total loss during the term of the policy and before repair, the partial loss is considered merged in the total loss and the underwriters are only liable for the latter.⁵⁶ And although the prior partial loss was from a peril not insured against, the underwriters are liable for the subsequent total loss if from an insured peril, and the extent of the partial loss is immaterial.⁵⁷

Limit of liability.—The liability of the underwriter is not restricted to the single amount of his subscription, but he may be subject to several average losses, or to an average loss and a total loss, or to money expended and labor bestowed about the defense, safeguard and recovery of the ship to a greater amount than the subscription. *Le Cheminant v. If the first loss is in judgment of law total a subsequent total loss from another peril does not merge the prior loss. Schieffelin v. New York Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 21.

The owner of a vessel effected insurance on the outward voyage and with the same underwriter effected insurance upon the homeward voyage. A partial loss occurred on the outward voyage and after the termination of the first policy and while the second was in operation the vessel was totally destroyed. The damage from the prior loss had not been repaired. The policies were valued. The underwriter was held liable both for the partial loss and the total loss. Lidgett v. Secretan, L. R. 6 C. P. 616, 1 Aspin. 95, 40 L. J. C. P. 257, 24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 942, 19 Wkly. Rep. 1088.

Under a policy on time, the insured may recover for a partial loss, and subsequently for another distinct loss, partial or total. Wood v. Lincoln, etc., Ins. Co., 6 Mass. 479, 4 Am. Dec. 163.

57. See the cases infra, this note.

Constructive total loss merged in subsequent absolute total loss.—Woodside v. Globe Mar. Ins. Co., [1896] 1 Q. B. 105, 8 Aspin. 118, 65 L. J. Q. B. 117, 73 L. T. Rep. N. S. 626, 44 Wkly. Rep. 187.

The converse of the text proposition is also true; and where a vessel was damaged by perils of the sea to such an extent that the insured might have elected to treat the loss as total, and the vessel was subsequently captured, it was held that the insured could have no recovery under the policy, loss by capture not being covered. Rice v. Homer, 12 Mass. 230. See also Law v. Goddard, 12 Mass. 112; Schieffelin v. New York Ins. Co., 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 21; Livie v. Janson, 12 East 648, 11 Rev. Rep. 513.

Ship pledged for cost of repairs.—Where under a time policy a ship has sustained damage by perils insured against, and has been repaired abroad under an arrangement or where it consists of expenses or disbursements incurred,⁵⁹ the underwriters are liable for both such total and partial loss.

3. TOTAL LOSS AFTER TERMINATION OF POLICY. If the total loss takes place after the termination of the policy, it is a matter with which the underwriters have no concern, and they are liable for prior partial losses, although the same were never repaired.⁶⁰

D. Particular Average Losses — 1. IN GENERAL. Particular average means a partial loss as distinguished from a total loss or a general average loss.⁶¹

2. TOTAL LOSS OF PART. A total loss of a part of the property covered by a policy of marine insurance is but a partial loss, except where the policy is to be construed as a separate insurance on each of the several things or subjects protected by it.⁶²

3. ON FREIGHT. There is a partial loss on freight where the cargo is necessarily transhipped and the amount of such partial loss is the cost of forwarding the cargo from the point of transshipment.⁶³ If freight is actually earned⁶⁴ or the cargo, although damaged, arrived in specie⁶⁵ or can be transhipped so as to arrive in specie,⁶⁶ there is no loss on freight whatever. But a loss on a part of the cargo in specie is a pro tanto loss on freight.⁶⁷ If the ship-owner makes such delivery of the cargo to the consignee as he may be entitled to, the loss of such freight is not a charge against the underwriter.⁶⁸ If the cargo is delivered to the owner at an intermediate port under justifiable circumstances and is volun-

by which the ship is pledged for the cost of the repairs, but no personal liability is incurred by the ship-owners for those repairs, and the ship is subsequently lost on the voyage home, the underwriters are not liable to pay the cost of repairs in particular average, in addition to the total loss. The Dora Forster, [1900] P. 241, 69 L. If freight be not earned in consequence of events attributable to the shipper, any advance made on it must be returned, unless tarily accepted by the owner, freight pro rata itineris is earned and the underwriters are liable for a partial loss of freight.⁶⁹

4. ON PROFITS. If any part of the cargo arrives at the port of destination, there is no loss of profits.⁷⁰

5. ON ADVANCES. There is no partial loss on advances merely because the res for which the advances are made is damaged or partially destroyed, but it is only where the res as security for the advances is impaired that there can be a claim under the policy.⁷¹

6. ON BOTTOMRY. Upon an insurance upon bottomry there can be no recovery for a partial loss of the ship or for anything short of its absolute total loss.⁷²

E. General Average Losses—1. WHAT ARE. A general average loss in marine insurance is the amount lost to the owner of the ship, cargo, freight, or other interest for any voluntary sacrifice made or any extraordinary expense incurred by one interest for the benefit of all.⁷³ If the sacrifice, charge, or expense is not for the general benefit but for the benefit of a particular interest it is not a general average but a particular average charge against the interest for whose benefit it was made.⁷⁴ The principles governing general average and the rights and obligations of the various interests to and for contribution are fully considered elsewhere in this work.⁷⁵

2. CONCLUSIVENESS OF ADJUSTMENT. A general average contribution, although actually paid according to the adjustment, will not necessarily fix the amount of a recovery against the underwriter unless such average adjustment was correctly made according to the law of the place of adjustment.⁷⁶

The fact that one person owns the ship, cargo, and freight does not prevent a voluntary sacrifice of one for the benefit of all from being a general average loss and obliging the underwriters on each interest to pay their respective contributions. *Potter v. 76. Louisiana.—Shiff v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 6 Mart. N. S. 629.

3. FOREIGN ADJUSTMENT. To pay general average "as per foreign statement" means to pay by foreign adjustment, if that adjustment is correctly made in accordance with the foreign law.⁷⁷

4. OBLIGATION TO PAY BEFORE ADJUSTMENT OF AVERAGE. The obligation of the underwriter to pay a loss which is subject to general average contribution is not dependent upon an adjustment first taking place, but is payable directly upon proof of loss as in other cases, and the underwriter becomes subrogated to the rights of the insured to compel contribution.⁷⁸ But where the ship-owner is also owner of the cargo or freight, the amount due from the cargo or freight may be deducted from the loss on the ship.⁷⁹

F. Calculation of Liability—1. BASIC PRINCIPLE. It is a general rule peculiar to contracts of marine insurance that where the value of the insured's interest in the property insured exceeds the amount of the insurance, the insured is deemed a co-insurer as to such uninsured part and the underwriter is only liable for such proportion of the loss as the amount of the insurance bears to the value of the insured's interest.⁸⁰

2. VALUATION OF SUBJECT-MATTER—a. Under Valued Policy—(i) CONCLUSIVENESS OF VALUATION—(A) In General. In the absence of fraud, accident,

Where there is an open and a subsequent valued policy on the same goods the liability of the underwriter upon the valued policy is fixed by deducting the amount of the open policy calculated at the value named in the valued policy. Kane v. Commercial Ins. Co., 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 229; McKim v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,862, 2 Wash. 89.

Sale by court for less than valuation.—Where a vessel insured under a valued policy containing the usual running down clause was sold to pay the damage done to another vessel and realized on such sale less than the sum at which she was valued in the policy, the underwriters were held liable only for their proportionate parts of the sum realized and paid to the owners of the injured ship. Thompson v. Reynolds, 7 E. & B. 172, 3 Jur. N. S. 464, 26 L. J. Q. B. 93, 90 E. C. L. 172.

Several policies with different valuations.—Where property is insured under several policies and the valuations therein are different, each policy is to be settled according to its own valuation and without regard to the other policies. Pleasants v. Maryland Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 55, 3 L. ed. 486.

Carrier's liability insurance.—Where the underwriter insures a carrier by a valued policy against liability for carrying goods on deck, and there is a total loss of the deck cargo, the underwriter must pay the stipulated value notwithstanding the carrier settled his liability for a less sum. Ursula Bright Steamship Co. v. Amsinck, 115 Fed. 242.

become greatly impaired in value prior to the loss and from perils which were not insured against.⁸³

(b) Partial Losses. Contrary to the general rule an exception is made in some jurisdictions as to claims for partial losses and the policy is treated as if open.⁸⁴

(c) Constructive Total Losses. The conclusiveness of such valuation extends to determination of a constructive total loss.⁸⁵

(d) General Average and Salvage Losses. The weight of authority in the United States is that for general average and salvage losses the valuation in the policy is conclusive;⁸⁶ but in England and in Massachusetts the valuation in the average adjustment or the value upon which the salvage award was made is the basis upon which the underwriter pays in such cases.⁸⁷

(n) OPENING VALUATION FOR FRAUD, ETC. Where the valuation is opened for fraud, accident, or mistake, it is to be disregarded and the underwriter held liable only according to the actual value of the insured's interest.⁸⁸ A gross overvaluation may create a presumption of fraud.⁸⁹

A. 181 [affirming 100 Fed. 304].

Where goods are capable of separation into parts or parcels, the policy is to be taken as the standard price, and for a total loss of a part the underwriters are chargeable with a proportionate part of the value. Forbes v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 1 Gray (Mass.) 371. The provision contained in many policies for ascertaining the loss by a separation of damaged from undamaged articles applies only to partial losses and not to a total loss, where constructive or absolute. *Delaware Ins. b. Under Open Policy—(i) IN GENERAL. Where the policy is not valued, the basis upon which the underwriters are to pay is left open, and the real value must be proved by the insured in each case.⁹⁰

(ii) ON SHIP. In ascertaining the value of a ship under an open policy the value is to be taken as of the commencement of the risk.⁹¹ Cost price does not necessarily represent actual value.⁹²

(iii) ON CARGO. To ascertain the value of goods under an open policy the prime cost or invoice price of such goods is to be taken as the basis,⁹³ to which are to be added all expenses until put on board,⁹⁴ including the cost of insurance⁹⁵ and commissions,⁹⁶ but without deducting drawbacks.⁹⁷

(iv) ON FREIGHT. Under an open policy on freight, the gross amount of freight contracted to be paid is the basis of an adjustment of either a total or a partial loss of freight.⁹⁸ And where the insured under a policy on freight ships his own goods in his own vessel, the reasonable rate of freight for the carriage of such goods is to be ascertained, and will form the basis of an adjustment thereon.⁹⁹

3. COMPUTATION OF DAMAGE—a. Total Losses. Where the loss is total the damage is the value of the subject-matter and the underwriters pay the full amount of the insurance,¹ unless it exceeds the value of the insured property.²

Partial discharge of cargo.—Where the value of the cargo exceeds the amount of the insurance, and after a partial discharge there is a total loss of the residue which exceeds the amount insured, the underwriter is liable for the full amount. American Ins. Co. v. Griswold, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 399.

2. Amery v. Rogers, 1 Esp. 207. See supra, IX, F, 1.

b. Partial Losses—(1) ON SHIP—(A) Repairs Not Made. If repairs are not made, the extent of a partial loss of the ship must be determined by the estimate of surveyors,³ and may be fixed by taking the value of the vessel sound and its value in its damaged condition.⁴ Or the ship may be sold at public auction, in which case the liability of the underwriters will be the difference between the sale price and her original value.⁵

(B) Repairs Made. The damage done to a ship is ascertained where repairs have been made by the reasonable cost of such repairs⁶ and the expenses of saving.⁷ And upon this basis the underwriters may be liable for the full amount of the insurance as a particular average loss,⁸ subject to the deductions hereinafter stated.⁹

(C) Vessel Not Fully Restored. Where the repairs made are not such as to restore the vessel to its original form of construction, but it is repaired so as to make it equally as useful and valuable, the insured can recover from the underwriters only the cost of the repairs actually made, and not the amount which it would have cost to restore the vessel to its original form.¹⁰

(D) Temporary Repairs. Where temporary repairs are made at a port of refuge, and the insured acting in good faith leaves the permanent repairs to be made at another port, the underwriters are liable for the cost of both the permanent and temporary repairs.¹¹

(E) Deduction New For Old—(1) IN GENERAL. After full repairs have been made the vessel is generally in a better condition than before damaged on account of old material being supplanted by new, and in order to avoid controversy as to the exact extent of this benefit a rule has been established in fixing the amount of the damage which deducts one third of the costs of repairs, including both the cost of labor and material, from the total expense of such repairs.¹² But the deduction does not apply to incidental expenses connected with the repairs which do not enhance the value of the vessel, such as towage, boat hire, etc.¹⁸ The custom cannot be varied by showing that a greater benefit accrued to the ship by the replacing of the old with the new material.¹⁴

(2) PROCEEDS OF OLD MATERIALS. The proceeds of old materials must be first deducted from the gross cost of the repairs before making the deduction of one third.¹⁵

(3) NEW VESSELS. It is generally held that the deduction of one third does not apply in the case of a new vessel on her first voyage,¹⁶ but this exception has not been uniformly adopted.¹⁷ A voyage out and back is generally considered but one voyage unless very long.¹⁸

(II) ON GOODS. The rule for computing a particular average loss on goods is that the goods must be at once sold upon reaching their destination for the best possible price, and the ratio formed by the difference between the sound and damaged values at such port compared with the sound value then gives the per-

d. By Two or More Vessels. If the cargo is sent forward in or transhipped to two or more ships the adjustment must be made as to the cargo in each ship, as if there had been a separate insurance upon the cargo in each.²⁶ But this rule does not apply where the cargo is placed on two or more lighters for the purpose of loading or discharging a vessel.²⁷

e. After Partial Delivery. After a partial delivery of the cargo the percentage applies to the balance remaining at risk.²⁸

G. Deduction and Calculation of Percentages—1. WHAT LOSSES ARE CHARGEABLE TO UNDERWRITERS. Where the policy is "free of particular average under 5%" or other designated amount, the underwriters are not liable for particular average losses which are under the specified percentage;²⁹ but if the loss is equal to or above the percentage named the underwriters are liable for the entire loss.³⁰

2. HOW PERCENTAGE IS MADE UP. To make up the percentage all damage done or occasioned by any one particular casualty and all expenses and charges which are proximately caused thereby are to be added together.³¹ But a general average loss cannot be added to a particular average loss to make up the percentage.³² In the United States the general rule is that successive and distinct partial losses occurring on the same voyage cannot be added to make up the percentage,³³ but the contrary rule prevails in England.³⁴

3. HOW DAMAGE IS FIXED. The amount of the damage is fixed as in other cases, including deductions of one third on repairs of vessel.³⁵

H. Memorandum Clause — 1. IN GENERAL. The memorandum clause³⁶ was adopted for the purpose of avoiding disputes over small losses in cases of articles of a perishable nature,³⁷ and not for the purpose of enlarging the perils.³⁸

2. ARTICLES INCLUDED. Within this clause it has been held that "corn" includes malt,³⁹ peas,⁴⁰ and beans,⁴¹ but not rice;⁴² that "fruit" includes oranges⁴³ and dried prunes;⁴⁴ that "vegetables" and "roots" include dried pinkroot which is not perishable,⁴⁵ but not sarsaparilla;⁴⁶ that "skins" and "hides" include furs⁴⁷ and deerskins;⁴⁸ that "salt" does not include saltpeter;⁴⁹ and that "dried fish" does not include pickled fish.⁵⁰ Under the general words as to perishable articles are included potatoes⁵¹ and wheat,⁵² but not fertilizer.⁵³

3. EXEMPTION FOR PARTIAL LOSSES — a. In General. By this clause the underwriters exempt themselves from all partial losses to any of the memorandum articles.⁵⁴ It does not restrict their liability for total losses.⁵⁵

b. Arrival in Specie — (i) IN GENERAL. If the goods or any part of them

36. Usual form of clause.—"It is also agreed, that bar, bundle, rod, hoop, and sheet iron, wire of all kinds, tin plates, steel, madder, sumac, brooms, wickerware and willow (manufactured or otherwise), straw goods, salt, grain of all kinds, rice, tobacco, indian meal, fruits, (whether preserved or otherwise), cheese, dry-fish, hay . . . (specifying various other articles) and all other articles that are perishable in their own nature, are warranted by the assured free from average, unless general."

Rider.—Frequently marine policies merely have a rider or stamped indorsement, "Free of particular average," etc., without enumerating any particular article or articles to which it is to apply. This is treated as making the clause apply to all the articles included in the policy. Washburn, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Reliance Mar. Ins. Co., 106 Fed. 116 [affirmed in 179 U. S. 1, 21 S. arrive in specie at the port of destination, however extensively they may be damaged, it is generally considered that there is but a partial loss,⁵⁶ even though they be subject to charges which exceed their value.⁵⁷

(11) *EXCEPTION TO CASES OF CONSTRUCTIVE TOTAL LOSS.*⁵⁸ This rule is subject to exceptions in several jurisdictions. The principal exception is made to cases where there is a constructive total loss,⁵⁹ made complete by due abandonment.⁶⁰ The weight of authority in the United States, however, seems to be that there can be no claim upon the underwriters for a constructive total loss of memorandum articles.⁶¹

Part memorandum articles.—Where a technical total loss is sought to be maintained upon the mere ground of the deterioration of the cargo at an intermediate port to a moiety of its value, all deterioration of memorandum articles must be excluded from the estimate. Therefore, in a cargo of a mixed character, no abandonment for mere deterioration in value during the voyage can be valid unless the damage on the non-memorandum articles exceeds a moiety of the value of the whole cargo, including the memorandum articles. Marcardier v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.) 39, 3 L. ed. 481.

If underwriters consent to an abandonment it seems that they may be liable for a constructive total loss of memorandum articles. Washburn, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Reliance Mar. Ins. Co., 82 Fed. 296, 27 C. C. A. 134 [affirmed in 179 U. S. 1, 45 L. ed. 49].

In New York the earlier cases generally held that a constructive total loss would not make a claim under the memorandum. Carr v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., 38 Hun 86 [affirmed in 109 N. Y. 504, 17 N. E. 369]; Burt v. Brewers', etc., Ins. Co., 9 Hun 383 [affirmed in 78 N. Y. 400]; Depeyster v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 17 Barb. 306 [affirmed in 19 N. Y. 272, 75 Am. Dec. 331]; Merchants' Steamship Co. v. Commercial Mut. Ins. Co., 51 N. Y. Super. Ct. 444; Saltus v. Ocean

(iii) TOTAL LOSS OF VALUE. Some jurisdictions make a further exception upon the general rule and permit a recovery where, although the goods arrive in specie, they are of no value.⁶²

(iv) DELIVERY OF SMALL QUANTITY BY EXTRAORDINARY EFFORTS. The underwriters cannot defeat a claim upon memorandum articles by delivering a small quantity of the goods in specie at the port of destination where the expense in so doing is not justified by their value.⁶³

c. Termination of Adventure at Intermediate Port. The termination of the voyage or disposal of the cargo at an intermediate port cannot convert a partial loss into a total loss, under the memorandum clause, except where the circumstances are such that the goods are not capable of reaching the port of destination in specie,⁶⁴ or are capable of reaching it only at an expense exceeding their value at their destination.⁶⁵ An inability to forward them during the season is insufficient,⁶⁶ and the fact that a prudent uninsured owner would have sold them will not make their loss one within the policy.⁶⁷

4. GENERAL AVERAGE LOSSES. The underwriters are not relieved under this clause from their obligation to pay general average losses, irrespective of amount, whether such losses arise directly from a general average sacrifice or as a contribution thereto.⁶⁸ But where the usual form of clause is modified, and "free from average" is substituted, the underwriter is relieved from paying general average losses to the same extent as he is relieved from paying particular average losses.⁶⁹

5. OPENING MEMORANDUM — a. In General. If the vessel is stranded, sunk, burnt, or in collision, the memorandum is immediately opened and the underwriters become liable for all losses whether total or partial,⁷⁰ and this is so whether or not the damage result from such stranding, burning, etc.,⁷¹ except in those cases wherein the usual form of the clause is altered so as to expressly require the loss to result from the stranding, etc.⁷² The happening of one of the events is a condition precedent to letting in claims for partial losses.⁷³

b. What Is Stranding, Etc. To open the memorandum clause the vessel as a whole must be either stranded, sunk, or burnt, or in collision.⁷⁴ The extent of the damage done thereby is not material.⁷⁵ A vessel is not "burnt" merely because she has a fire on board.⁷⁶ As to what is a stranding and a collision has been already treated.⁷⁷

c. Articles Must Be on Board. The stranding, or other event upon which the insured relies to open the memorandum, must occur while the insured goods are on board the ship.⁷⁸

I. Sue and Labor Clause — 1. NATURE AND OBJECT OF CLAUSE. The sue and labor clause⁷⁹ is a distinct and independent contract having reference to charges not covered by the insurance,⁸⁰ adopted for the purpose of permitting the insured to take every means for the recovery of property without waiving his right to abandon⁸¹ and to bind the underwriter to reimburse the insured for the reasonable amount of the expenses incurred.⁸² The duty of the insured to use diligence to labor for the recovery of property imperiled is not increased by this clause.⁸³

2. EXPENSES TO AVOID LOSSES COVERED BY POLICY. The sue and labor clause applies only to suing, etc., to prevent loss to property for which the underwriter would be liable under the other clauses of the policy.⁸⁴

3. WHEN EXPENSES TO BE INCURRED. The expenses need not be incurred during the life of the policy if the policy was in force when the injury occurred.⁸⁵

5. LIMITATION OF RECOVERY. For expenses fairly incurred under this clause the liability of the underwriter is not limited to the amount of his subscription.⁸⁷ But if a loss occurs which exceeds the claim against the underwriter and the insured sue and labor to prevent further loss, there can be no recovery for the expense thereof.⁸⁸

J. Total Losses—1. IN GENERAL. There are two kinds of total losses—actual or absolute, and technical or constructive.⁸ It is highly important that these be carefully differentiated, for upon them depend the whole doctrine of abandonment so important in the law of marine insurance. In cases of actual total loss no abandonment is necessary;⁹ but if the loss is merely constructively total, an abandonment by the insured becomes necessary in order to recover as for a total loss.¹⁰ An insurance against “total loss only” will cover any total loss, whether the same be active or constructive.¹¹ But where the insurance is against “absolute” total loss,¹² or “actual” total loss,¹³ no recovery can be had for a technical total loss.

2. EXTENT OF UNDERWRITER'S LIABILITY. The settled rule is that where there is either an actual or a constructive total loss, the underwriter is liable for the whole amount of the sum insured,¹⁴ but the rule is subject to the qualification

3. ACTUAL TOTAL LOSSES — a. Definition. An actual total loss is one where the subject-matter is wholly annihilated or ceases to remain in specie or where the subject-matter, although remaining in specie, is irretrievably lost to the insured and underwriter.¹⁶ If there is no spes recuperandi,¹⁷ nor anything of value to abandon,¹⁸ it is an actual total loss.

b. Annihilation Not Necessary. The physical destruction of the property is not necessary to constitute an actual total loss, but such a loss may exist, although the property remains in specie.¹⁹

c. Deprivation of Property. There is an actual total loss if the insured is effectively deprived of the use and possession of the property, whether by a seizure or capture followed by condemnation,²⁰ by judicial sale by a court of competent jurisdiction,²¹ or by theft²² or jettison.²³

d. Interception of Arrival. If from any of the perils insured against the property insured becomes placed in such a position that it is totally out of the power of the parties to procure its arrival at the port of destination the loss is total without abandonment.²⁴ But it is the well-settled rule that if any part of the

e. Necessary Sale by Master. If the master of the vessel sells the insured property before its arrival at its port of destination, from an absolute necessity, there is an actual total loss.²⁶ The necessity must be such as to leave the master no alternative.²⁷ This necessity exists where the expense of repairs will be more than the value of the vessel when repaired,²⁸ or where its situation is such as to render it probable that it will greatly deteriorate in value before it can be taken to its destination.²⁹ If the necessity does not exist there is no actual total loss.³⁰

Necessity of sale.—A vessel containing insured cargo went aground, and became hogged. The surveyors recommended her to be stripped with despatch and steps taken to save the cargo, but nothing was done for several days when the master, fearing bad weather, sold the ship and cargo. A large part of the cargo was saved by the purchaser. It was held that the loss could not be treated as total. Currie v. Bombay Native Ins. Co., L. R. 3 P. C. 72, 39 L. J. P. C. 1, 22 L. T. Rep. N. agency no longer remains the same kind of thing as before,³³ there is an actual total loss.

g. Submersion. Where the subject-matter goes to the bottom of the sea in such a place as to make its recovery improbable, there is an absolute total loss.³⁴ But if it is practicable to get her afloat and she is capable of being repaired at any expense there is no actual total loss.³⁵

h. Freight. There exists an actual total loss of freight in all cases where the ship-owner is effectively prevented from earning any part of the freight for the insured voyage,³⁶ and this occurs where the cargo upon which the freight is expected to be earned is totally lost³⁷ or fails to reach the port of destination;³⁸ where the vessel is disabled and compelled to reship her cargo at the same rate contracted for;³⁹ or where the voyage is broken up and the cargo is necessarily sold at an intermediate port;⁴⁰ but an unnecessary sale of the cargo at an intermediate port cannot render the underwriters liable for a total loss on freight, even though the sale is bona fide and for the best interests of the parties except the insurers on freight.⁴¹ If any part of the freight is actually earned, the loss is not total, irrespective of whether the owner has collected it.⁴² A total loss of the ship after loading of the cargo is not necessarily a total loss of freight, as the ship-owner may be able to save and tranship the cargo to its destination at a cost less than the amount of freight contracted for.⁴³ But if the vessel, prior to the load-

(II) *CALCULATION OF EXTENT OF LOSS.*⁵⁰ The extent of the injury to the vessel is to be considered with reference to its general market value immediately before the disaster,⁵¹ even though the policy is valued.⁵² In computing the amount of the damage to claim for a constructive total loss, the actual damage to the ship or cargo is to be ascertained as in other cases,⁵³ and it is not permissible to add thereto general average losses,⁵⁴ or the cost of survey.⁵⁵ Repairs should generally be estimated at the port of necessity;⁵⁶ but if full repairs cannot readily or as reasonably be made there, the rights of the parties are not to be sacrificed by following this rule,⁵⁷ and in such cases the insured cannot abandon if the vessel can be safely navigated to another port and repaired, and the entire expense is not equal to the requisite amount.⁵⁸ In regard to the vessel the right to abandon depends upon the estimated cost of such repairs by experienced and practical men, and not upon what the actual cost is subsequently proved to be.⁵⁹ It is the cost of full repairs, such as the underwriter would be liable for in payment of a partial loss, that is to be considered.⁶⁰ The deduction of one-third new for old is not generally made in ascertaining the damage,⁶¹ but there is a lack of uniformity as to this rule.⁶²

c. English and Canadian Rule—(i) IN GENERAL. In England and Canada to constitute a constructive total loss, the recovery of the insured property must be either impracticable⁶³ or such as would entail an expense which would exceed its value when recovered and put in order.⁶⁴

Institute time clause.—This clause provides that "the insured value shall be taken as the required value in ascertaining whether the vessel is a constructive total loss." Its effect is that as the vessel becomes damaged the owner must show that the cost of repairing her will exceed the value named in the

(π) TEST. The test usually employed in determining whether the loss is such as to permit the insured to abandon is to ascertain whether, under all the circumstances attending the vessel, a prudent owner, if uninsured, would have declined to repair,⁶⁵ or, in the case of cargo, whether it can be sent on to its destination at a less expense than its value on arrival there.⁶⁶

d. Wreck, Stranding, Etc. Whether the wreck, stranding, or submersion of a vessel will justify an abandonment of the property or interests at risk depends upon the circumstances attending each case, and the general rule applicable to such cases is that an abandonment is only permissible where the saving of the property is impracticable or where the cost of saving and restoring is so great as under the rules above stated amount to a constructive total loss.⁶⁷

e. *Capture, Seizure, Etc.*⁶⁸ A capture, seizure, or detention of the ship or cargo policy. Sailing Ship Blairmore Co. v. Macredie, [1898] A. C. 593, 8 Asp. 429, 67 L. J. P. C. 96, 79 L. T. Rep. N. S. 217; Marten v. Steamship Owners' Underwriting Assoc., 9 Asp. 339, 7 Com. Forty-eight per cent damage—Not worth repairing.—Where the jury found that the damage to an insured vessel from the perils insured against was forty-eight per cent of her value, and also found that the vessel was not worth repairing, it was held that there was no right to abandon as the vessel might not have been worth repairing without the injury. *Cazalet v. If plaintiffs act upon the judgment of competent surveyors that the vessel is not worth repairing, and upon their own bona fide opinion, they are justified in the abandonment and sale of a vessel. Hayman v. Molton, 5 Esp. 54, 8 Rev. Rep. 837; Baker v. Brown, 3 Nova Scotia Dec. 100. But the report of surveyors as to the necessity of the sale of a damaged vessel is not conclusive as to that necessity, or as to the right of the assured to abandon. Peck v. Nashville M. & F. Ins. Co., 6 La. Ann. 148.

Master must make sale.—No constructive total loss can be claimed by reason of a sale of a vessel at a port of distress unless the sale is made by the master, if he is present and in charge of the vessel. Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 2 Allen (Mass.) 93.

That the vessel was repaired immediately after the sale, at the port of disaster, does not show that the sale was unnecessary. Fuller v. Kennebec Mut. Ins. Co., 31 Me. 325. See also Hall v. Ocean Ins. Co., 37 Fed. 371.

Circumstances which permit sale.—The master of a vessel has no power to sell her so as to affect the insurers, except under circumstances of stringent necessity; such circumstances as, after sufficient examination of her condition, after every exertion in his power, within the means at his disposal, to extricate her from peril or to raise funds for the repair, leave him no alternative but to sell her as she is. Cobequid Mar. Ins. Co. v. Barteaux, L. R. 6 P. C. 319, 2 Aspin. 536, 32 L. T. Rep. N. S. 510, 23 Wkly. Rep. 892. Where a ship was so shattered in a storm that it was found on survey that the expenses of repairing her would far exceed her original value, and the captain sold her bona fide for the benefit of all concerned, and the purchaser shortly afterward broke her up, it was held that this was such an urgent necessity as justified the sale. Robertson v. Clarke, 1 Bing. 445, 2 L. J. C. P. O. S. 71, 8 Moore C. P. 622, 25 Rev. Rep. 676, 8 E. C. L. 587.

There is a justifiable sale of cargo where age and other circumstances antecedent to the sale were such as to have authorized an abandonment.⁷⁸

h. Loss and Retardation of Voyage. A retardation of the voyage does not give the insured, whether on ship, cargo, or freight, a right to abandon as for a total loss if the thing insured is capable of performing the voyage.⁷⁹ But if from the period insured against the voyage is absolutely lost or justifiably broken up the insured may abandon.⁸⁰ A reasonable time should be allowed to make neces-

Where a vessel was injured to more than half her value, and a sale being recommended on proper surveys, the master sold, it was held that this could not affect the insured's right to abandon. Center v. American Ins. Co., 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 564 [affirmed in 4 Wend. 45]. But if a vessel arrives at her port of destination damaged by perils insured against to an amount less than half her valuation in the policy, deducting from the requisite repairs one-third new for old, and is sold by the master, in the presence of the owners, because of the impossibility of obtaining the funds necessary to repair her, the owners are not entitled to abandon her to the underwriters and recover as for a total loss. *Allen v. When a ship is obliged to put back, and the damage she has sustained is of such a nature that she cannot pursue her voyage, and other ships cannot be procured to take the cargo, it is a total loss of ship, cargo, and freight, however inconsiderable the damage sustained may be, for the voyage in contemplation is lost. *Wilson v. sary repairs before it can be held that there has been an actual loss of the voyage.⁸¹

i. Effect of Arrival in Specie. If the subject-matter of the insurance arrive in specie at its destination there can be no abandonment.⁸²

j. Freight. Where there has been an actual total loss or a constructive total loss, followed by due abandonment, of cargo or of the ship, and if another ship cannot be procured, there is a constructive loss of freight.⁸³ If the ship is a total loss it is the duty of the master to earn freight by forwarding the cargo by another vessel if one can be procured, and thus avoid or reduce the loss,⁸⁴ or if the ship is merely damaged it is his duty to repair the same and carry the cargo⁸⁵ to its des-

What freight insured.—Where freight is insured on a particular voyage by a particular vessel, and cargo has been put on board and the vessel sails on her voyage, it is the freight of that cargo, in that vessel, and on that voyage which is the subject of insurance. McGaw v. Ocean Ins. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 405.

Freight earned after abandonment of ship.—Where, because of an embargo, a ship and its cargo are abandoned to the underwriters and accepted by them, and the embargo is taken off and the ship earns her freight, there is no total loss of freight. *McCarthy v. Round voyage insured and total loss of ship on outward passage.—Under a policy of insurance to the charterers of a vessel "for whom it concerns on freight on board," the charterers may recover the amount of the money payable under the charter-party at the termination of the round voyage, and which they have agreed to get insured, although the vessel is totally lost at the outward port. *Silloway v. Not applicable to river craft.—The rule requiring vessels to repair, if possible, and prosecute the voyage without transferring the freight, does not apply to river craft. Blanks v. Hibernia Ins. Co., 36 La. Ann. 599.

Limit of master's authority.—Where, in case of damage to a ship, the master elects to repair it, the mere fact that the expenses of repair ultimately prove to be greater than the value of the ship will not be sufficient to show that he acted beyond the scope of his termination if this can be done at a reasonable cost and within a reasonable time, but not otherwise.⁸⁶

k. Profits. It seems to be the better opinion that there can be no constructive total loss or an average loss on a policy on profits.⁸⁷

K. Abandonment⁸⁸—1. DEFINITION. Abandonment is the act of the insured in notifying the underwriter that he elects to avail himself of the right to treat a particular loss as total by surrendering to the underwriter his interest in the insured property.⁸⁹

2. NECESSITY OF ELECTION AND NOTICE. An election and notice of abandonment is a condition precedent to a claim for a constructive total loss.⁹⁰ There is no obligation upon the insured to abandon;⁹¹ but it is a matter of his own election, authority, or to entitle the owner, in an action on a policy of freight, to recover as for a total loss. Benson v. Chapman, 8 C. B. 950, 65 E. C. L. 950, 2 H. L. Cas. 696, 9 Eng. Reprint 1256, 13 Jur. 969.

Forms of notices held sufficient.—"The brig Gem being ashore and not probable that she will be got off, I hereby abandon said vessel to the office and claim a total loss, as insured by policy No. 16,677." Reynolds v. Ocean Ins. Co., 22 Pick. (Mass.) 191, 192, 33 Am. Dec. 727. Dec. 308. An abandonment which states that the vessel has been stranded at San Francisco, and is so much injured as to render it necessary to place her on shore, and that she cannot be repaired there, is sufficient. Lincoln v. Hope Ins. Co., 8 Gray (Mass.) 22. A letter of abandonment stating as the cause of loss that the boat "had been nearly destroyed by the late disaster," the cause of loss being matter of public notoriety. Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Glasgow, 9 Mo. 411. A letter of abandonment of a vessel upon the ground that, in consequence of sea perils, "being found irreparable on survey, she was condemned and sold," sufficiently states the cause of abandonment, if the vessel was so much damaged that the costs of repair would exceed half her value, deducting one-third new for old. Perkins v. Augusta Ins., etc., Co., 10 Gray (Mass.) 312, 71 Am. Dec. 654. Where the agent who issued the policy examined the wreck at the company's expense, and forwarded the owners' statement concerning the loss, and the owners afterward verified formal proofs of loss and executed an assignment to the company of their interest in the vessel, all of which were retained by the company, the abandonment and its acceptance were held to be complete. Singleton v. Phenix Ins. Co., 132 N. Y. 298, 30 N. E. 839.

Forms held insufficient.—"I observe by the Boston newspaper of the 29th January, that the ship General Smith, insured in your office . . . was driven ashore in a heavy gale of wind the 6th of December, and by a Charleston paper of the 26th of January, that on the 13th she was not got off. In so dangerous a situation as Helvoet roads, it is to be feared that a total loss has ensued. I therefore, as a measure of precaution for both your interest and my own, do hereby abandon to you, and claim a total loss." Bosley v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 450, 454, 22 Am. Dec. 337. A notice of abandonment of an insured cargo stating that the vessel put into an immediate port in distress, with several feet of water in her hold, and the cargo was landed, and found very seriously damaged, and claiming a total loss is insufficient to charge the insurers with a total loss, as not showing that the cargo was damaged to more than half its value. McConochie v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 26 N. Y. 477. Giving notice of loss, neglecting to take care of the property, suffering the agents of the underwriters to take measures for its preservation, and their selling the property by the assent of the insured or his agent, pursuant to a stipulation in the policy which provides that in case of loss the damaged portion shall be separated from the sound, and the amount of damage ascertained by appraisal or sale at auction, the underwriters "being liable for the loss on the damaged portion only," do not amount to an abandonment and an acceptance thereof, making the underwriters

It may be by parol,⁹⁴ or communicated by telegraph.⁹⁵ The word "abandon" is not necessary.⁹⁶ It is sufficient if it gives the underwriter information of the nature of the loss⁹⁷ and of the election of the insured to abandon all his rights to the property.⁹⁸ But the exact fractional interest need not be stated.⁹⁹

b. Must Be Unequivocal. The intention to presently abandon must be explicit and unconditional,¹ and it must be coupled with an actual abandonment or relinquishment of claim of ownership.²

c. Must Assign Grounds. The insured must assign the true causes for the abandonment,³ and the cause of the loss,⁴ and if he assign an insufficient cause, liable for the sum insured as for a total loss. Savage v. Corn Exch. F., etc., Ins. Co., 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 1 [affirmed in 36 N. Y. 655].

A demand of payment for a total loss has been held to amount to an abandonment. Cassedy v. Louisiana State Ins. Co., 6 Mart. N. S. (La.) 421. Contra, Parmeter v. Todhunter, 1 Campb. 541.

The collection of the full amount at which a vessel was valued in a policy from an insurance company, on account of injury by collision, does not import an abandonment of the vessel by the owners to the insurer, where she was undervalued in the policy, and the owners refused to abandon. The St. Johns, 101 Fed. 469.

Under a clause requiring a notice of abandonment to be in writing, and sufficient to vest title in the company, a telegram informing the company that the vessel was ashore at a given point, and that the insured abandoned it and claimed a total loss, is sufficient, as no deed of abandonment is necessary to vest the title in the insurer under marine law. Richelieu, etc., Nav. Co. v. Thames, etc., Mar. Ins. Co., 72 Mich. 571, 40 N. W. 758.

There is a waiver of the right to object to the form of the abandonment where it contains an offer to make any further conveyance and assurance of title, and is absolutely rejected. Insurance Co. of North America v. Johnson, 70 Fed. 794, 17 C. C. A. 416.

or causes which do not in fact exist, he cannot avail himself of the abandonment in suing for a total loss.⁵ The grounds for the abandonment must be stated with such particularity as to enable the underwriter to determine whether he is bound to accept the offer or not.⁶

4. RIGHT DEFENDANT ON EXISTING FACTS. The general rule is that the right of the insured to abandon depends upon the actual state of fact at the time the notice of abandonment is given.⁷ In New York it has been held that the insured may abandon if the state of his intelligence regarding the loss is such that he would have been entitled to abandon.⁸

5. MUST COVER WHOLE INTEREST. The abandonment must be entire and cover the whole interest insured,⁹ but if only a part of the insured's interest is covered he need only abandon that part.¹⁰

6. WHEN RIGHT BECOMES FIXED — a. In the United States. The American rule is that the rights of the parties become fixed at the time of the abandonment, and the right of the insured to recover for a constructive total loss is not altered by any change in the nature or extent of the loss.¹¹

Provision in policy for assignment of interest.—Where a policy contained the following clause, "And in all cases of abandonment, the assured shall assign, transfer, and set over to said insurance company all their interest in and to the said steamboat, and every part thereof, free of all claims and charges whatsoever," and only three fourths of the agreed value of the steamboat was insured, it was held that this clause had no more extensive meaning than the technical term "abandonment," as settled by the courts, and that the owners still held an interest of one fourth in the boat. *Cincinnati Ins. b. In England and Canada. In England and Canada the loss must continue to be constructively total until the commencement of the action in order to entitle the insured to recover for a total loss.¹²

7. BY WHOM MADE — a. In General. The abandonment need not necessarily be made by the insured but may be made by an authorized agent,¹³ and an agent having authority to insure has prima facie an authority to abandon.¹⁴ It is requisite that the person who assumes to make the abandonment has the power to make a legal transfer of the property abandoned.¹⁵ An equitable owner¹⁶ or pledgee¹⁷ cannot abandon. An abandonment by one part-owner of his interest does not affect the interests of the other owners,¹⁸ but one jointly interested in the property with others may abandon for all.¹⁹

b. Effect of Mortgage. If the insured has mortgaged his vessel, thereby depriving himself of the power of conveying absolute title, he cannot abandon without the consent of the mortgagee.²⁰ A mortgagee cannot give notice of abandonment where he is not the party insured, but if he insures his interest as mortgagee he can abandon.²¹

Foreclosure of mortgage not a waiver of abandonment.—Where the mortgagor of an insured vessel made a valid offer of abandonment on account of a constructive total loss, which was ratified and assented to by the mortgagee, and the vessel was afterward repaired by the underwriters, who gave notice to the assured that they would be no longer responsible for her, it was held that a subsequent sale of the boat by the mortgagee under his mortgage did not operate as a waiver of the abandonment so far as the mortgagor was concerned. *Fulton Ins. Mortgagee president of corporation owning vessel.—Where a stranded vessel owned by a corporation was abandoned to the underwriters by an instrument in writing, signed by the president of the corporation, who, at the same time, held a mortgage upon her in his individual capacity, it was held that, as he would be estopped to set up the mortgage against the underwriters, the abandonment conveyed to and vested in them an unencumbered and perfect title to the subject abandoned. *Northwestern Transp. 21. Anchor Mar. Ins. Co. v. Keith, 9 Can. Sup. Ct. 483.

8. TO WHOM MADE. The abandonment may be made to an agent of the underwriter.²²

9. TIME OF MAKING. The general rule is that the insured must abandon within a reasonable time after receiving information from which it is apparent that a loss has occurred which entitles him to abandon.²³ If from information first received the character of the loss is not made to clearly appear, the insured has a reasonable time to ascertain its real nature.²⁴ What is a reasonable time depends on the facts and circumstances in each case.²⁵ After the property passes beyond the control of the insured, as from an unjustifiable sale, an abandonment is too late.²⁶ Some cases have held that the right to abandon continues so long as the loss continues total,²⁷ or the delay is not prejudicial to the underwriter.²⁸ In

When a loss is well authenticated or well known, abandonment should be at once tendered. If it is not certainly known, but from strong evidence is fully believed, and the assured suspends his option with a view to avail himself of some favorable contingency, this might turn the property on him at its full or supposed value. But such intent must be certainly and clearly proved, not inferred from slight circumstances, or from the probability that such would naturally be a motive with the assured for delaying an abandonment. *Duncan v. other jurisdictions it seems that an abandonment is requisite immediately upon acquiring information of the loss.²⁹

10. RELATION BACK. The abandonment when made relates back to the time of the loss,³⁰ and if effectual the title of the underwriters becomes vested as of that date and they are responsible for the reasonable expenses incurred by the master after that date in an attempt to save the vessel.³¹ The captain or master continues the agent of the insured until abandonment,³² but after abandonment the master and owner become the agents of the underwriters.³³

11. CONTINUANCE. An abandonment duly made is considered as continuing, although the underwriter refuse to accept it.³⁴

12. NATURE OF INSURED'S INFORMATION. The intelligence which authorizes the insured to abandon need not be direct or positive information.³⁵ The protest of the master,³⁶ a newspaper report,³⁷ the report of a pilot,³⁸ or a letter from an official or an agent³⁹ is sufficient. The information must be of such facts and circumstances as render it highly probable that a constructive total loss has occurred,⁴⁰ and facts sufficient to constitute a total loss must exist,⁴¹ but the facts and the information need not be the same.⁴²

13. WAIVER. The underwriter may by his acts or conduct waive the requirement of an abandonment and become liable to pay a total loss without formal notice.⁴³

14. REVOCATION — a. In General. There is a revocation of an abandonment where the insured retakes possession of the insured property and puts the same to his own use,⁴⁴ and it is immaterial whether he intends to revoke the abandonment by so doing.⁴⁵ There is no revocation where the insured or his agents continue in control of the property for the purpose of preserving it and acting for the best interests of all concerned.⁴⁶ Nor is a refusal to execute a conveyance of the property a revocation.⁴⁷

b. Repurchase at Master's Sale. A repurchase by the original owner under a bona fide and justifiable sale by the master will revoke an abandonment made prior thereto.⁴⁸ And a purchase by the master at such sale accrues to the owner, provided he chooses to accept the benefit of such purchase, in which event it has the same effect as a direct purchase by him.⁴⁹

15. ACCEPTANCE — a. In General. An acceptance of an abandonment estops the underwriter from relying upon any insufficiency in the form, time, or right of abandonment,⁵⁰ and is irrevocable without the assent of the insured.⁵¹ It need not be in express words but may be shown by acts inconsistent with an intent not to accept.⁵²

Waiver of delay.—Where the insured under a marine policy wrote the insurer, inquiring "whether we must make an abandonment by judicial act, or if our present letter, expressing an intent to abandon, will do?" it was held that the latter's answer, ignoring the informal tender, and denying any liability under the policy, excused a delay in making the formal tender. *De Farconnet v. b. Repair and Return of Vessel. The underwriter may, without accepting the abandonment, take the vessel and repair her and return her to the insured if the expense of such repairs is not sufficient to constitute a constructive total loss;⁵³ but if the expense exceeds such amount they cannot require the insured to retake the property.⁵⁴ The vessel, however, must be returned fully repaired⁵⁵ within a reasonable time,⁵⁶ in order to make it obligatory on the insured to accept its return. the repairs insufficient, he can recover from the underwriters the cost of additional repairs.⁵⁷

16. CLAUSES RESTRICTING ABANDONMENT. A policy may contain clauses restricting or imposing conditions upon the right to abandon and claim a constructive total loss. Thus it may expressly stipulate that there shall be no abandonment as for a constructive total loss, unless the cost of repairs shall exceed the percentage of the agreed value required in the absence of such a stipulation,⁵⁸ or it may prohibit an abandonment until a certain time after the loss,⁵⁹ or, in the case of capture, require proof of condemnation or of continuance of the detention for a certain period,⁶⁰ or require official news in case of capture or embargo.⁶¹

17. EFFECT OF ABANDONMENT — a. In General. An abandonment of itself transfers to the underwriter the interests in the subject-matter covered by the policy,⁶² subject to the rights and interests, if any, of third persons,⁶³ and no additional

58. The words "constructive total loss," in a marine policy stipulating that there shall be no abandonment of the barge insured as for a constructive total loss unless the cost of the necessary repairs required by the disaster, exclusive of the cost of rescuing the barge and taking her to the dock, etc., be equivalent to seventy-five per cent of the agreed value, mean, when applied to damages by a storm, one of the perils insured against, to be such a loss as that the repairs made necessary thereby, exclusive of rescuing the vessel and taking her to the dock, will be equivalent to seventy-five per cent of her value. Searles v. Western Assur. Co., (Miss. 1906) 40 So. 866. Under such a clause, where to repair the damage caused solely by the storm would cost less than twenty-five per cent of the value of the vessel, the assured cannot abandon and recover for constructive total loss; and he cannot justify an abandonment of the vessel as for a constructive total loss by showing that there were no facilities at the place where the vessel was sunk for raising her and making the expense of bringing the vessel to a dock an element of damage, showing as to him that the vessel was worthless, so as to entitle him to abandon her and sue for a constructive total loss. Searles v. Western Assur. Co., supra. The assured is not compelled to make an effort to save the vessel before he can abandon and sue, but he must prove that the conditions warranting him in abandoning her existed. Searles v. Western Assur. Co., supra.

conveyance or transfer is required.⁶⁴ The underwriter acquires thereby the entire interest insured,⁶⁵ together with all its incidents,⁶⁶ including rights of action against third parties for the injury;⁶⁷ and the fact that the property was undervalued is immaterial.⁶⁸ Any interest of the owner which is not insured continues to remain his property and is not affected by the abandonment.⁶⁹

b. Transfer of Agency and Liability For Expenses, Etc. From the moment of a valid abandonment the master of the vessel becomes the agent of the underwriters,⁷⁰ and the latter become responsible for all his acts in connection with the insured property⁷¹ and liable for all expenses and charges incurred in regard thereto.⁷²

c. Right of Underwriters to Freight. Freight earned or paid does not pass to the underwriter on a vessel under an abandonment;⁷³ but freight subsequently earned passes to such underwriter.⁷⁴ Freight pending is, under the American authorities, to be apportioned as of the time of the disaster causing the abandon-bond, which was conditioned to be void should an utter loss from any of the enumerated perils occur, is, upon a wreck of the vessel during the specified voyage, not amounting to such loss, entitled to the proceeds of the cargo saved by his efforts, as against the insurers thereof, who accepted an abandonment by the owners as for a "total loss," and paid the amount of their policies, said proceeds being insufficient to satisfy the bond. *Delaware Mut. Recovery of property improperly sold by master.—Where a master of a vessel, acting in his capacity as master, and from an alleged necessity, sells a damaged ship, the owners may, against the vendee, show that there was no such necessity, and that therefore the property was not divested; and upon an abandonment the same right would pass to the insurers. *Peirce v. ment,⁷⁵ but under the English decisions all freight pending passes to the underwriters on the vessel.⁷⁶ An underwriter on freight becomes by an abandonment subrogated to the rights of the insured and takes such freight as has been earned,⁷⁷ but not freight thereafter earned by the vessel in the same or another voyage.⁷⁸

X. NOTICE AND PROOFS OF LOSS, PAYMENT, ADJUSTMENT, AND SUBROGATION.

A. Preliminary Notice and Proofs of Loss — 1. FORM, ETC. Marine insurance policies usually provide that the loss thereunder shall be paid within a specified time "after proof thereof." This provision does not require that there shall be strict legal proof of a loss,⁷⁹ but only that there be the best evidence of the facts that the insured has at that time.⁸⁰ They should show the interest of the insured⁸¹ and a loss from a peril insured against,⁸² and these facts may be established by such evidence as the protest of the master,⁸³ the bill of lading,⁸⁴ the invoice,⁸⁵ the certificate of a ship carpenter,⁸⁶ or the register and affidavits.⁸⁷

Where the master makes a special contract to receive a moiety of the freight in lieu of wages and procures insurance of his part of the freight, and abandons as for a total loss, and freight is subsequently earned, his abandonment does not operate as an assignment of the freight so subsequently earned, and he is entitled to recover his moiety of the same freight against the owners or abandoners who have received it. *Hammond v. Where there is a claim against several companies for the same loss, it is not necessary for the claimants to apportion or attempt to apportion the loss among the different insurers in their preliminary proofs, although the policies require that the insured shall in case of loss furnish to the insurer a full and detailed statement of the loss and the amount claimed. Fuller v. Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co., 36 Fed. 469, 1 L. R. A. 801.

87. Where the preliminary proofs under a policy on a whaling ship consisted of the ship's register, and an affidavit of one owner, who was also the managing agent in whose name it was insured, that it had sailed for home from the Sandwich Islands twenty months previous, and was last heard from

Under such provision the proofs of loss may be made by a managing agent or owner.⁸⁸

2. CONDITION PRECEDENT AND WAIVER THEREOF. The submission of proofs of loss is a condition precedent to a recovery under the usual form of policy,⁸⁹ unless waived by the underwriter. There is a waiver of proofs of loss or any insufficiency in those given where the underwriter denies liability and refuses to pay without requesting additional proofs.⁹⁰

B. Payment—1. TO WHOM MADE. Payment should be made to the insured or his agent or representative,⁹¹ but it may be made to a third party with the consent of the insured.⁹² In England the underwriter may make payment to the broker effecting the policy and thereby become discharged, but there must be actual payment in cash and not merely an adjustment of credits.⁹³

2. RECOVERY BACK. After payment the sum paid cannot be recovered back on the ground of mistake of law⁹⁴ or because of defenses to the policy then known by the underwriter.⁹⁵ But if the insured suppresses a material fact when the risk is taken the policy is void, and if the insurer pays the loss while still in ignorance of this fact he is entitled to recover the money paid.⁹⁶

C. Adjustment—1. AS CONDITION PRECEDENT. Clauses are sometimes inserted whereby it is provided that the loss shall become payable after adjustment, and under this clause an adjustment in the manner provided for in the policy is a condition precedent to an action to recover for such loss,⁹⁷ unless the underwriter by his conduct or otherwise waives such adjustment.⁹⁸

2. BY WHOM MADE. An adjustment may be made by an authorized agent⁹⁹ of fifteen months previous, when on her way, they were held sufficient. Child v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 26.

3. CONCLUSIVENESS. An adjustment of a loss once made cannot be opened except for fraud or mistake,² and the underwriters after making an adjustment cannot contest their liability under the policy³ or for the amount at which the loss has been adjusted.⁴

D. Subrogation—1. ON PAYMENT. By payment of a loss, total or partial,⁵ the underwriter becomes, by operation of law and without an assignment or transfer,⁶ subrogated to all the rights of the insured in regard to that loss,⁷ and is entitled to the proceeds of the property insured⁸ or any amount which may be paid on account of such loss,⁹ including general average contributions¹⁰ and amounts paid by sovereign states for injury to or confiscation of the property insured.¹¹ He becomes subrogated to all causes of action which the insured may have against any third person for producing such loss and may recover for injuries sustained in a collision.¹² But the underwriter stands in no better position than the insured and can have no recovery against third persons except such as could have been ceedings by his conduct while the arbitrator had the case under consideration. Hamilton v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 106 Mass. 395.

Cannot contest interest.—Where, after a claim for total loss on a marine policy, all claims and demands under the policy were referred to an arbitrator, who awarded that the underwriters should pay claimant a total loss, the underwriters cannot show, in defense to an action on the award, that they did not by the agreement intend to admit for whose benefit the insurance was effected, or show that such question was not presented to the arbitrators. *Richardson v. had by the insured.¹³ The underwriter is only entitled by subrogation to full indemnity for the amount paid to the insured, and should he recover against a third party a greater sum than that paid to the insured he is bound to reimburse the insured therefor.¹⁴

2. ON COMPROMISE. If the underwriter instead of making payment of the loss sustained compromises such loss with the insured he takes nothing by subrogation.¹⁵

XI. REINSURANCE.¹⁶

A. Definition and Nature of Contract. Reinsurance is a contract whereby the insured procures from other underwriters a total or partial indemnity for loss or damage to the property which he has insured, and from one or more of the perils he has insured against.¹⁷ The contract is totally distinct from and unconnected with the original insurance.¹⁸

B. Insurable Interest and Legality. Every insurer has an insurable interest in the property he has insured,¹⁹ but such interest exists only during the period covered by the original insurance²⁰ and only as against the risks therein assumed.²¹ Contracts of reinsurance are valid, although there was formerly in England a statutory provision against them.²² They may be effected under an open policy.²³

C. Construction — 1. IN GENERAL. A contract for the reinsurance of marine risks is governed by the same rules of construction, law, and usages as apply to

Partial payment on account.—Goods insured upon a valid policy having been seized, confiscated, and sold by order of the enemy's government on their own account, but the necessary documents to verify the loss not having arrived in England, the underwriters, on application to pay their subscriptions, agreed to adjust and pay immediately £50 per cent on account, but no abandonment was made by the assured, and in the meantime the foreign consignees of the goods, in consequence of remonstrances to the enemy's government, obtained a restoration of half the proceeds of the goods which had been so seized and sold, which half amounted to more than the whole sum at which they were valued in the policy, it was held that the underwriters were not entitled to recover back the £50 per cent they had paid on account; the assured having in fact sustained a loss of half his goods, for which he was no more than indemnified by the £50 per cent he had received; and there having been no abandonment to the underwriters; and the superior value of the proceeds arising from the benefit of the market, in which the underwriters had no concern. Tunno v. Edwards, 12 East 488, 11 Rev. Rep. 458.

English Stamp Act.—Reinsurance of marine risks is marine insurance within the meaning of the English Stamp Act of 1891. Home Mar. Ins. Co. v. Smith, [1898] 2 Q. B. 351, 8 Aspin. 408, 67 L. J. Q. B. 777, 78 L. T. Rep. N. S. 734, 46 Wkly. Rep. 661; Charlesworth v. Faber, 5 Com. Cas. 408.

Partial reinsurance.—An indorsement on a policy of reinsurance provided that the reinsurance should be "to the extent of one-half the amount of each and every risk which equals or exceeds in value the sum of $15,000" on cargoes insured by the reassured under certain open policies, and "on cargoes of the value of $50,000 and upwards, this policy is to cover the excess of $25,000, not exceeding the sum of $50,000 on any one cargo." The open policies issued by the reassured provided that the assured should "enter for insurance all goods at the full value thereof." It was held that in fixing the liability of the reassurer the word "risk," as used in the indorsement, referred to the value of the property as indorsed on the open policies, rather than the value of the property as adjusted after a loss. Continental Ins. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 138 N. Y. 16, 33 N. E. 724. Plaintiffs, having risks on the ship Great Republic, her cargo and freight, made written application to defendant, as follows: "Re-insurance is wanted by the Mercantile Mutual Insurance Company for $ — on cargo, on board of the ship Great Republic, at and from New York to Liverpool, on the excess of insurance which plaintiffs may have over $50,000, not exceeding $15,000." Defendants agreed to make the insurance as applied for. It was held that the policy attached to any excess over fifty thousand dollars which plaintiffs had at risk on the cargo alone, and not on vessel, freight, and cargo, and, plaintiffs' risk on the cargo alone at no time amounting to said sum, judgment was for defendants. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. v. State Mut. F. & M. Ins. Co., 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 319.

Original risk covered by two policies.—By a policy a vessel was insured from Bombay to Calcutta, and for thirty days after she had been moored at the latter place. She had arrived there ten days before such policy was effected, and on receiving news of her arrival, her owners effected a second policy on her with the same insurers, by which she was insured at and from Calcutta to Bombay. The vessel was totally lost at Calcutta during the continuance of the risk under both policies, and the insurers having paid the owners as for a total loss upon the second policy sought to recover the full amount upon a policy of reinsurance which they had effected of the risk under the second policy, without deducting the money payable upon the first policy. The court was of opinion that the second policy was intended as a substitution for the first, and that the original insurers were liable only on the second policy, and were therefore entitled to recover the full amount on the policy of reinsurance. Union Mar. Ins. Co. v. Martin, 35 L. J. C. P. 181.

insurers²⁷ or make payment on the original policy a condition precedent to a recovery from the reinsurers.²⁸

D. Extent of Loss and Liability of Reinsurers — 1. IN GENERAL. The reinsurer is liable to the same extent as the original insurer for all losses from perils which he has assumed.²⁹

2. ABANDONMENT AND TOTAL LOSS. The law of abandonment in marine insurance does not apply to a contract of reinsurance as between the insurer and the reinsurer;³⁰ but under a reinsurance the first insurer cannot recover from the reinsurers as for a total loss for what might have been a constructive total loss had the insured duly abandoned to the original insurer.³¹

E. Subrogation. Reinsurers upon payment of a loss acquire the same rights by subrogation as are acquired in similar cases where the original insurer pays a loss.³²

F. Actions — 1. IN GENERAL. Actions upon contracts of reinsurance on marine risks are governed by the same rules that apply to actions on the original insurance.³³

2. DEFENSES. The reinsured can avail himself of any defenses which were open to the original insurer, and although the original underwriter pays a loss which he could have successfully defended, whether because of lack of interest, fraud, concealment, deviation, or breach of warranty, the reinsurer is entitled to defend an action by the original insurer upon those grounds.³⁴

3. EVIDENCE. In actions upon policies of reinsurance the same proof is required from plaintiff as is required in actions upon an original contract of marine insurance.³⁵

XII. ACTIONS.

A. Jurisdiction and Form of Action — 1. IN ADMIRALTY. As a contract of marine insurance is a maritime contract, courts of admiralty have jurisdiction of actions thereon,³⁶ and of actions to recover premiums due thereunder.³⁷ But a court of admiralty has no jurisdiction to reform a policy of marine insurance,³⁸ or to enforce specific performance of an agreement to insure.³⁹ The remedy in admiralty on a policy of marine insurance is by a libel in personam and is governed by the general rules applicable to such remedy on other causes of action.⁴⁰

2. AT LAW. Although a contract of marine insurance is within the jurisdiction of courts of admiralty, their jurisdiction is not exclusive, but the common-law courts have concurrent jurisdiction of actions thereon.⁴¹ An action at law will lie on a contract of insurance created by the acceptance of an application and issue of a binding slip or the like, although a policy was to be subsequently issued,⁴² or on a parol agreement to insure.⁴³ Assumpsit will lie if the contract is not under seal;⁴⁴ but it will not lie on a contract under seal, unless a new parol agreement and consideration are averred, or unless the common-law rule in this reinsured has in fact happened; that the reinsured has taken all necessary steps to have it fairly and carefully ascertained. That is all. He can upset the settlement between the original insurer and the underwriter only on the ground that it is dishonest or has been arrived at carelessly. An honest mistake will not afford excuse for not paying. Western Assur. Co. v. Poole, [1903] 1 K. B. 376, 9 Asp. 390, 8 Com. Cas. 108, 72 L. J. K. B. 195, 88 L. T. Rep. N. S. 362.

It will not be presumed that the reinsurance policy covers the same risks as the original policy. Pennsylvania Ins. Co. v. Telfair, 45 N. Y. App. Div. 564, 61 N. Y. Suppl. 322.

Proof of a judgment recovered against the insured company on its policy is sufficient proof of a loss in an action against the reinsurers. Ocean Ins. Co. v. Sun Mut. Ins. Co., 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,408, 15 Blatchf. 249.

Insurance against fire.—A policy of insurance on a vessel engaged in navigation, although it insures her against fire risks alone, is a maritime contract because of its subject-matter, and an action in personam to enforce payment thereof is within the jurisdiction of a court of admiralty. North German F. Ins. Co. v. Adams, 142 Fed. 439, 73 C. C. A. 555. Compare supra, I, note 1.

a suit brought upon a contract of marine insurance, where the loss accrued outside of the express limits of the policy and the libel was based upon alleged false and fraudulent negotiations leading up to the making of the policy, was not within the jurisdiction of a court of admiralty); *Andrews v. The common-law remedies when applied to a policy of marine insurance were found to be so inadequate and clumsy that disputes arising out of the contract were generally left to arbitration until the year A. D. 1601 when the statute of 43 Elizabeth was passed creating a special court or commission for the hearing and determining of causes arising on policies of insurance. *New England Mar. Ins. Co. v. respect has been changed by statute.⁴⁵ Where the contract is under seal, debt⁴⁶ or covenant⁴⁷ will lie in proper cases to recover the amount due for a loss; and debt will also lie in a proper case where the contract is not under seal.⁴⁸ If a policy has been executed and become binding, and the company refuses to deliver it after learning of a loss, trover may be maintained.⁴⁹

3. IN EQUITY. An action on a contract of marine insurance, other than in admiralty,⁵⁰ must be at law and not in equity, unless there are special grounds of equitable jurisdiction.⁵¹ A court of equity, however, has jurisdiction to enforce specific performance of an oral agreement to make a policy of insurance,⁵² and the court, having jurisdiction for this purpose, may also give a decree for the amount due after a loss.⁵³ A court of equity of course is the proper forum in which to sue for reformation of a policy of marine insurance.⁵⁴

4. ACTION TO RECOVER PREMIUMS. A court of law will take jurisdiction of an action to recover premiums paid, notwithstanding plaintiff is only an equitable assignee.⁵⁵

5. CONTRACTUAL PROVISIONS. Clauses providing for the arbitration of differences arising between the parties in regard to losses under the policy are generally held not to oust the courts of their jurisdiction,⁵⁶ and a provision in the policy restricting the maintenance of an action to a special foreign court has been held to be invalid.⁵⁷

B. Time of Bringing Suit — 1. STATUTORY LIMITATIONS. The statutory limitations as to the time within which actions on contract must be instituted are in general applicable to contracts of marine insurance.⁵⁸

2. CONTRACTUAL LIMITATIONS — a. Construction and Validity. Under the usual clauses limiting the time to institute suit, such time does not begin to run until the loss is payable under the terms of the policy.⁵⁹ These stipulations are generally considered valid and binding.⁶⁰

b. Performance of Conditions. The preliminary conditions provided for in the policy as to time of payment should be performed prior to instituting suit, but if the underwriters prevent the insured from performing those conditions, they are thereby waived, and if suit is instituted without performing them it is not prematurely commenced.⁶¹

C. Parties — 1. PLAINTIFF — a. Insured, Payee, Etc. A policy taken by the assured in his own name can be sued upon only by him or his legal representatives;⁶² but if the policy is taken by one person for account of another, or payable to another, or "for account of whom it may concern," the person effecting

59. When loss occurs.—When goods are insured for a voyage, the time of the loss occurring is not necessarily the time when the peril is encountered and the vessel driven ashore. Thus, where it is subsequently found necessary to sell the cargo at an intermediate port the loss only becomes total from that time. Browning v. Provincial Ins. Co., L. R. 5 P. C. 263, 2 Asp. 35, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 853, 21 Wkly. Rep. 587. The loss does not occur when the vessel runs on a shoal; the question of loss not depending on the vessel going aground, but on the expense of getting her off and repaired, and losses being payable, by provision of the policy, after proof of loss or damage. Harvey v. Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co., 120 Mich. 601, 79 N. W. 898.

Collision liability clause.—Where a policy insuring the owner of a tug against loss arising from any accident to any other vessel or its cargo for which insured or his tug might be liable stipulated that the insurer should not be liable unless the liability of insurance for such damage should be determined by a suit at law, or otherwise, as the insurer might elect; that all claims should be void unless prosecuted within twelve months of the loss; and that insured should defend any suits to subject him to any liability insured against, it was held that the loss from which the twelve months' limitation commenced to run did not occur until insured had paid the damage pursuant to a decree of a court of last resort adjudging him or his tug liable therefor. McWilliams v. Home Ins. Co., 40 N. Y. App. Div. 400, 57 N. Y. Suppl. 1100. Where the policy further provided that the losses should be payable sixty days after proofs of loss or damage and of the amount thereof, it was held that proofs of loss could not be made until after a judicial determination of the liability of the vessel, and the limitation commenced to run sixty days after such proofs were furnished, unless they were waived. Rogers v. Aetna Ins. Co., 95 Fed. 103, 35 C. C. A. 396 [affirmed 76 Fed. 569]. But in Provincial Ins. Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 16 U. C. Q. B. 135, under similar clauses it was held that an action brought within twelve months after payment of a loss to another vessel, but more than twelve months after the collision occurred, was too late.

"Months" means calendar months when used in such a clause. Pomares v. Provincial Ins. Co., (Hil. T. 1873) Stevens N. Brunsw. Dig. 432.

The action is deemed commenced from the time the writ is issued and placed in the hands of the proper officer for service. Harvey v. Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co., 120 Mich. 601, 79 N. W. 898; O'Leary v. Pelican Ins. Co., 29 N. Brunsw. 510.

After claim of loss.—Where a clause required action to be brought within twelve months from the date of depositing claim for loss or damage at the office of the assurers, and a protest was deposited accompanied by a demand for the insurance, but the protest was defective and some months later an amended claim was deposited, it was held that an action begun more than twelve months after the original, but less than twelve months after the amended claim, was deposited was too late. Robertson v. Pugh, 15 Can. Sup. Ct. 706.

If the insured is under disability to sue within the period the provision becomes nugatory, and does not commence to run even after the disability has been removed. Semmes v. City F. Ins. Co., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 158, 20 L. ed. 490.

If the underwriter prolongs negotiations for settlement until the expiration of the time provided in the policy within which suit must be commenced his actions constitute a waiver of such limitation. De Farconnet v. Western Ins. Co., 110 Fed. 405 [affirmed in 122 Fed. 448, 58 C. C. A. 612].

the insurance or his legal representative may sue upon the policy in his own name,⁶³ even though it is made payable to a mortgagee⁶⁴ or other third person;⁶⁵ or it may be sued upon by any of the parties for whose benefit it was effected.⁶⁶ But coöwners of the insured property are not proper parties where the insurance has not been effected for their benefit.⁶⁷ The assured cannot sue after his interest in the property ceases.⁶⁸

After sale.—A marine policy was taken on a steamship for account of whom it may concern, to be paid, in case of loss, to the steamship company. The title to the vessel was in the company, and it subsequently sold her, taking a mortgage which ran to D, who owned nearly all the stock, and agreeing to give the purchaser the benefit of the insurance until other insurance could be effected. Before other insurance was effected the vessel was lost. It was held that under the provisions that in case of loss payment should be made to the company, it could maintain a libel on the policy, not only for its own interest, but also for the interest of all others having rights under the policy. *Steamship Samana Co. v. Trustee of express trust.—A person with whom or in whose name a contract is made for the benefit of another is a trustee of an express trust, within the meaning of the provision of N. Y. Code Civ. Proc. § 449, which authorizes the trustee of an express trust to sue in his own name without joining with him the party for whose benefit the action is prosecuted. Duncan v. China Mut. Ins. Co., 129 N. Y. 237, 29 N. E. 241.

Sale after injury.—Where a vessel under a marine policy receives a fatal injury while owned by the insured, he can recover to the extent of the injury, although he sells her subsequently and before the destruction is visibly complete. Crosby v. New York Mut. Ins. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 369, 19 How. Pr. 312 [affirmed in 1 Abb. Dec. 562, 3 Keyes 394, 2 Transcr. App. 130, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. 173].

2. JOINDER OF PARTIES — a. Plaintiffs. All the parties for whose interest the policy is effected need not be joined as plaintiffs as one may sue for all,⁷¹ but it is improper for each to institute a separate action.⁷² A payee named in the policy who disclaims interest need not be joined,⁷³ nor need a part-owner of the property insured be joined in an action by the other part-owner to recover on a policy covering his separate interest.⁷⁴

b. Defendants. If there are several underwriters upon one policy it is proper to join all of them in an action.⁷⁵ Underwriters on different policies cannot properly be joined,⁷⁶ but failure to object to such joinder constitutes a waiver.⁷⁷

D. Pleadings — 1. DECLARATION, COMPLAINT, PETITION, OR LIBEL — a. The Contract. The manner of setting out the contract in an action on a marine policy does not differ from that applicable to other forms of insurance.⁷⁸

b. Insurable Interest. The true nature of the insured's interest in the subject-matter of the insurance should be correctly averred;⁷⁹ but it is not necessary to specify the extent of that interest,⁸⁰ or set forth in the declaration evidentiary facts concerning the nature of the interest.⁸¹ Where the action is brought in the name of an agent, the declaration should aver who the real parties in interest were at the time of the execution of the policy⁸² and at the time of the loss.⁸³

Pledgee of bill of lading.—Where a consignee of goods pledges the bill of lading with another person as a security for advances made by him, and upon an agreement that the consignee shall effect an insurance on the goods for the benefit of the pledgee, and deposit the policy with him, the pledgee may sue on the policy in his own name. *Sutherland v. Appropriation of policy to one part-owner.—Where an agent of several part-owners of a vessel takes out various policies in his own name for the benefit of whom it may concern, and afterward appropriates the policies to the benefit of the respective owners severally, one part-owner, to whom a policy covering an amount corresponding to his interest has been appropriated by the agent and transferred by the written consent of the insurance company, cannot maintain an action on the policy in his own name alone, against the objection of the company that other part-owners are still interested in the policy, not having assented to such appropriation, and that therefore they are necessary parties to a determination of the controversy. *Fowler v. Setting out regulations.—Where the regulations of an association of ship-owners, combined for the mutual assurance of each other's ships, were indorsed on the back, and were declared to form part of a policy, to which the ship-owners were subscribers, it was held that the declaration in an action for a loss under the policy ought to set out the regulations as well as the policy. Strong v. Rule, 3 Bing. 315, 4 L. J. C. P. O. S. 73, 11 Moore C. P. 86, 11 E. C. L. 158.

c. Warranties, Conditions, and Exceptions. There should be an averment that the express warranties contained in the policy have been complied with;⁸⁴ but this averment may be in general terms, and it is not necessary to specifically allege a compliance with each of the conditions and warranties.⁸⁵ A waiver of any condition to be available must be pleaded.⁸⁶ In regard to the implied warranty of seaworthiness, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether it is necessary to aver its performance, but the weight of authority seems to require it to be alleged.⁸⁷ A general allegation, however, is always sufficient.⁸⁸ It is not necessary for the declaration to allege facts to show that the loss did not fall within an exception contained in the policy.⁸⁹

d. Cause of Loss. The loss should be alleged to have resulted from one of the perils insured against,⁹⁰ and should properly specify that peril⁹¹ or allege facts showing a loss by a peril which is stated to have been among those covered by the policy.⁹²

e. Loss on Adventure Insured. It should also be averred that the loss or damage occurred during the continuance of the risk or upon the insured voyage,⁹³ and where the policy is limited to certain waters it should be alleged that the loss occurred within those waters.⁹⁴

f. Extent of Loss. The exact extent of the loss need not be stated.⁹⁵ Thus a declaration for a total loss will permit a recovery for a constructive total loss,⁹⁶ a partial loss,⁹⁷ or a general average loss.⁹⁸ But if the insured desires to recover for both a total loss and a general average loss both must be pleaded.⁹⁹ Where

Illustration.—Where, in an action on an insurance policy for the loss of a barge with her cargo, the petition alleged an insurance against all loss "in said voyage by reason of the adventures and perils of said rivers, and all other perils," etc., and then alleged that she sprung a leak and sunk at port, it was held that, although the loss as stated did not come within the perils of the voyage specifically insured against, it may have been caused by one of the "other perils," and the general allegation, following the special statement of loss, that the damage arose from "one of the perils insured against," was sufficient on demurrer. Gartside v. Orphans' Ben. Ins. Co., 62 Mo. 322.

the policy contains a clause relieving the underwriters for average losses under a specified percentage, it is not required of the assured to specifically aver that the loss sued for exceeded such percentage.¹ It is not necessary to aver an abandonment where the insured seeks to recover for a constructive total loss.²

2. PLEA OR ANSWER. The defendant is required to specifically set up all special matter of defense.³ Thus if the underwriter wishes to rely upon want of interest,⁴ illegality,⁵ fraud,⁶ misrepresentation,⁷ deviation,⁸ or wilful misconduct,⁹ he must specifically plead the facts constituting the same. Under a general denial plaintiff is put to proof of his whole case,¹⁰ and defendant is not permitted to rely on any special matter of defense.¹¹

3. AMENDMENT OF PLEADINGS. The rules applicable to amendment of pleadings in civil actions generally apply to actions upon contracts of marine insurance.¹²

Must allege knowledge or connivance of insured.—In an action on a marine insurance policy, a plea alleging that part of the goods insured as the cargo of the vessel were fraudulently withheld is demurrable if it does not allege that they were withheld with the owner's knowledge or connivance. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Moog, 78 Ala. 284, 56 Am. Rep. 31. Under defendant's averment that the goods to the amount mentioned therein were not lost, and that the insurer suspected and had reason to suspect that the pretended loss was altogether fraudulent, facts will be received to prove that plaintiff did not have the goods when the loss occurred, and that plaintiff was guilty of fraud. Brugnot v. Louisiana State M. & F. Ins. Co., 12 La. 326.

An allegation that plaintiff sailed the vessel "into said ice knowing full well that so to do endangered the safety of said vessel" is not an allegation that the loss of the vessel was "caused by the willful act of the insured," within the terms of Cal. Civ. Code, § 2629, which exonerates the insurer from liability for such loss, but an allegation of negligent navigation, which under said section, as well as under the general law, constitutes no defense to liability, where, as in such case, the loss arose from a peril of the sea, which was a peril insured against. *Nome Beach Lighterage, etc., Co. v. General issue.—The London Assurance and The Royal Exchange were empowered by 11 Geo. I, c. 30, § 43, in all actions of covenant, on any policy of assurance under their common seal, to plead generally that they had not broken the covenants of the policy. This right of pleading was not taken away by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, § 3, which repeals so much of any act, commonly called public, local and personal, or of any act of a local or personal nature, whereby a party is enabled to plead the general issue, and give any special matter in evidence. *Carr v. B. 492, 8 Rev. Rep. 500. Where the averment was that after the making of the policy the ship sailed and the evidence was that she sailed before, it was held that the variance was immaterial, the contract not being dependent upon the time of sailing. Peppin v. Solomons, 5 T. R. 496. A plea of payment to an action by A, upon a policy effected by A as agent, is supported by an indorsement on the policy by A, purporting that the loss had been adjusted, and the balance due from the defendant to A paid, although the principal has not authorized such a settlement. Gibson v. Winter, 5 B. & Ad. 96, 2 N. & M. 737, 27 E. C. L. 50.

A private insurance office keeper may deduct from his payment of a loss underwritten by A for B the premium due on another risk underwritten by C for B. Cleveland v. Clap, 5 Mass. 201.

Action by assignee of policy.—In an action by the assignee of a policy of marine insurance, the insurers are not entitled to set off a debt incurred with them by the assured for premiums on policies effected with them by the assured after the date of the assignment. Pellas v. Neptune Mar. Ins. Co., 5 C. P. D. 34, 4 Asp. 213, 49 L. J. C. P. 153, 42 L. T. Rep. N. S. 35, 28 Wkly. Rep. 405. But where a policy, by the terms of which "all sums due" from the insured when the loss becomes due are to be deducted before payment was assigned with the assent of the insurer, reserving his rights expressed in the policy, the insurer could deduct premium notes given subsequently, in the ordinary course of business, and without any fraudulent intent to defeat the assignment. Wiggin v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 18 Pick. (Mass.) 145, 29 Am. Dec. 576.

Premiums due to executors of assured.—There is no right either at law or in equity to deduct a loss on a policy underwritten by a testator with a broker from the amount due to the executors for premiums from the same broker, although the circumstances are such as in case of bankruptcy would support a plea of mutual credit. Beckwith v. Bullen, 8 E. & B. 683, 4 Jur. N. S. 558, 27 L. J. Q. B. 162, 6 Wkly. Rep. 286, 92 E. C. L. 683.

Bankruptcy of insured.—The benefit of a policy of insurance, previous to the bankruptcy of the insured, upon a loss after it, passes and gives a right of action to the assignees, not capable of set-off against a debt from the bankrupt. De Mattos v. Saunders, L. R. 7 C. P. 570, 1 Asp. 377, 27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 120, 20 Wkly. Rep. 801; Ex p. Blagden, 2 Rose 249, 19 Ves. 465, 34 Eng. Reprint 589.

A bill in equity will lie to compel set-off of premium against a judgment for loss under unless both policies were effected for the benefit of the same persons.¹⁵ In an action by an underwriter to recover premiums, the insured may set off a loss under other policies;¹⁶ but it has been held that such losses must first be liquidated,¹⁷ and it is held that an adjustment is not equivalent to a liquidation.¹⁸ The underwriter may deduct an amount due on a premium note from an amount of a loss sustained under the policy;¹⁹ but if the premium note is not presently due the amount thereof cannot be set off.²⁰ The salvage received by the insured is not a set-off but is a sum in his hands belonging to him which diminishes pro tanto the extent of recovery.²¹

F. Evidence — 1. PRESUMPTIONS AND BURDEN OF PROOF — a. The Contract.

Where there is a contract of marine insurance but no policy has issued, it will be presumed to be in conformity to the ordinary form of policy used.²²

b. Insurable Interest. The burden is upon plaintiff to show interest,²³ where the question of interest is distinctly put in issue,²⁴ even though the policy is valued;²⁵ also the extent and value of interest,²⁶ except that under valued policies it is only necessary to show that the insured had a substantial interest in the subject-matter.²⁷

c. Legality. There is a presumption that the voyage was legal and that all requirements of the law were complied with.²⁸

d. Concealment. The burden is on defendant to show concealment,²⁹ and that the facts concealed were material.³⁰

e. Misrepresentation. An underwriter relying on misrepresentation of a material fact has the burden of establishing all the elemental facts by the evidence.³¹

f. Deviation. Deviation must be shown by defendant;³² but the necessity of a deviation and that it did not arise through any fault of the master or the insured must be shown by plaintiff.³³

g. Fraud. Fraud is not generally presumed against the insured;³⁴ but if he overvalues the property covered by the policy it creates such a presumption, strong in proportion to its excess.³⁵

h. Warranties—(i) IN GENERAL. A compliance with express warranties must be shown by plaintiff,³⁶ but general evidence is usually considered sufficient in the first instance.³⁷

(ii) SEAWORTHINESS. It is generally held that the burden of proof is on defendant to show unseaworthiness, there being a presumption that the vessel is seaworthy;³⁸ and where this rule does not prevail only slight evidence of sea-

Vessel confined to trade between particular ports.—A policy upon the freight of a vessel, which at the time the policy was issued was in the China sea, provided that the voyage should be "confined to the trade between Atlantic ports of the United States, or the ports of London, Liverpool and Havre, and the Pacific Ocean, China Seas, etc." The vessel was lost on a voyage from Liverpool to New York, made on her return from the China sea. It was held that the burden was on plaintiffs to show either that there was a single trade between the Pacific ocean and China sea, etc., as one terminus, and both the Atlantic ports of the United States and the specified European ports indiscriminately as the other terminus, or that the language of the policy by usage was understood to include a direct voyage between the Atlantic ports of the United States and the specified European ports. *Mallory v. See 28 Cent. Dig. tit. "Insurance," § 1652.

No presumption that the foundering of a vessel at sea arose from some latent defect existing before it left port arises, where it appears affirmatively that it was seaworthy at that time, and that it encountered marine perils such as might disable a staunch ship. Walsh v. Washington Mar. Ins. Co., 32 N. Y. 427.

The presumption of unseaworthiness is a mere presumption of fact which shifts the onus probandi and prevails only where it is unrepelled by countervailing proof. No presumption of unseaworthiness arises, except from facts which exclude the rational inference of a loss attributable to the perils of the sea. Walsh v. Washington Mar. Ins. Co., 32 N. Y. 427.

A necessary jettison, shortly after sailing with a proper load, without encountering a peril insured against, is a fact tending to generate a presumption of unseaworthiness. Schultz v. Pacific Ins. Co., 14 Fla. 73.

Shifting of burden.—It was proved at the trial that the vessel put back from inability to proceed eleven days after she started on her voyage. The judge directed the jury that the time which elapsed between setting sail and putting back was sufficiently short to shift the onus of proof from the underwriters, and make it incumbent on the assured to prove that the unseaworthiness arose from causes occurring subsequently to setting sail. This was held a misdirection. Pickup v. Thames Mar. Ins. Co., 3 Q. B. D. 594, 4 Aspin. 43, 47 L. J. Q. B. 749, 39 L. T. Rep. N. S. 341, 26 Wkly. Rep. 689.

able time, it is presumed to have been lost from a peril of the sea⁴¹ or other peril insured against.⁴² There is no fixed rule in law with regard to the time after which a missing vessel will be presumed to be lost; but it depends upon the circumstances of each case.⁴³

(II) CAUSE AND TIME OF LOSS. In an action on a policy it is incumbent upon plaintiffs to show the probable cause of the loss⁴⁴ by one of the perils insured

Where adequate cause of loss shown.—

Where it was shown that a vessel insured under a marine policy was sound and seaworthy for two years prior to her loss, and that she was wrecked in a cyclone, the burden of proof is on the insurers to show that she was unseaworthy at the inception of the voyage insured. The Orient, 16 Fed. 916, 4 Woods 255. If the insured lays a rational ground for the disability of the vessel by proving severe gales during the voyage, and seaworthiness on a preceding voyage, the burden of the proof of want of seaworthiness at the inception of the voyage lies on the insurer; aliter when a disability happens from stress of weather, without any sufficient cause. Watson v. Insurance Co. of North America, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,285, 2 Wash. 480. Where an injury to cargo resulted from negligently leaving open a valve in a discharge pipe whereby water flowed into the vessel upon her being loaded to such an extent as to bring the pipe below the surface of the water, it was held that the loss being from a peril insured against the burden was on the defendant to show unseaworthiness. Davidson v. Burnand, L. R. 4 C. P. 117, 58 L. J. C. P. 73, 19 L. T. Rep. N. S. 782, 17 Wkly. Rep. 121.

The presumption is rebutted in the case of loss of a ship soon after leaving port, of which the insured cannot prove the cause, when the balance of evidence is that she was neither overloaded nor top-heavy when she left port, and that the loss was attributable rather to mistakes of management after she started than to unseaworthiness when she left port. Ajum Goolam Hossen v. Union Mar. Ins. Co., [1901] A. C. 362, 9 Aspin. 167, 70 L. J. P. C. 34, 84 L. T. Rep. N. S. 366.

Presumptions of loss have been held to arise after one year (Gordon v. Bowne, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 150); and after nine months (Houstman v. Thornton, Holt N. P. 242, 17 Rev. Rep. 632, 3 E. C. L. 102).

In judging whether a vessel has been lost in a voyage insured, the usual, and not the utmost, length of the voyage must be considered. Brown v. Neilson, 1 Cai. (N. Y.) 525.

Under time policies.—If a policy of insurance on a vessel expires while she is supposed to be on a voyage, and a second policy for a different sum is taken, after the expiration of the first, there is in this country no rule of law which requires payment of that policy under which the vessel sailed or was last heard from, in the absence of proof of the time of loss. Clifford v. Thomaston Mut. Ins. Co., 50 Me. 197, 79 Am. Dec. 606. Evidence that a vessel sailed in May, was seen the following October, and was never seen or heard of again is prima facie proof, in an action on an insurance policy expiring on December 29 following, that the ship was lost during the lifetime of the policy. Reck v. Phenix Ins. Co., 130 N. Y. 160, 29 N. E. 137.

44. Baker v. Manufacturers' Ins. Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 603; Berwind v. Greenwich Ins. Co., 53 N. Y. Super. Ct. 102 [affirmed in 114 N. Y. 231, 21 N. E. 151]; Bullard v. Roger Williams Ins. Co., 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,122, 1 Curt. 148.

It is not sufficient for the insured to prove that there were storms during the voyage, unless he can fairly trace the injury sustained to their influence. Coles v. Marine Ins. Co., 6 Fed. Cas. No. 2,988, 3 Wash. 159.

In case of a boat springing a dangerous leak without apparent cause the owners are not required, to entitle them to recover for the loss, to show the identical cause of her loss, but may show a probable cause. Western Ins. Co. v. Tobin, 32 Ohio St. 77.

Absence of evidence of how loss arose.—Although a disaster happens in fair weather, and without apparent peril to cause it, yet, if the assured shows that the vessel was in fact seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, there then arises a presumption of loss by some peril of navigation covered by the policy, and it is for the insurer to show that it was otherwise caused. Moores v. Louisville Underwriters, 14 Fed. 226. See also Potter v. Suffolk Ins. Co., 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,339, 2 Sumn. 197. Where, in an action on a policy insuring a barge, it appears that it was seaworthy at the commencement of the voyage, but that it sank from an unknown cause, it is to be presumed that the loss was occasioned by an unavoidable peril of the sea. Paddock-Hawley Iron Co. v. Providence-Washington Ins. Co., 118 Mo. App. 85, 93 S. W. 358. A ship began suddenly to leak, and sank at her anchors in port during fine weather. Evidence was given tending to show that the ship was seaworthy, viz., that she had not long before been put in good repair; that surveys had been made of her just previously, and that she had behaved well on previous voyages, and on her voyage to the port where she was lost. No evidence was given of any actual facts showing the cause of her loss, although possible explanations of it, by way of conjecture, were suggested by the witnesses. It was held that there was evidence of a loss by the perils insured against,⁴⁵ and that it occurred upon the insured voyage.⁴⁶ The mere fact that after arrival cargo is found damaged by sea-water,⁴⁷ or a vessel has defects in her hull, does not create a presumption that such damage was caused by a sea peril.⁴⁸ Where there is a loss by a peril insured against, it raises a prima facie case of liability, and it devolves upon the underwriters to show that the loss arose from or was caused by an excepted peril.⁴⁹

(III) EXTENT OF LOSS—(A) In General. The burden is upon plaintiff to show the extent of the loss;⁵⁰ and where it appears that the property has sus-against. Anderson v. Morice, 1 App. Cas. 713, 3 Aspin. 290, 46 L. J. Q. B. 11, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 506, 25 Wkly. Rep. 14.

Discharge of vessel.—A vessel was insured at and from Salem to her port or ports of discharge in the river La Plata. All her cargo except a few bundles of shingles was discharged at Montevideo, where she took on board merchandise intended for another vessel of the owner, then lying at Buenos Ayres, and proceeded to that port, where she was lost. It was held that the burden of proof was on the underwriters to show that the cargo was substantially discharged at Montevideo, so as to preclude recovery. Upton v. Salem Com. Ins. Co., 8 Metc. (Mass.) 605.

Vessel not heard from.—Where a loss by the perils of the sea is to be inferred from the ship not being heard of after her sailing, the assured must prove that when she left the port of outfit she was bound upon the voyage insured. Cohen v. Hinckley, 2 Campb. 51, 1 Taunt. 249, 11 Rev. Rep. 660; Koster v. Innes, R. & M. 333, 27 Rev. Rep. 755, 21 E. C. L. 761.

Arrival in damaged condition.—Where one who has insured a cargo under a marine policy proves the sound and valuable condition of the property at the time of shipment and its subsequent bad condition, a presumption is raised that it was injured by the peril it had passed through, and it devolves upon the insurers to rebut the presumption by showing that the property was not injured by any of the perils or causes insured against. *Young v. Barratry.—If an act of barratry be once proved, the onus of establishing any fact that goes to excuse it lies on the insurer. Millaudon v. New Orleans Ins. Co., 11 Mart. (La.) 602, 13 Am. Dec. 358; Barry v. Louisiana Ins. Co., 11 Mart. (La.) 202; Steinbach v. Ogden, 3 Cal. (N. Y.) 1.

Negligent navigation.—Where, in defense to an action on a marine policy, negligence of the master of the vessel is averred, the burden of proof is on the underwriter. Schultz v. Pacific Ins. Co., 14 Fla. 73; Union Ins. Co. v. Smith, 124 U. S. 405, 8 S. Ct. 534, 31 L. ed. 497; Tidmarsh v. Washington F. & M. Ins. Co., 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,024, 4 Mason 439.

Presumption that master performed duty.—A master may be presumed, in ordering the sale of his ship, to have done his duty properly, if there are no proofs to the contrary. Robinson v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,949, 3 Sumn. 220.

Nominal damages.—Where the proof shows some damage but is not sufficiently definite to show the amount the jury can allow nominal damages. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 2 Md. 217.

Successive losses.—Under a policy of insurance upon a ship which provides that the indorsers shall not be liable for a partial loss unless it shall amount to five per cent, the burden of proving a partial loss amounting to five per cent from one gale or storm is upon the assured. Hagar v. New England Mut. Mar. Ins. Co., 59 Me. 460; Paddock v. Commercial Ins. Co., 104 Mass. 521.

To show actual total loss of memorandum articles, part of which are taken to the destination and sold, plaintiff must show that the expenses incurred in saving exceeded the amount realized. Almon v. British America Assur. Co., 16 Nova Scotia 43.

On a policy on profits it need not be shown that profits would have been realized had tained damage from perils insured against and from perils not insured against, it is incumbent upon the insured to distinguish the losses occasioned by the several perils.⁵¹

(B) Constructive Total Loss and Abandonment. The burden is on plaintiff claiming a constructive total loss to show the facts justifying an abandonment,⁵² that an abandonment was made,⁵³ and the time notice was given.⁵⁴

To show beneficiary.—Where a shipmaster procured insurance on his interest in a vessel "on account of whom it may concern," loss

c. Authority to Execute Policy. The authority to sign policies is not sufficiently shown by proof that the person was accustomed to sign them,⁶³ but it may be shown by proof that defendant was in the habit of paying losses on policies so subscribed.⁶⁴

d. Interest and Ownership. Interest in the subject-matter need not be proved by direct testimony as to ownership;⁶⁵ but may be proved by acts of ownership, or of control over property.⁶⁶ A bill of lading⁶⁷ with the insured's name as shipper or consignee is prima facie evidence of an insurable interest, but it is not conclusive.⁶⁸ A register or an enrolment is admissible to show interest of the insured,⁶⁹ but it seems that an invoice is not sufficient.⁷⁰ The underwriter may show that the insured had no interest even under a valued policy.⁷¹

e. Misrepresentation and Concealment. Representations may be proved by parol where the object is to falsify them.⁷² The materiality of facts concealed or misrepresented may be testified to by insurance brokers.⁷³ And it is competent payable to himself, and on loss of the vessel and death of the master, a creditor brought an action on the policy, claiming it was for his benefit, it was held that evidence of declarations of the deceased that if the creditor would make him a loan he would secure him by a policy on the vessel, and of subsequent declarations that the loan had been made and the policy secured for the creditor's benefit, was inadmissible, without proof that the deceased was acting as the creditor's agent in effecting the insurance. *Sleeper v. Letter of owner to insured creditor.—In an action upon a policy in the name of a creditor of the owner, a letter from an owner, directing plaintiff to obtain insurance on the vessel in his own name, and stating the interest of plaintiff in the vessel insured, is admissible in evidence for plaintiff to prove his insurable interest. *Vairin v. Parol title to vessel.—If a policy of insurance is underwritten on a ship, the assured cannot set up a parol title to the whole of the ship, when the ship's papers on the voyage prove a joint ownership in himself and the master. to show that the rate of premium would have been the same had the facts not been misrepresented for the purpose of showing that the misrepresentations were immaterial to the risk.⁷⁴

f. Fraud. Where the defense is fraud defendant may show any fact from which an inference of fraud may arise.⁷⁵

g. Seaworthiness. It is not admissible for one to testify that a vessel is or is not seaworthy. He can only testify as to facts regarding her condition.⁷⁶ But an experienced shipwright or other qualified expert in such matters may give his opinion as to the vessel's seaworthiness from the facts in evidence or from facts within his own knowledge.⁷⁷ The condition of the vessel subsequent to the loss is competent.⁷⁸ The age of the ship is of weight to show unseaworthiness,⁷⁹ and admissions of the insurer are competent evidence to show seaworthiness.⁸⁰ Evidence as to the general reputation of the officers and crew as to their competency and skilfulness is admissible to show such facts.⁸¹

h. Value, Kind, Quality, Etc. Where the master is alive the bill of lading is not admissible against the underwriters as to the kind or quality of the cargo,⁸² nor as to the amount of freight due thereon,⁸³ but the bill of lading and invoice are admissible to prove value.⁸⁴

Water entering through open port-hole.—A finding that a vessel which was sunk by water getting in through an open port-hole was seaworthy when she left port is supported by evidence that all the port-holes were fastened before she sailed, and that no leak was noticed for more than twelve hours after she had sailed. *Starbuck v. i. Loss—(i) FACT OF LOSS. Proof of the fact of loss may be and generally is given by the parol testimony of the master, officers, and crew,⁸⁵ but it may be proved by other legal evidence.⁸⁶ Neither the master's protest⁸⁷ nor a survey⁸⁸ is essential to show loss or damage. Nor is a sentence of condemnation essential to show a loss by capture or seizure.⁸⁹ But where it is sought to show a loss by capture or seizure followed by condemnation, the court proceedings cannot be proved by parol, but the judgment or decree of the court must be produced.⁹⁰

(ii) CAUSE OF LOSS. A recovery may be had, although the cause of the accident is not specifically ascertained by the evidence.⁹¹ But if it is left in doubt whether the loss was occasioned by a peril insured against or by one not insured against there can be no recovery.⁹² Where, after the arrival of goods insured at a port of destination, a portion of the packages were destroyed by fire, evidence that the remainder of the packages appeared to have suffered sea damage does not show damage from such cause as to the property destroyed by fire.⁹³ It is incompetent to give in evidence specific cases of other vessels that have been lost while navigating the same waters occasioned by some unknown injury causing them to suddenly sink;⁹⁴ but evidence of damage to other merchandise of the same kind and similarly packed, shipped in other vessels, is admissible to prove that it arose in the making or packing of the merchandise.⁹⁵

(iii) EXTENT OF LOSS. The amount of damage to cargo may be shown by appraisers,⁹⁶ or by the value of sound goods and the amount realized by a sale at auction of the damaged goods,⁹⁷ but it cannot be shown by an amount realized at an irregular sale.⁹⁸ To show the extent of damage to a vessel the cost of repairs made necessary by the perils insured against is competent evidence;⁹⁹ but evi-

86. Adjustment prima facie evidence of loss.—Hogg v. Gouldney, Beaw. Lex Mer. 310, 1 Park Ins. 266; Shepherd v. Chewter, 1 Campb. 274, 10 Rev. Rep. 681.

Reception of the insured goods by the consignee from the carrier, and payment of the freight and charges without complaint of damage, is not evidence, in a suit on the policy, that the damage did not occur in the course of the navigation. Underwriters' Agency v. Sutherland, 55 Ga. 266.

Not essential to call crew.—Where it was proved that the insured vessel sailed on the voyage insured with the goods on board, and never arrived at her port of destination; and that, a few days after her departure, a report was heard at the place whence she sailed that the ship had foundered at sea but that the crew were saved, it was held that this was sufficient prima facie evidence of a loss by perils of the sea; and that the assured was not bound to call any of the crew or to show that he was unable to procure their attendance. Koster v. Reed, 6 B. & C. 19, 9 D. & R. 2, 30 Rev. Rep. 239, 13 E. C. L. 21.

Where vessel is missing.—In an action on a policy from an English to a foreign port, to found a presumption that a ship was lost on the voyage, it is enough to prove that she was not heard of in England after she sailed, without calling witnesses from her port of destination, to show that she never arrived there. dence of what it would cost to put a ship in repair at the end of the voyage, without reference to the causes which made such repairs needful, is incompetent.¹ The value of the wreck or the opinion of the master as to the impracticability of saving the vessel is admissible to show ground for abandonment.² That a vessel was recovered and repaired a year after the loss is not the best evidence that it was practicable to recover and repair it at the time of the loss.³

j. Proof of Loss. Secondary evidence of proofs of loss may be admitted on defendant's failure to produce the proofs on notice.⁴

k. Documentary Evidence—(i) SHIP'S LOG. A ship's log-book is admissible in evidence.⁵

(ii) SHIP'S REGISTER. The ship's register is prima facie proof of nationality⁶ and evidence of ownership and interest.⁷

(iii) SURVEY. A regular marine survey made in accordance with the usages of maritime states is generally considered admissible⁸ and prima facie evidence,⁹ but not conclusive,¹⁰ of the facts which they recite. But a survey which is called ex parte by the owners or is otherwise irregular is not admissible against the underwriters.¹¹

Total loss.—Testimony of the captain that the vessel stranded and filled, that she lost her spars and boats, that her hawser parted, and that in five minutes she was a complete wreck, is not sufficient to establish a total loss, where it appears that she was afterward rescued and repaired, and for years thereafter was a sound and seaworthy vessel. Log-book of man-of-war conveying.—To prove the time of sailing of a ship under convoy, the log-book of the man-of-war which convoyed the fleet is evidence. D'Israeli v. Jowett, 1 Esp. 427.

6. English statute.—The Merchant Shipping Act (1854), § 107, makes the register prima facie proof of disputed nationality, but such inference may be overborne by circumstantial evidence to the contrary. The Princess Charlotte, Brown & L. 75.

7. Watson v. Summers, 4 N. Brunsw. 62. But in an action to recover back a premium of insurance on the ground that plaintiff had no interest in the vessel at the time the insurance was made, the register, which was in the names of other persons, is not even prima facie evidence to show that the plaintiff was not the owner of the vessel. Proof of loss of survey.—In an action upon a policy of marine insurance, proof of the loss of the warrant of survey under which the vessel was sold in a foreign country must be made under a commission; and a certificate of the registrar of the vice-admiralty court in such country, which states that the warrant was lost, is not sufficient. Robinson v. Clifford, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,948, 2 Wash. 1.

Best evidence.—In an action upon a policy of marine insurance, the warrant of survey, and report made thereon, under which the vessel is sold, are the best evidence as to the condition of the vessel at the time; and testimony of the master is not admissible except to prove the facts contained in the report. Robinson v. Clifford, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,948, 2 Wash. 1.

10. Mitchell v. New England Mar. Ins. Co., 6 Pick. (Mass.) 117.

Where several surveys of the same vessel are introduced at the trial as evidence of the cause of loss, they are to be examined and considered together, and duly weighed in ascertaining the result, inclining to give the most weight to the survey which was last in date. Unverified report of survey inadmissible.—Murray v. Great Western Ins. Co., 39 Hun (N. Y.) 581.

A survey, constituting part of the preliminary proofs of loss of an insured vessel made in a port of necessity by ship-masters appointed by the United States consul with the assent of the master of the vessel, will be deemed a regular survey. Innes v. Alliance Mut. Ins. Co., 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 310.

(iv) PROTEST. The protest of the master is competent evidence on behalf of the underwriters,¹² but it is generally held incompetent as evidence for the insured.¹³ In Pennsylvania the protest, if made at the first port where it is practicable and within twenty-four hours after the vessel is moored, is held to be competent evidence for the owner.¹⁴

(v) LLOYD'S LISTS, ETC. Lloyd's lists and books are admissible in evidence against the underwriters as to, and are prima facie evidence of, the facts which they purport to state.¹⁵

(vi) FOREIGN SENTENCE OR DECREE. A foreign sentence of condemnation is generally held to be conclusive of the facts they determine.¹⁶ In some juris-

A survey ordered by an American consul, where the vessel insured put into a foreign port for want of repairs, and a report of the surveyors thereon, is not evidence to be laid before the jury in an action on the insurance policy, where there is no proof that there were no tribunals at the port from which an order for a survey could be obtained. *Cort v. Where forming part of proofs of loss.—A certified copy of the protest of the vessel's master and crew, which has been served on the insurer, and is referred to by the insured in their proofs of loss, is admissible in evidence against the insured, since it is thus made part of the proofs. *Richelieu, etc., Nav. Inland craft.—The protest of the captain and crew of an inland craft is not admissible in evidence. Gordon v. Little, 8 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 533, 11 Am. Dec. 632.

The protest is admissible as a part of the preliminary proof of the loss of a vessel insured, although not made within twenty-four hours after reaching a port of safety, but is not admissible as evidence for the jury. American Ins. Co. v. Francia, 9 Pa. St. 390.

Judgment in rem in salvage action against ship.—A judgment in rem of the admiralty division in a salvage action is conclusive against all the world as to the status of the res, but is not conclusive as to the grounds of the decision except as between the parties to the action. A judgment in rem by a court of competent jurisdiction is conclusive against all the world as to the status of the res, but there is no distinction between a judgment in rem and a judgment in personam as to its being only conclusive as to the point adjudicated upon, except that in the case of a judgment in rem the point adjudicated upon, which is always as to the status of the res, is conclusive against all the world as to that status, whereas in the case of a judgment in personam the point adjudicated upon, not being as to the status of the res, is only conclusive as between parties or privies. *Ballantyne v. Effect of rule.—Where upwards of forty actions were brought against underwriters of the policies of insurance, one of which had been assigned by memorandum of transfer signed by some of them, before the bankruptcy of the assured, the court made an order for consolidation, the general principle laid down being that all actions should be stayed except such as might be really necessary to determine the liability of distinct defendants in each class of cases, the defendants to be bound by the result, but not the plaintiffs. *Syers v. I. Trial — 1. COURSE AND CONDUCT — a. In General. The course and conduct of a trial in an action on a marine insurance policy are governed by the same rules as apply to civil actions generally,³⁹ although the mode of trial is frequently by consent of the parties to try the question of liability separately, reserving the evidence and all questions of law and fact in relation to the particular mode of adjustment to be arranged afterward; and for this purpose to render the verdict effectual it is usually agreed that the verdict be taken for a given sum to be enlarged or reduced by assessors or a referee subject to the order of the court, or assenting that a verdict be taken for a total or partial loss to be amended and entered afterward conformably to the report of the assessor or as otherwise agreed.⁴⁰

b. Reception of Evidence. The reception of evidence in an action on a marine insurance policy is governed by the same rules as apply to civil actions generally.⁴¹

c. Reference. The rules applicable to references in civil actions in general usually apply to references in actions on policies of marine insurance.⁴² And Papers not within control of plaintiff.—An action having been brought on a policy of marine insurance by the mortgagees of 32-64ths of the ship, and it appearing that plaintiffs had no ship's papers, but that the ship had been sailed by the mortgagor, who was the managing owner, and who had since died, defendants applied for an order that not only plaintiffs, but the mortgagor or his representatives, and also all persons interested in the proceedings and in the insurance on the ship, should produce upon oath the ship's papers, and that in the meantime all the proceedings should be stayed. It was held that defendants were entitled to the order, which must remain in force until at all events plaintiffs had satisfied the court that they had applied to the mortgagor and done all in their power to produce the ship's papers. 39. See, generally, ADMIRALTY; TRIAL. See also INSURANCE.

On motion for reargument in a libel on a marine insurance policy, new objections to an average adjustment will not be entertained.

Such an adjustment, when made up under the supervision and approval of the insurer's agent, and received and not objected to by them, is prima facie evidence of the correctness of the items it contains. Earnmoor Steamship Co. v. Union Ins. Co., 44 Fed. 374.

When accounts complicated.—In an action on a policy for an average loss, if the account is so complicated that it cannot be adjusted in court, the jury, by consent of the parties, may find for a total loss, plaintiff entering into a rule to account upon oath for what part of the insured property he may recover. Barber v. French, 1 Dougl. (3d ed.) 294.

41. See, generally, ADMIRALTY; TRIAL.

Purpose of question not shown.—In an action on a policy on a "port risk in the port of New York," the exclusion of evidence defining "port risk," in the absence of any explanation of the purpose of the question, is not error. Slocovich v. Orient Mut. Ins. Co., 108 N. Y. 56, 14 N. E. 802.

Other cases of loss.—In an action by the owners of a steamboat against an insurance company on a policy against perils in the navigation of specified privileged waters for the loss of the vessel occasioned by encountering an unknown cause of peril from which she suddenly sprang a leak and sank while navigating a privileged water, it is not competent, in chief, to give in evidence for any purpose specific cases of other steamboats that have been lost while navigating the same and other rivers, occasioned by some unknown injury, causing them to suddenly leak and sink. Western Ins. Co. v. Tobin, 32 Ohio St. 77.

42. See, generally, REFERENCES.

Under the practice in New York where an action on a marine policy involves many expenditures and losses, a reference may be ordered. Ryan v. Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co., 50 How. Pr. 321 [affirmed in 66 N. Y. 628].

where any part of the proceedings are referred, the findings made by the referee, commissioner, or assessor will not be set aside unless clearly erroneous.⁴³

2. QUESTIONS FOR COURT AND JURY — a. In General. In tribunals having a jury all questions of fact arising in an action upon a marine policy are to be submitted to it for determination,⁴⁴ and their verdict will not be set aside when there is evidence sufficient to sustain it.⁴⁵

b. Matters Pertaining to Contract in General. Whether the risk had been accepted,⁴⁶ or a policy duly stamped had been issued,⁴⁷ or was entered into under mutual mistake as to a material fact,⁴⁸ or whether a contemporaneous agreement was intended to form part of the policy,⁴⁹ and what interest was intended to be covered by the policy,⁵⁰ are questions for the jury. The existence of customs,⁵¹ and whether they are reasonable,⁵² are also questions for the jury.

c. Facts Relating to Validity. Facts relating to the validity of the policy and the adventure are for the jury;⁵³ but where the facts are undisputed the validity of the contract is a question of law for the court.⁵⁴

d. Insured Voyage. The voyage intended to be covered,⁵⁵ and whether the property insured was upon the insured voyage,⁵⁶ whether the voyage had commenced or terminated,⁵⁷ or had been broken up,⁵⁸ are matters which should be submitted to the jury. But whether a voyage was justifiably broken up is a question of law for the court.⁵⁹

Hearing and application to court for directions.—In an action on a marine policy, where the adjustment of the loss is referred by stipulation to a referee, he is to be satisfied as to the character of charges for saving the shipwrecked property in such manner as he may think reasonable, and, in case of difficulty and uncertainty, the proper course is for him to apply to the court for directions. *Bridge v. e. Misrepresentation and Concealment. It is also for the jury to determine whether there has been a misrepresentation or a concealment,⁶⁰ whether the matters alleged to have been misrepresented or concealed were material to the risk,⁶¹ and whether due diligence was exercised by the insured in ascertaining material facts, or, after having ascertained such facts, in communicating them to the underwriter or countermanding prior instructions to procure insurance.⁶²

f. Warranties and Conditions. Whether the insured has complied with all warranties and conditions is for the jury.⁶³ All the facts bearing on the question of seaworthiness should be submitted to the jury,⁶⁴ who are also the judges whether the insured has used reasonable diligence to maintain the vessel in a seaworthy condition,⁶⁵ and whether the presumption of seaworthiness has been overcome.⁶⁶

No evidence of suitability of river craft for ocean voyage.—In an action on a marine policy insuring a river steamer for an ocean voyage, where the evidence merely shows that the vessel is staunch for smooth-water navigation, thereby showing a breach of the implied warranty of seaworthiness, there is no question for the jury, and a judgment for plaintiff must be reversed. *Thebaud v. Delay.—Whether a delay in commencing or prosecuting the voyage is under the rules of law such as to constitute a deviation from the insured risk is a question of fact for the jury. *Thebaud v. such facts exist which justify a deviation,⁶⁸ should be submitted to the jury. But where the testimony is not conflicting deviation becomes a question of law for the court.⁶⁹

h. Loss — (i) TIME AND PLACE OF OCCURRENCE. The jury must determine whether a loss has in fact occurred and the time⁷⁰ and place⁷¹ of its occurrence, where such facts are material to the issues.

(ii) CAUSE OF LOSS. The cause of the loss⁷² and whether causes of loss were distinct⁷³ are questions for the jury.

(iii) EXTENT OF LOSS. The extent or amount of a loss under a marine policy,⁷⁴ and whether the same was of such a character as under the rules of law constituted a constructive total loss,⁷⁵ are for the jury, who as a rule are also to determine whether there has been an abandonment,⁷⁶ whether the abandonment was made within a reasonable time,⁷⁷ and whether it has been accepted.⁷⁸

But the circumstances of the case may be such that a jury may be told, as a matter of law, that if they think the underwriters have

In like manner whether an abandonment has been waived⁷⁹ or revoked⁸⁰ is generally a question for the jury.

1. Proof of Loss. Whether proofs of loss have been submitted or waived are questions for the jury.⁸¹

3. INSTRUCTIONS. The general rules governing instructions in civil actions, and particularly in actions on other kinds of insurance policies, apply in actions on policies of marine insurance.⁸² It is the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to the meaning of the contract⁸³ and to properly submit every defense which is within the issues and of which there is evidence.⁸⁴ It is proper to refuse, and erroneous to give, instructions which are not supported by the pleadings and the evidence.⁸⁵

4. VERDICT AND FINDINGS. The rules governing general and special verdicts in actions on marine insurance policies are the same as those that apply to civil actions generally.⁸⁶

J. Judgment—1. IN GENERAL. The rules as to the judgment in an action on a marine policy are the same as those which apply in civil actions generally,⁸⁷ and particularly in other actions on insurance policies.⁸⁸ The judgment must conform to the verdict and findings.⁸⁹ The extent of liability done certain acts which are consistent only with their having accepted the abandonment, then they ought to find that the abandonment has been accepted. Shepherd v. Henderson, 7 App. Cas. 49, 9 Ct. of Sess. Cas. 1.

83. Norton v. Lexington F., etc., Ins. Co., 16 Ill. 235, holding that where a policy declared that the insured should not have the right to abandon until it should be ascertained that the recovery and repair of the vessel were impracticable, it was the duty of the court to instruct the jury as to the true meaning of the contract.

84. Defenses generally see Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Moog, 81 Ala. 335, 1 So. 108.

Seaworthiness.—Where a policy on a barge provided that it should at all times during the continuance of the policy be in a seaworthy condition, and tight and sound, in an action on the policy, it appearing that the barge remained tight and sound and that it did not leak until it sprang a leak and sank, an instruction was not erroneous for failure to require the jury to find that the barge remained seaworthy until it sank. Paddock-Hawley Iron Co. v. Providence-Washington Ins. Co., 118 Mo. App. 85, 93 S. W. 358.

Deviation.—If delay in port be insisted upon as amounting to a deviation, the question should be put to the jury whether such delay was in the exercise of good faith and sound discretion and by necessity or for reasonable cause. Foster v. Jackson Mar. Ins. Co., 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 290.

Cause of loss see Western Massachusetts Ins. Co. v. Norwich, etc., Transp. Co., 12 Wall. (U. S.) 201, 20 L. ed. 380.

struction.—In an action on a policy of insurance on a cargo of merchandise burned with the vessel on which it was being transported, an instruction that the defenses set up might be reduced to two: (1) Unseaworthiness of the vessel; and (2) that she was burned by the procurement of plaintiffs, or that they were accessory to such burning, was held erroneous where the defense was also made that plaintiffs' cargo was fictitious; but it was further held that the error was rendered harmless by the fact that the court later in the charge stated that defendants claimed to have proven that the vessel was loaded with a fictitious cargo and that, if the jury were satisfied that plaintiffs could have been guilty of such frauds, they could not recover. Phoenix Ins. Co. v. Moog, 81 Ala. 335, 1 So. 108.

85. See, generally, TRIAL. Where, in an action on a policy covering a cargo of coffee, the evidence was too vague and indefinite as to the damage done to a portion of it to furnish grounds for any estimate of the amount, it was held error for the court to instruct the jury that they ought to allow such an amount of damage as, from the evidence, they might find to have been equivalent to the plaintiff's loss. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 2 Md. 217.

86. See, generally, TRIAL. See also British-American Assur. Co. v. Wilson, 132 Ind. 278, 31 N. E. 938; Graves v. Washington Mar. Ins. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.) 391.

The jury may be required to find items of damage which make up the necessary fifty per cent to constitute a constructive total loss. Orrok v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 456, 32 Am. Dec. 271.

87. See, generally, JUDGMENTS.

88. See FIRE INSURANCE, 19 Cyc. 969.

89. See FIRE INSURANCE, 19 Cyc. 969; JUDGMENTS, 23 Cyc. 820.

Consistency of findings.—Where an insurance company set up in defense a local custom and also that the loss was less than five and amount of recovery under a policy are elsewhere considered.⁹⁰ If defendant establishes as a defense that the risk never attached, plaintiff is entitled to a judgment for the premium paid, if the pleadings are such as to warrant such recovery.⁹¹

2. INTEREST. The insured is entitled to interest upon the amount of the loss from the time the same became payable under the provisions of the policy and a demand for payment was made,⁹² and also for interest on amounts advanced by the insured, for which the underwriter is liable, from the time such advances were made.⁹³ In case of a missing ship interest is generally allowed for twelve months after the vessel was last heard of,⁹⁴ but in some cases it is held that no interest whatever is recoverable.⁹⁵

K. New Trial and Appeal or Error. New trials of actions on marine insurance policies and appeals or writs of error are governed by the same rules that apply in civil actions generally.⁹⁶ As a rule questions not raised in the trial court will not be ground for reversal on appeal;⁹⁷ nor will a judgment be reversed for an error which is harmless.⁹⁸

per cent on the amount insured, a loss less than that being exempted in the policy, and the jury found against the company as to the custom, but for them as to the amount of the loss, it was held that they were entitled to judgment, as the defenses were not inconsistent and the finding against the custom did not preclude recovery of judgment on the other finding. Newlin v. Insurance Co. of North America, 20 Pa. St. 312.

90. See supra, IX.

Recovery of general average.—Where the assured claims the whole amount insured or his proportion of the average loss, he may prove and recover a general average. Hanse v. New Orleans M. & F. Ins. Co., 10 La. 1, 29 Am. Dec. 456.

Partial loss.—Recovery may be had for a partial loss, although the declaration claims for a total loss and there is no proof of an abandonment. Watson v. Insurance Co. of North America, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 283, 1 L. ed. 835.

Nominal damages.—Where the evidence shows that the subject-matter of the insurance received some damage, but is not sufficiently definite to show the amount, nominal damages may be recovered. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 2 Md. 217.

92. New Orleans Ins. Assoc. v. Piaggio, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 378, 21 L. ed. 358.

Where there is a liability only for a partial loss and the insured claimed for a total loss, interest may be allowed only from the commencement of the action. Donath v. Insurance Co. of North America, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 463, 1 L. ed. 910.

In an action for return of premium interest was allowed on the premium only from the date of service of the writ. Porter v. Bussey, 1 Mass. 436.

In England.—Before 3 & 4 Wm. IV, c. 42, § 29, an underwriter on a policy was not liable to pay interest on the amount of his subscription, although he had no colorable ground for refusing to pay the loss, unless a distinct demand of the money had been made at an earlier period for that purpose. *Kingston v. This law is only so far operative as law in any country as it is adopted by the laws and usages in that country. In this respect it is like international law, or the laws of war, which have the effect of law in no country further than they are accepted and received as such. Rodd v. Heartt, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, 572, 22 L. ed. 654.

The term includes jurisdiction of all things done upon or relating to the sea, or, in other words, all transactions and proceedings relating to commerce and navigation, and to remedies and injuries upon the sea (Jervey v. The Carolina, 66 Fed. 1013, 1015) and is entirely distinct from the law of the land. It is and always has been a distinct and separate jurisprudence. The Unadilla, 73 Fed. 350, 351. It has no application to flatboats on the Ohio river, their pilots and navigators. Leddo v. Hughes, 15 Ill. 41, 45, Scates, J., delivering the opinion of the court.

I. DEFINITION.

A maritime lien is defined by Lord Tenterden to mean a privileged claim upon a thing in respect of service done to it or injury caused by it, to be carried into effect by legal process.¹ Judge Curtis adopts Pothier's definition of a hypothecation as an accurate description of a maritime lien: "The right which a creditor has in a thing of another, which right consists in the power to cause that thing to be sold, in order to have the debt paid out of the price."²

II. NATURE IN GENERAL.

A. A Right of Property, Not a Mere Remedy. There are some cases which hold that a maritime lien is a mere right of arrest, that is, a mere remedy unaccompanied by any vested interest in the res itself.³ But the later and conclusive

1. Abbott Shipp. (12th ed.) 106, 595; Harmer v. Bell, 7 Moore P. C. 267, 284, 13 Eng. Reprint 884. This definition assumes that the "thing" to which it alludes is a vessel or something connected therewith, and that the "legal process" is the process of an admiralty court.

2. The Young Mechanic, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,180, 2 Curt. 404, 410. This definition is accurate if the words "creditor" and "debt" are understood to apply to causes of action ex delicto as well as those ex contractu. See also Gagnon v. Tremblay, 15 Quebec Super. Ct. 403; The Hercyna, 1 Stuart Vice-Adm. (L. C.) 274.

3. The St. Lawrence, 1 Black (U. S.) 522, 17 L. ed. 180; The Globe, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,483, 2 Blatchf. 427; The Triumph, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,182, 2 Blatchf. 433. In The St. Lawrence, supra, Taney, C. J., treats the right to a maritime lien on a domestic vessel as a mere question of procedure, which the supreme court can give or take away by rule, as it sees fit. Under the English and Ameri-authority is that a maritime lien is something more than a mere right of arrest. It is a jus in re, that is, a proprietary interest in the property affected, adhering to it wherever it may go and enforceable against it by seizure and sale under the process of an admiralty court.⁴

B. Independent of Possession. The striking difference between the common-law and maritime lien is, that the latter does not depend upon possession, but follows the res wherever or into whosoever hands it may go.⁵ Not being dependent on possession, it is enforceable anywhere, following the vessel around the world with lengthening chain and recognized in any jurisdiction where the powers of an admiralty court may be invoked.⁶ There is, however, one class of maritime liens dependent on possession, namely, the lien of a vessel on her cargo for freight or demurrage.⁷ And care must be taken to distinguish the maritime lien from the ordinary common-law lien of a shipwright or other artisan for work done, which is dependent on possession.⁸

C. A Claim Primarily Against the Res as Itself a Contracting or Offending Thing — 1. THE AMERICAN RULE. Under the American rule as finally established the vessel is itself looked on as a responsible being; and a maritime lien attaches directly, independent of questions of ownership or agency, the liability of the ship as such being the main thing, and the question of ownership being incidental. Hence such a lien attaches to the vessel, even in cases where the owners are not personally responsible, and even for the acts of persons not can decisions, as will be seen later on, there is no lien under the maritime law for necessities furnished a domestic vessel, and possibly as to such vessels it may be considered a question of procedure, but the decision is unsound as to any but domestic vessels.

It is so far a right of property that a repeal of the act under which it arose does not affect liens previously vested. The Gazelle v. Lake, 1 Oreg. 119.

5. This is well expressed in a leading English case on the subject: "The word is used in Maritime Law not in the strict legal sense in which we understand it in Courts of Common Law, in which case there could be no lien where there was no possession, actual or constructive; but to express, as if by analogy, the nature of claims which neither presuppose nor originate in possession. This was well understood in the Civil Law, by which there might be a pledge with possession, and a hypothecation without possession, and by which in either case the right travelled with the thing into whosoever possession it came. . . . This claim or privilege travels with the thing, into whosoever possession it may come. It is inchoate from the moment the claim or privilege attaches, and when carried into effect by legal process, by a proceeding in rem, relates back to the period when it first attached." The Bold Buccleugh, 7 Moore P. C. 267, 284, 13 Eng. Reprint 884. This decision has often been cited with approval in the American courts. It is sometimes referred to as Harmer v. Bell. The Jno. G. Stevens, 170 U. S. 113, 18 S. 7. This is due to the fact that property of that character when once delivered would be very difficult to trace; and hence this is rather a qualification of the rule than an exception to it, as the reasons which gave origin to the maritime lien on a vessel would not apply. Sears v. Wills, 1 Black (U. S.) 108, 17 L. ed. 35; Two Hundred and Sixteen Loads and Six Hundred and Seventy-eight Barrels of Fertilizer, 88 Fed. 984, 5 Hughes 310; *Pioneer Fuel Co. v. bearing the relation of agent to the owners.⁹ But this fiction of the liability of the vessel as herself a contracting or offending thing, while independent of questions of agency as between owner and crew, is not carried so far, even under the American rule, as to make her liable for every injury in which she is a mere passive instrument. In order for such liability to attach, the parties operating her must be lawfully in charge or must occupy a relation of agency to the vessel herself, if not to her owners.¹⁰

2. THE ENGLISH RULE. Under the English decisions the liability of the vessel and the responsibility of the owner are convertible terms, the procedure in rem is considered a mere means of getting at the owner through the vessel; and hence no maritime lien attaches to the vessel except for the acts of those bearing the relation of agent to the owner.¹¹

3. EFFECT OF THESE DIVERGENT RULES ON THE REMEDY IN REM IN THE TWO JURISDICTIONS. Whatever may be the case in the continental admiralty, it seems pretty evident historically that the remedy in rem in England and America originated as a mere process of attachment incidental to a personal suit against the owner, and was not even limited at the outset to the specific ship, although it gradually assumed that form.¹² In America, however, it has resulted from the doctrine of the primary liability of the ship that, in a proceeding in rem to enforce a maritime lien praying only process against the ship and a general citation of all interested, the owner when he appears does so, not as defendant, but as claimant; and that such appearance is limited to the object of defending an interest in the res and cannot be made the basis of a personal decree for any deficit over the value of the res.¹³ In England on the other hand the doctrine that the procedure in rem is but an indirect means of reaching the owner has resulted in the corollary that, when the owner appears and gives bail, he submits generally to the jurisdiction, the action changes from one in rem to one in personam, and a personal decree may be rendered against the owner for any deficit.¹⁴

Ct. 544, 42 L. ed. 969; The China v. Walsh, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 53, 19 L. ed. 67. In The Barnstable, supra, the vessel was held liable in rem for a collision while being operated by charterers, in which case the owners could not have been held personally.

This is strikingly illustrated by The China v. Walsh, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 53, 19 L. ed. 67, in which the vessel was held liable in rem for a collision caused by a state pilot, who was in charge under a state statute requiring the vessel to take him, and who therefore was not in any sense the agent of the owners. In fact they would not have been liable even in a personal suit. Homer Ramsdell Transp. Co. v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, 182 U. S. 406, 21 S. Ct. 831, 45 L. ed. 1155.

D. Stricti Juris. Although maritime liens tend to build up commerce as furnishing a basis of credit, they are secret liens on movable property, following it into the hands of innocent holders. Hence the law inclines against them, and any one asserting such a lien must satisfy the court of his right to it.¹⁵

III. CLASSES OF MARITIME LIENS.

A. In General. Maritime liens arise either from contract¹⁶ or tort.¹⁷

B. Contract Liens — 1. DEFINED. A maritime contract is one relating to a ship as an instrument of commerce or navigation when tending to facilitate its use as such, or in connection with its use as such.¹⁸ A maritime lien, however, does not arise out of every maritime contract. Many such contracts give only a personal right of action against the vessel owner or master, without giving the proprietary interest in the res which constitutes the maritime lien. In order for the lien to arise, the service must in some way be brought into relation with the ship itself and tend to facilitate her use as an instrument of commerce. For example, a contract of marine insurance, although maritime, gives no maritime lien; for it merely benefits the owner and does not benefit the vessel itself.¹⁹

2. EXAMPLES — a. Salvage.²⁰ Salvage is a reward allowed for a service rendered to marine property at risk or in distress by those under no legal obligation to render it, which results in benefit to the property if eventually saved.²¹

b. Seamen's Wages. Seamen's wages constitute a maritime lien of high rank, adhering to the last nail or plank of a ship.²²

c. Stevedores' Services.²³ The maritime character of a stevedore's service was long denied, on the ground that it only remotely contributed to the success

The mere fact that a contract has a ship in view in some incidental connection does not make it maritime. It must contemplate the furtherance of the use of a ship in a maritime enterprise or in preparation for such enterprise in order to be maritime. For instance a mortgage on a ship is not a maritime contract. Bogart v. The John Jay, 17 How. (U. S.) 399, 15 L. ed. 95.

20. Salvage generally see SALVAGE.

21. Hughes Adm. 127. Salvage is classed here among the claims arising out of contract because in modern times it almost invariably does so arise. Strictly speaking, however, it does not depend on contract but is awarded on grounds of public policy, as a means of encouraging the saving of property. For instance bringing in a derelict could not possibly be considered a service based on contract. Mason v. The Blaireau, 2 Cranch (U. S.) 240, 2 L. ed. 266; Brevoor v. The Fair American, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,847, 1 Pet. Adm. 87; Cheeseman v. Two Ferry Boats, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,633, 2 Bond 363.

Seamen generally see SEAMEN.

23. A stevedore is a workman or contractor who loads or discharges a ship and properly stows her cargo (Hughes Adm. 113); one whose occupation is to load and unload vessels in port (Rankin v. Merchants, etc., Transp. Co., 73 Ga. 229, 54 Am. Rep. 874).

of the voyage.²⁴ But in view of its growing importance and the greater skill required in the loading of modern vessels, the later, better, and preponderant authority establishes the existence of a maritime lien in such cases.²⁵

d. Towage.²⁶ The party rendering towage service has a maritime lien against the ship aided thereby.²⁷

e. Contracts Relating to Use of Vessel. The most familiar instances of contracts relating to use of a vessel are contracts of affreightment and charter-parties. A maritime lien exists in favor of the vessel against the cargo for freight and demurrage.²⁸ Conversely the shipper has a remedy in rem against the ship for any breach of the contract.²⁹ But there is no remedy in rem, or maritime lien, unless there is some act of part performance bringing the cargo and ship into relations; so that a breach of a charter-party by the ship before it has commenced loading or a contract never connected with the ship itself gives no maritime lien.³⁰

f. Materialmen's Contracts — (1) IN GENERAL. Under the generic term "materialmen" are included those who repair or equip ships, or furnish them with tackle and necessary provisions.³¹ "Materialmen's contracts" relate to supplies, repairs, advances, and necessities of that general nature which are fit and proper for the use of a ship.³²

Stevedores are a class of laborers at the ports, whose business it is to load and unload vessels. The Senator, 21 Fed. 191.

The stevedore is not an independent contractor doing the work which, when completed, is to be turned over to the master for his approval or disapproval; but he must load the steamer at all times under the direction of, and so subject to, the control of the master. The Elton, 83 Fed. 519, 31 C. An examination of the more recent authorities cited supra, note 20, will show that they do not deny the maritime character of a stevedore's service, but rather base their ruling on the fact that there was no state statute giving a lien. As state statutes only affect domestic vessels, the stevedore's lien on foreign vessels ought therefore to be clear. The doctrine that a state statute is necessary for the existence of a lien will be seen later (see infra, VI, B, 2; VII, B, 3) to apply only to claims for repairs, supplies, and necessities of that general character, not to general admiralty claimants, like seamen or salvors. Stevedores ought on principle to be classed with the latter, not the former, and hence ought to be equally independent of state statutes.

Only when employed by the ship, not when employed by the charterer, has a stevedore a lien against the ship; as the latter is loading the ship for his own benefit and there would be no privity of contract in such case between the stevedore and ship. The Chicklade, 120 Fed. 1003.

(ii) THE AMERICAN RULE. By the American law materialmen have a maritime lien on the ship under the circumstances to be hereafter considered;³³ and this without any express contract therefor, as for example through the medium of a bottomry bond.³⁴

(iii) THE ENGLISH RULE. The English rule is entirely different from the American rule. As a result of the warfare waged by the English common-law courts upon the admiralty courts, contracts of materialmen were hardly ranked as marine by nature, and gave no rise to a maritime lien. The only method of raising funds for the necessities of a ship under English law was by an express contract of bottomry.³⁵

C. Liens For Torts — 1. IN GENERAL. All causes of action in tort consummate on navigable waters are within the admiralty jurisdiction.³⁶ And for torts arising in the use of a vessel, a maritime lien attaches in favor of the injured party against the vessel as an offending thing.³⁷

2. EXAMPLES — a. Collision.³⁸ Collision is a frequent instance of marine tort. The injured party has a maritime lien for damages so caused.³⁹

b. Personal Injuries. When personal injuries are caused by the negligence of the vessel in cases for which a legal liability attaches, a maritime lien exists in favor of the injured party.⁴⁰

IV. PROPERTY SUBJECT TO MARITIME LIENS.

A. In General. In order for a maritime lien to attach, the property against which it is asserted must be property marine by nature; that is, it must be a ship, her cargo, or such flotsam or jetsam as constituted part of the cargo or contents of a ship.⁴¹

Effect of statutes.—Sts. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65, § 6; 24 Vict. c. 10, §§ 4, 5; and 31 & 32 Vict. c. 71, § 3, have restored the jurisdiction of the admiralty courts over this class of contracts. But as construed by the courts they do not give a maritime lien, existing from the date of the service and following the property into other hands. They give a mere right of arrest or procedure in rem, which takes effect only from the time of arrest, and is subject to any interest or rights vesting between the rendition of the service and the arrest. B. Ship or Vessel — Structures Included Under — 1. As AFFECTED BY FORM OR SHAPE — a. In General. A vessel is defined in the federal statutes as "every description of water-craft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water."⁴² This definition, however, is prescribed simply as an aid in the construction of federal statutes, and does not limit the meaning of the term in admiralty law. And it will be seen that many craft are included if capable of navigation, although not used or capable of being used as an instrument of transportation. Wrecks are still vessels, although helpless.⁴³ Nor does the size of the vessel affect the jurisdiction.⁴⁴

c. Flatboats, Lighters, and Scows. These are about the same thing as open barges, and are within the jurisdiction. Pile drivers or derricks placed upon them do not affect the principle.⁴⁶

C. P. 234, 22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 408, 18 Wkly. Rep. 892, jurisdiction was denied in the case of a collision between two dumb barges. But the case turned on the language of the English Admiralty Act of 1861, which defined "ship" as "any description of vessel used in navigation not propelled by oars." These barges were so propelled. In Nease's Appeal, 3 Grant (Pa.) 110, the Pennsylvania act relating to maritime liens was construed as inapplicable to barges. In Leddo v. Hughes, 15 Ill. 41, flatboats were held excluded from the class of vessels against which maritime liens could be asserted. In Jones v. Coal Barges, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,458, 3 Wall. Jr. 53, open flatboats or barges used to transport coal down a river and then broken up were held beyond admiralty jurisdiction, apparently on account of their temporary character, and small value. In Wood v. Two Barges, 46 Fed. 204, open coal barges were held not to be ships. But in view of the decisions first above quoted, and also those to be quoted in relation to craft similar to barges, the preponderance of authority is decisive in favor of the jurisdiction.

But there are two old decisions in New York and Wisconsin holding the contrary un-

d. Canal-Boats. These clearly come within the jurisdiction.⁴⁷

e. Dredges. There are many cases holding dredges to be a kind of a ship or vessel. They are capable of navigation and are merely large, flat-bottom boats carrying the heavy machinery used in cleaning out navigable channels.⁴⁸ But the better authority is that a dredge and her attendant scows are each separate vessels, and that a maritime claimant cannot assert a lien against them all as a unit.⁴⁹

f. Floating Elevators. When not permanently moored, but capable of navigation from place to place, although used only in one harbor, these structures are ships or vessels.⁵⁰

g. Ferry-Boats. These are within the jurisdiction, no matter how small, nor whether used entirely within a state, if used on navigable waters.⁵¹

h. Light-Boats. These are within the jurisdiction, although used merely as floating lights.⁵²

i. Rafts. There is great conflict whether a raft is such a craft as to be subject to a maritime lien.⁵³ The early cases holding them liable to such a lien on the der statutes authorizing proceedings against vessels. The Farmers' Delight v. Lawrence, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 564; A Dark Colored Newly Decked Scow Boat v. Lynn, 1 Pinn. (Wis.) 239.

D. 126, 4 Aspin. 555, 51 L. J. Adm. 81, 46 L. T. Rep. N. S. 907. In Fredericks v. Reese, 135 Fed. 730, 68 C. C. A. 368, turning on the language of the act, dredges were held not to be included in the Pennsylvania Lien Law of 1858. In In re Hydraulic Steam Dredge No. 1, 80 Fed. 545, 25 C. C. A. 628, it was decided that a dredge which worked on the suction principle and deposited the mud on shore by lines of pipe not for the purpose of improving navigation, but in order to build a railroad embankment, was not subject to a maritime lien for supplies furnished.

But the test is navigability of the vessel from place to place, and the purpose of the work done is immaterial. If the vessel was a floating structure not permanently moored to the shore it is within the jurisdiction, regardless of the motive of its work. See cases cited supra, this note.

The Illinois and Michigan courts, however, have held such structures not to be vessels within the meaning of their lien and attachment laws. Knisely v. Parker, 34 Ill. 481; Bartlett v. Steam Dredge No. 14, 107 Mich. 74, 64 N. W. 951, 61 Am. St. Rep. 314.

In the cases sustaining a single libel, the point was either not raised or obscured by other more vital questions. The Starbuck, 61 Fed. 502; The Alabama, 19 Fed. 544 [affirmed in 22 Fed. 449].

Notwithstanding an old decision on the New York statute then in force in relation to arrest of vessels (Birbeck v. Hoboken House Ferry-Boats, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 54) the later authority includes ferry-boats as vessels (Phoenix Iron Co. v. The Hopatcong, 127 N. Y. 206, 27 N. E. 841). In two old cases ferry-boats plying across rivers, although between different states, were held to be without the jurisdiction, apparently on the ground that the business in which they were engaged was too trifling to be considered trade or commerce. Harris v. Nugent, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,126, 3 Cranch C. C. 649; Thackery v. The Farmer of Salem, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,852, Gilp. 524.

But the real test is navigability.—The supreme court has uniformly held that the admiralty jurisdiction is independent of the commerce clause of the constitution. The Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. (U. S.) 443, 13 L. ed. 1058; Ex p. Garnett, 141 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 840, 35 L. ed. 631.

ground that any property on navigable waters is so liable, whether it is a ship or connected with a ship or not, must be considered as overruled, so far as their reasoning goes by the case of *Cope v. Vallette Dry Dock Co.*⁵⁴ This case, however, mentions rafts, but forbears any expression of opinion on the subject. Since its decision, a number of cases in the lower courts has held them to be in a sense a kind of ship or vessel and as such liable to a maritime lien.⁵⁵

2. AS AFFECTED BY PERMANENCY OF ATTACHMENT TO SHORE—a. In General. A structure, although floating, is not a ship or vessel if permanently fixed to the shore; for in such case it lacks the attribute of navigability.⁵⁶

b. Dry-Docks. Hence a floating dry-dock so attached is not a ship or vessel.⁵⁷

c. Bridges. These are clearly without the jurisdiction.⁵⁸

d. Dismantled Vessels. If still capable of locomotion from place to place, and retaining its unity as a single structure, the craft remains a vessel, although no longer used in commerce.⁵⁹

S. 663, Lord Herschell intimates that jurisdiction over a raft might be sustained if in tow, on the ground that it was a subject of transportation like the cargo of a ship; in other words not on the ground that it was itself a ship but rather that it was the object of a ship's efforts.

The case of Woodruff v. One Covered Scow, 30 Fed. 269, decided that a floating boat-house permanently fastened to a wharf as a float to serve as a landing from small boats was within the jurisdiction. It cannot be satisfactorily reconciled with Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 119 U. S. 625, 7 S. Ct. 336, 30 L. ed. 501. This case was probably unknown to the district judge, as it had been decided only a month prior to the delivery of his opinion.

The City of Pittsburgh*, 45 Fed. 699 (a dismantled steamer used as an excursion barge); The Old Natchez, 9 Fed. 476 (a dismantled steamer being made ready for use as a wharf-boat).

In The Hendrick Hudson, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,355, 3 Ben. 419, a dismantled steamer had been used as a hotel, although resting on the bottom of the river. It was partly pumped out and while being towed to another place grounded and became immovable. Parties who partly pumped it out and then moved it to a place where it was again allowed to rest on the bottom for further use as a hotel libeled it for the service. The court decided that it was not engaged in commerce and navigation, and therefore was not a marine structure. The case can only be sustained on the theory that this short movement was not navigation. The fact that it was not engaged in commerce is immaterial, navigability being the test. See supra, notes 48, 51.

In order to be included, however, the structure must either have been so far completed as to have assumed the form of a ship, or must have retained its character as such. Hence a hull is not a ship. Northrup v. The Pilot, 6 Oreg. 297. And the broken-up portions of a ship lose their distinctive character. Srodes v. The Collier, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,272.

In England the leading case of The Gas Float Whitton No. 2, [1896] P. 42, 8 Asp. 110, 65 L. J. Adm. 17, 73 L. T. Rep. N. S. 698, 44 Wkly. Rep. 263 [affirmed in [1897] A. C. 337, 66 L. J. Adm. 99, 76 L. T. Rep. N. S. 663], held that a floating buoy was not such a structure as could be considered a ship or subject to a maritime lien. But the English court had also decided that Cleopatra's Needle while being towed to England in a box constructed for the purpose was such a ship or vessel as could be the subject of a claim for salvage. The Cleopatra, 3 P. D. 145, 47 L. J. Adm. 72.

V. RIGHT TO LIEN AS AFFECTED BY VARIOUS RELATIONS TO VESSEL.

A. Part-Owner — 1. FOR ADVANCES AS SUCH. A part-owner has no maritime lien against his other part-owners for payments on account of the vessel beyond his proportionate share, as such are mere matters of account.⁶⁰

2. FOR CAUSES OF ACTION NOT ARISING FROM RELATION OF PART-OWNER. Under the admiralty doctrine which views the ship as itself an offending or contracting thing,⁶¹ there is no reason why a part-owner should not be allowed a maritime lien for claims not arising out of his relation of part-owner, provided he is subordinated in rank to those claims on which he would be personally responsible. But the authorities are in conflict.⁶² But the fact that the claimant's name appears as owner in a bill of sale of the vessel does not defeat his lien. He can show that it was intended as collateral security for a debt, and that he is not the actual owner.⁶³

B. Ship's Husband. This is but another name for the general agent of a ship, although if the general agent is a part-owner, he is also called the managing owner.⁶⁴ He cannot claim a maritime lien for advances, as it is a mere matter of accounts.⁶⁵ But where he is mortgagee and acts as ship's husband merely for the

62. In Pettit v. The Chas. Hemje, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,047a, 5 Hughes 359, Judge Hughes sustained a libel by a part-owner for repairs done at his machine shop, holding it subordinate to any other maritime claims against the ship but good against a mortgage on the interest of the other part-owner. In Langstaff v. Rock, 13 Mo. 579, it was also ruled that a part-owner could claim a lien. See also Learned v. Brown, 94 Fed. 876, 36 C. C. A. 524. In The West Friesland, Swab. 454, 455, Dr. Lushington held that a part-owner who furnished coals to his vessel could proceed against her, saying: "At Common Law partner cannot sue partner, but that is a rule that does not obtain in this Court; and here the property is sued and not the copartner." In The Feronia, L. R. 2 A. & E. 65, 37 L. J. Adm. 60, 17 L. T. Rep. N. S. 619, 16 Wkly. Rep. 585, Sir Robert Phillimore decided that the right of a master to libel for wages under the act of 24 Victoria was not affected by the fact that he was part-owner. This ruling was followed by Sir William Young in The Aura, Young Adm. (Nova Scotia) 54. The West Friesland case, supra, was subsequently reversed on the facts. Van Hasselt v. Sack, 2 L. T. Rep. N. S. 613, 13 Moore P. C. 185, 8 Wkly. Rep. 423, 15 Eng. Reprint 70. In Foster v. The Pilot No. 2, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,980, Newb. Adm. 215, a libel by seamen who were part-owners was sustained against a vessel in the hands of a purchaser who had acquired her at a sheriff's sale held to satisfy debts for which they as part-owners were liable. The decision was reversed by Justice Grier in Gallatin v. The Pilot, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,199, 2 Wall. Jr. 592, on the ground that they could not claim against the purchaser under such circumstances. In The H. C. Grady, 87 Fed. 232, it was held that a party acting as purser, who was interested in a proposed purchase of the steamer and employed by the proposed purchasers, could not set up a claim for wages against the claim of the vendors for unpaid purchase-money. In The Benton, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,334, Judge Brown ruled that a part-owner could not libel his own boat, discussing the question on the assumption that it was an attempt to settle accounts between part-owners, as to which the lack of jurisdiction is clear. But why should not a part-owner assert a lien against the ship for a cause of action entirely disconnected with his relation as part-owner (as for supplies furnished by him as a merchant, or for damages caused by collision), provided only he does not conflict with creditors not part-owners? Such cause of action would not necessarily involve any settlement of accounts. See also The Queen of St. Johns, 31 Fed. 24; The Jennie B. Gilkey, 20 Fed. 161; *Petrie v. purpose of better securing himself, he may be allowed a maritime lien for such advances as pay off claims that if asserted would constitute maritime liens upon the vessel.⁶⁶ But it is often a question of fact whether advances by a ship's agent for the purpose of paying off maritime claims were made on the credit of the vessel. If agents make such advances on her credit and it was mutually so understood, they would have a maritime lien.⁶⁷

C. Ship Broker. Parties engaged in securing freights or crews for a ship or business of any sort are not entitled to a maritime lien, as such services are only remotely or indirectly connected with navigation or commerce and savor too much of land services.⁶⁸

D. Shipmaster. Independent of statute the master cannot claim a maritime lien, either for his wages or disbursements, the reason being his confidential relation to the ship.⁶⁹ Whether a state statute can give such a lien on domestic vessels is not settled, but the weight of judicial expressions is not of absolute decision is that it may.⁷⁰

E. Ship's Consignee or Agent. There is no reason why a consignee should not have a lien for agency services or advances, and the cases so hold.⁷¹

F. Charterer. When the charter-party gives the charterer the right to make advances or furnish supplies on the order of the master and the credit of the vessel, a maritime lien will arise therefor.⁷²

VI. CHARACTER OF CLAIMS GIVING RISE TO LIEN.

A. In General. It follows from the definition given at the outset⁷³ that any service rendered to the vessel of a nature to facilitate its use as an instrument of navigation, or any injury caused by the vessel on navigable waters, impresses upon it a maritime lien.⁷⁴ As common instances, liens for seamen's wages, salvage, towage, bottomry, collision, and personal injuries might be mentioned.⁷⁵ So too labor performed in getting a vessel afloat after she has grounded.⁷⁶

B. Liens of Materialmen — 1. MATERIALMAN DEFINED. A materialman is one whose trade it is to repair or equip ships or furnish them with tackle and necessary provisions.⁷⁷

2. CLASSES OF SUCH LIENS — a. In General. As the rules governing the liens of materialmen are very different from those relating to other maritime liens, special caution is necessary to distinguish exactly what character of maritime service is included in this class. There are many things constituting a maritime service to a ship and giving rise to a maritime lien upon her which do not come under this category. In fact, as liens of materialmen will appear in the succeeding discussion to be subject to rigid rules as to whom credit was given, and also in many respects to the vagaries of local state legislation, it would be unfortunate to include anything not necessarily falling within its terms.⁷⁸

Persons digging ice and snow from around a vessel on the beach preparatory to launching her do not acquire a maritime lien, as such work is on shore and merely preliminary to the real maritime service. The Arthur B., 1 Alaska 353, 403; Woolly v. The Peruvian, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,031, 3 Ware 154.

A contract to float a vessel which had been carried far up on the beach by a storm gives a maritime lien, and is really a salvage service. Frame v. The Ella, 48 Fed. 569, 5 Hughes 125.

Services of quarantine commissioners in caring for sick seamen, as required by a state quarantine law, are maritime in their nature. Platt v. The Georgia, 34 Fed. 79.

Services as watchman or caretaker to a vessel laid up or out of commission are not maritime, but services to a vessel in commission and merely temporarily in port are maritime and give rise to a maritime lien. Williams v. The Sirius, 65 Fed. 226; The Seguranca, 58 Fed. 908; Jepson v. The America, 56 Fed. 1021; The Erinagh, 7 Fed. 231; The E. A. Barnard, 2 Fed. 712; The Champion, 5 Fed. Cas. Compressing cotton, although increasing the capacity of the ship, is so far a land duty as to give no maritime lien. The Paola R., 32 Fed. 174; The Joseph Cunard, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,535, Olcott 120; United Hydraulic Cotton-Press Co. v. The Alexander McNeil, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,404.

Cost of advertising a steamer's excursions gives no lien. Turner v. The Havana, 54 Fed. 201. Compare The Monarch v. Potter, 7 Ohio St. 457, holding stationery, bills of fare, bill-heads, notices to consignees, etc., for a steamboat line to be supplies, but not advertisements in the newspapers.

The price of a boat hired to take temporarily the place of a disabled boat is not so far connected with the disabled boat as to constitute a service to her, or give rise to a maritime lien. New York Harbor Tugboat Co. v. The Wyoming, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,205.

On similar reasoning, a master of a ship who hired a tug (operating the tug himself) to handle his ship under an agreement to return the tug in as good condition as when received, and who injured the tug while using her, was held to have created no maritime lien on his ship, whatever may have been the rights of the tug-owner in personam. The Ville de St. Nazaire, 124 Fed. 1008, 126 Fed. 448.

State statutes.—Many such services when maritime by nature may become a lien by virtue of a state statute. The Energia, 124 Fed. 842; Eley v. The Shrewsbury, 69 Fed. 1017 (construing the Ohio statute); The Kentucky v. Brooks, 1 Greene (Iowa) 398 (liable under the statute for the hire of a barge); Gleim v. The Belmont, 11 Mo. 112.

In California the earlier act was held not to give a lien to a domestic creditor on a domestic vessel for materials and supplies. Price v. Frankel, 1 Wash. Terr. 33. The present California statute would not bear this construction.

In Louisiana, Code Pr. (1857) § 285, and Code Pr. (1870) § 289, "provisions" are not considered to be included in the term "materials." Request v. The B. E. Clarke, 12 La. Ann. 300.

Under the Maine statute in force in 1839, materials include only those articles which become part of the vessel, and no lien is given for charges on account of tools used by the workmen. But merchants and other persons furnishing supplies are materialmen as much as mechanics or laborers. The Kearsarge, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,634, 1 Ware 546 [reversed on other grounds in 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,762, 2 Curt. 421].

In Ohio the act of 1840 gives no lien for painting. Scott v. The Plymouth, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,544, 6 McLean 463, Newb. Adm. 56; Jones v. The Commerce, 14 Ohio 408, holding that the lien arises from the seizure, not from the act itself. The present Ohio statute (Rev. St. § 5880) would not be so construed.

⁷⁸ Admiralty Rule No. 12 of the supreme

b. Supplies. These relate rather to those articles furnished a vessel to fit her for a maritime venture, the articles when furnished being complete in themselves, as distinguished from articles furnished in connection with repair work; in which latter case they would rather be considered a part of the repairs. But they must be of a nature suited to the vessel and as a means of preparing her for her maritime enterprise. If for a completed ship and of a nature to enable her to pursue her business upon the seas, they come within the term.⁷⁹ For instance, coal or fuel furnished a steamer for the use of her furnaces is clearly a supply;⁸⁰ but coal,⁸¹ salt,⁸² whisky,⁸³ or merchandise⁸⁴ shipped on a vessel as cargo is not a supply. So articles for the restaurant of a passenger steamer, and liquors for its bar, where the bar was being operated on account of the steamer, are supplies.⁸⁵ court speaks of their claims as "suits by material-men for supplies, or repairs or other necessities." This classification is a convenient one to follow, although it is difficult to draw any clear distinction between the three classes of supplies, repairs, and necessities, as a given article may often be classed by different judges or text-writers in either category.

No. 11,237, 13 Blatchf. 505 [affirming 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,235, 7 Ben. 443]. Judge Hanford, however, does not consider liquors for the bar as leniently as the judges in the above cases, although the cases do not seem to have been brought to his attention. Perhaps the fact that the vessel in the case passed upon by him was being operated for the benefit of the charterer may have influenced his decision, although he does not say so. The Robert Dollar, 115 Fed. 218. But although liquors for the bar when operated on the vessel's account are supplies or necessities, the rent of the bar to one not officially connected with the ship does not create any maritime relation between him and the ship. The Jo-

Illustrations.—Meat furnished a vessel for the use of the crew is ordinarily a supply; but if furnished after the discharge of the crew it is not suitable or necessary and hence would not be allowed. The Augustine Kobbe, 37 Fed. 696, 39 Fed. 559. Provisions or ship-chandlers' articles are supplies. The Ellen Holgate, 30 Fed. 125; The Ludgate Hill, 21 Fed. 431; Greenlaw v. Potter, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 390. But boarding a mere watchman or custodian of a disabled vessel left by a tug is not sufficiently maritime in its nature nor so connected with the tug as to constitute a supply. The Daniel Kaine, 31 Fed. 746. Clothing, tobacco, and other articles of personal use furnished seamen would not under ordinary circumstances be a supply. The Mary F. Chisholm, 129 Fed. 814; Rosenthal v. The Die Gartenlaube, 5 Fed. 827. Nets for a fishing vessel (The Hiram R. Dixon, 33 Fed. 297), water-casks, or casks to a whaling vessel to hold the oil (The Henry Trowbridge, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,379, 10 Ben. 415; Zane v. The President, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,201, 4 Wash. 453), anchors and chains (The Sea Lark, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,579, 1 Sprague 571), arms to protect a vessel from pirates (Weaver v. The S. G. Owens, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,310, 1 Wall. Jr. 359), chronometers (The Georgia, 32 Fed. 637), life-preservers (The Charles Spear, 143 Fed. 185; The Beile of the Coast, 72 Fed. 1019, 19 C. C. A. 345), furniture for the cabin of a passenger steamer (Pitman v. The Paraguay, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,187), or printed bill-heads and other blanks necessary for the business of the boat (The Monarch v. Potter, 7 Ohio St. 457 [affirming 2 Disn. 28]), would be supplies.

The Maryland statute giving a lien on a domestic vessel for "material furnished or work done in the building, repairing, or equipping" of a vessel is construed to cover only articles which go into and form a part of the vessel, and hence not to cover provisions for the crew. Milbourne v. The Daniel Augusta, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,540, 3 Hughes 464.

Under the Ohio statute giving a lien for the price of provisions "supplied for the use of the crew and passengers, to be consumed in the use and navigation of the boat," sup-

c. Repairs — (i) CHARACTER IN GENERAL. Any work to a vessel after she has become a marine entity, and materials furnished in connection therewith, if such work and materials are reasonably necessary in facilitating her use as a maritime instrument, come under the head of repairs, and give a maritime lien under the circumstances and conditions to be hereafter discussed.⁸⁶

(ii) CHARACTER AS AFFECTED BY PLACE WHERE WORK DONE. It has been seen in discussing the admiralty jurisdiction that it extends to all navigable waters, natural or artificial, although within the body of a county,⁸⁷ and hence the fact that the vessel is engaged only in internal commerce does not affect the maritime character of the repairs.⁸⁸ So the fact that the work is done on land, if it tends to fit the vessel for sea, ought not to affect its maritime character; for locality as a test of jurisdiction is important only in matters of tort.⁸⁹ Hence there ought not to be the slightest doubt that work or repairs upon a vessel while in dry-dock or hauled up on a marine railway are maritime and give rise to a maritime lien.⁹⁰

(iii) CHARACTER AS AFFECTED BY DEGREE OF COMPLETION OF VESSEL — (A) No Maritime Lien For Original Construction. Nothing better illustrates the effect of the warfare waged by the common-law courts upon the admiralty courts in England than the fact that contracts for the building of ships were excluded from the list of maritime causes of action. Under the civil law and the maritime law of continental Europe there was no distinction between construction and repairing. In fact there was no such distinction in England itself for a long time, and the compromise agreement of 1632 made between the common-law and admiralty judges as a means of settling their contentions placed construction and plies to one leasing the lunch counter and bar aboard are not included, as they were not furnished on account of the vessel. Eley v. The Shrewsbury, 69 Fed. 1017.

86. The B. F. Woolsey, 7 Fed. 108; Stevens v. The Sandwich, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,409, 1 Pet. Adm. 233; Low v. The Ship Clarence S. Bement, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 430.

But a contract for raising a sunken vessel does not fall within the term "building, repairing, fitting, furnishing or equipping," although some work is incidentally done on the vessel herself to keep her afloat after being raised. The D. S. Newcomb, 12 Fed. 735.

89. In contract matters the character of the service is alone important, and the ancient attempt of the English common-law courts to manacle the admiralty jurisdiction by prohibiting it from taking cognizance of contracts made on land, while it had its influence upon the earlier American decisions, has been repudiated. Hughes Adm. 17, 18; New England Mar. Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 1, 20 L. ed. 90.

90. There would not have been any serious doubt of this prior to the recent case of The Robert W. Parsons, 191 U. S. 17, 24 S. Ct. 8, 33, 48 L. ed. 73. In that opinion Mr. Justice Brown, while stating that work done in a dry-dock after it is pumped out is maritime, states passim that "had the vessel been hauled up by ways upon the land and there repaired a different question might have been presented, as to which we express no opinion." This certainly seems a distinction without a difference. What is a dry-dock when pumped out, if it is not land? The fact that locality has nothing to do with the maritime character of contract claims was set at rest by New England Ins. Co. v. Dunham, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 1, 20 L. ed. 90. Yet that case is not mentioned either in the majority or dissenting opinion in The Robert W. Parsons case. The dissenting opinion cites Boon v. The Hornet, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,640, Crabbe 426. That case was decided in 1841. It held that repairs to a canal-boat were not maritime, not because they were made on shore, but because the boat was not destined for service on tide-water, a test thoroughly exploded, as navigability is now the sole test. Ex p. Garnett, 141 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 840, 35 L. ed. 631; The Genesee Chief, 12 How. (U. S.) 443, 13 L. ed. 1058. The opinion also cited Bradley v. Bolles, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,773, Abb. Adm. 569. This case decided that work done in a dry-dock in scraping and cleaning the bottom of a vessel preparatory to her being coppered was non-maritime, not because it was done on land, but because it added nothing to the ship and was a mere preliminary to the real service, a narrow distinction rendered at a time (1849) when the tendency was to restrict the admiralty jurisdiction. Four years later the same judge (Betts) decided in Ransom v. Mayo, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,571a, that services of a shipwright in hauling a vessel on his ways and repairing her while out of the water were non-maritime, basing his opinion on the fact that the work was contracted for and done on land. On appeal this decision was affirmed by the circuit court. Ransom v. Mayo, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,571, 3 Blatchf. 70.

repairs upon the same footing.⁹¹ But the final result of this contest was to exclude construction contracts from the cognizance of the English admiralty courts because made on land and to be performed on land. The act of 24 Victoria⁹² has restored the jurisdiction of the admiralty courts over such claims if at the time of instituting such a suit the ship or its proceeds are already under judicial arrest. In the United States the decisions of the lower courts on the subject were for a long time favorable to the maritime character of the contract.⁹³ But in 1857 the question came squarely before the supreme court, at a time when the death of Judge Story had deprived the admiralty of its strongest advocate, and the court decided against the maritime character of such contracts, holding that they are non-maritime because made on land and to be performed on land (which is certainly not the fact as to the entire contract).⁹⁴ And the decision has since been followed or approved in many cases, and must be considered as settled.⁹⁵

But in Wortman v. Griffith, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,057, 3 Blatchf. 528, 529 (decided in 1856), Mr. Justice Nelson in the same circuit decided that a precisely similar service was maritime. He noticed the argument that the work was done on land but repudiated it, saying: "The nature and character of the contract and of the service have always appeared to me to be sounder guides for determining the question." See also The Vidal Sala, 12 Fed. 207. In view of the repudiation of the locality test in contract matters, the importance to vessels of regular overhauling on the ways, and the constant exercise of jurisdiction in such cases by the courts, the jurisdiction can hardly be seriously denied, despite the cautious reservation of the question in The Robert W. Parsons case, supra; The Winnebago, 141 Fed. 945, 73 C. C. A. 295. But even if the main work is done on land, it becomes maritime if not complete until set up and tested on the vessel, as in case of a new engine made on shore and then placed in the vessel. The L. B. X., 93 Fed. 253.

But there are old cases holding under the influence of the English decisions that work contracted for on land does not create a lien cognizable in admiralty. Clinton v. The Hannah, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,898, Bee 419; Shrewsbury v. The Two Friends, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 12,819, Bee 433.

However, many states have enacted statutes giving a lien for construction work, and these statutes are valid for the very reason that they do not create a maritime lien enforceable in the state courts and hence do not interfere with the federal admiralty jurisdiction.⁹⁶

(B) Difference Between Construction and Repairs—(1) AS AFFECTED BY LAUNCHING. The decisions agree that everything done before the vessel is launched comes under the head of construction. But there is much conflict on the question whether work done and materials furnished after the vessel has been launched but before final completion should be classed as construction work. Some cases hold that the structure becomes a ship as soon as she rides upon her destined element, others that anything forming part of the ship or her tackle or apparel is when first furnished part of her construction. The better opinion is in favor of the latter view.⁹⁷

In The Richard Busteed, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,764, 1 Sprague 441, decided in 1858, just after People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. (U. S.) 393, 15 L. ed. 961, Judge Sprague held that a construction contract was maritime; that the supreme court in that case merely intended to decide that there was no lien, and did not pass upon its maritime character. The later decisions, however, have not sustained this distinction.

See 34 Cent. Dig. tit. "Maritime Liens," §§ 14, 21, 32.

97. In The Eliza Ladd, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,364, 3 Sawy. 519, it was held after full consideration that work done after a ship is launched is not construction work. The same learned judge (Deady) made the same ruling in The Revenue Cutter No. 2, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,714, 4 Sawy. 143. See also The Manhattan, 46 Fed. 797. On the other hand it has been very generally held that anything that would technically be a part of the vessel itself or its tackle or apparel, as distinguished from mere supplies, is construction work, although furnished after launching, that everything is construction until the ship is complete as a ship. In re Glenmont, 32 Fed. 703 [affirmed in 34 Fed. 402]. This ruling has been made more than once as to machinery put in after launching. The Paradox, 61 Fed. 860; The Count de Lesseps, 17 Fed. 460; The Pacific, 9 Fed. 120, 5 Hughes 257; Rees v. Steam-boat Gen. Terry, 3 Dak. 155, 13 N. W. 533. So as to sails and rigging. The Iosco, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,060, Brown Adm. 495; Wilson v. Lawrence, 82 N. Y. 409; Thorsen v. The J. B. Martin, 26 Wis. 488, 7 Am. Rep. 91. So as to masts and spars. Griffenberg v. The John Laughlin, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,811, 2 Wkly. Notes Cas. (Pa.) 612. See also Kirkpatrick v. Augusta Bank, 30 Ga. 465 (construing the Georgia statute); Lawson v. Higgins, 1 Mich. 225 (construing the Michigan act); Lake Nav. Co. v. Austin Electrical Supply Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1895) 30 S. W. 832. Hence, independent of the supreme court decisions, the weight of authority is clearly in favor of the proposition that everything is construction until the ship becomes complete as a ship. The first supreme court case was People's Ferry Co. v. Beers, 20 How. (U. S.) 393, 15 L. ed. 961. It was a libel by parties who had a contract for building the hull and delivering it on the water. Hence their contract was not complete until after launching. Yet the court held that it was not maritime. The next case was Roach v. Chapman, 22 How. (U. S.) 129, 16 L. ed. 294. It was a libel for the price of the original engines and boilers. The official report is meager as to the facts, but a personal examination of the original record in the clerk's office of the supreme court, made by the author, disclosed the fact that the engines and boilers were put in while the vessel was lying at the wharf in Louisville, which was after launching. This decision therefore ought to be conclusive, and it would be but for the recent case of Tucker v. Alexandroff, 183 U. S. 424, 438, 22 S. Ct. 195, 46 L. ed. 264. In that case, however, Judge Brown says: "A ship is born when she is launched, and lives so long as her identity is preserved. Prior to her launching she is a mere congeries of wood and iron—an ordinary piece of personal property. . . . In the baptism of launching she receives her name, and from the moment her keel touches

(2) AS AFFECTED BY EXTENT OF ALTERATIONS. As long as a vessel preserves her identity, any work done in the way of alteration, enlargement, or improvement, no matter how extensive, falls under the head of repairs and not of construction, and hence is a maritime contract and may be the subject of a maritime lien.⁹⁸

d. Other Necessaries — (i) NECESSARIES DEFINED. This term "necessaries" includes whatever is fit and proper for the service on which the vessel is engaged, or whatever would have been ordered by a prudent owner if present.⁹⁹

(ii) ADVANCES OF MONEY—(A) In General. One who lends money on request of the proper authority for the purpose of paying off maritime liens upon a vessel, and who looks to the vessel as his security, has a lien upon the vessel for such advances equal in dignity to the liens which he satisfies.¹ But such an advance not made on authority of one having the right to bind the ship does not give a lien.² Nor does the lien arise on a mere personal loan of money or credit the water she is transformed, and becomes a subject of admiralty jurisdiction." The case involved the question whether a Russian sent out as part of the crew of The Variag could be reclaimed by his government, he having deserted while the ship was still incomplete. The court held that his government could have him apprehended, the main part of the opinion being devoted to the international question at issue. No point was involved as to the character of work done upon a ship; and in view of the facts before the court in the two older cases, as explained above, it is difficult to believe that the court intended to change the rule established by them; for they both treated as construction some work at least which was done after launching.

But if the supplies are to be furnished for a voyage, the contract therefor is maritime, although made before the launching. The Hiram R. Dixon, 33 Fed. 297.

98. The Iris, 100 Fed. 104, 40 C. C. A. 301; Hardy v. The Ruggles, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,062, 2 Hughes 78; U. S. v. The Grace Meade, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,243, 2 Hughes 83. In McMaster v. One Dredge, 95 Fed. 832, and in King v. Greenway, 71 N. Y. 413, work which changed the character of the craft in the first case by taking a scow and fitting it up as a dredge, after it had been long used as a scow, and in the second case by altering the propelling machinery, was held to be construction work. The machinery was an addition in the first of these cases and not a mere substitution, and hence was held to come within the domain of construction work. See also The Ferax, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,737, 1 Sprague 180, holding that extensive alterations came under the word "construction" in the Massachusetts act.

But if the vessel loses its identity, there is no maritime lien upon the new boat merely because some materials were used from an old one, for work done in fitting them into the new one. Hantupee v. Coal Bluff No. 2, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,172; Smith v. The Royal George, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,102, 1 Woods 290.

99. This is practically the definition of Lord Tenterden in Webster v. Seekamp, 4 B. & Ald. 352, 23 Rev. Rep. 307, 6 E. C. L. 515, which was followed by Sir Robert Philli-more in The Riga, L. R. 3 A. & E. 516, 1 Asp. 246, 41 L. J. Adm. 39, 26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 202, 20 Wkly. Rep. 927.

In a well-considered American case substantially the same idea is expressed more accurately: "They were not only in aid of commerce and navigation, but were such as would be ordered by any prudent shipowner, engaged in business similar to that of the transportation company, for the purpose of fitting and equipping his vessel for efficient maritime service." The Ella, 84 Fed. 471, 472. to the vessel owner, although such money or credit may be used by him for the ship's purposes.³

(b) Lender Must See to Application. As the right of a lender of money to claim a lien is derivative through the lien-holder, it follows that in order to entitle himself to such a right, he must satisfy himself that the liens proposed to be paid are themselves valid and enforceable and that his funds are applied to that purpose.⁴

(c) Character of Advances. Wherever the claim taken up is such that it would itself be enforceable by a libel in rem, an advance of money to pay it under the circumstances already detailed gives the lender a maritime lien.⁵

Cas. No. 13,186, to the effect that payment by the lender to the master is sufficient to create the lien, although the funds are squandered by the master, is contrary to the current of authority. In United Hydraulic Cotton-Press Co. v. The Alexander McNeil, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,404, the head-note reports him as deciding the same thing, but the subject is not touched upon in the opinion. In The Worthington, 133 Fed. 725, 66 C. C. A. 555, where an advance of necessary funds was obtained by the owner in a foreign port under circumstances held to create a lien, and the money was diverted to other purposes, it was held that as between the creditor and the owner, where no rights of third parties intervened, the owner was estopped from setting up such defense.

Lender has lien for money advanced: To pay off seamen's wages. The Pauline, 136 Fed. 815; The Arctic, 75 Fed. 601; The Tangier, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,744, 2 Lowell 7. To pay port charges. The Aina, 40 Fed. 269; The Tangier, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,744, 2 Lowell 7; The Riga, L. R. 3 A. & E. 516, 1 Aspin. 246, 41 L. J. Adm. 39, 26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 202, 20 Wkly. Rep. 927; The Lucia B. Ives, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,590, 10 Ben. 660, was the case of a domestic vessel, and turned on the language of the New York statute. To release a boat from a valid libel, or to prevent a libel (The Augustine Kobbe, 39 Fed. 559; The Menominie, 36 Fed. 197; The J. R. Hoyle, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,557, 4 Biss. 234); but not money paid by the sureties on a vessel's bond on a decree against them (Chandler v. The Willamette Valley, 76 Fed. 838); nor money advanced to release a vessel from a common-law suit (The A. R. Dunlap, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 513, 1 Lowell 350). In Janney v. The Belle Lee, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,211, it was decided that advances to prevent a threatened seizure did not create a lien. A better ground for the decision would have been that the threatened seizure was for funds to furnish and finish the boat, that is, for a non-maritime cause of action. So the lender has a lien on money advanced to pay for ordinary supplies, repairs, or disbursements (The Worthington, 133 Fed. 725, 66 C. C. A. 555; The Augustine Kobbe, 37 Fed. 696, 39 Fed. 559; The Wyoming, 36 Fed. 493; The General Tompkins, 9 Fed. 620; Collins v. The Fort Wayne, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,012, 1 Bond 476; Phelps v. The Eureka, 14 Mo. 532); but not for money advanced while the vessel is in the custody of the court, and which is not necessary for its care or preservation, nor for fitting her for another voyage (The Alcalde, 132 Fed. 576; The Augustine Kobbe, 37 Fed. 702, 39 Fed. 559); nor for money advanced to purchase cargo to be shipped by the vessel (The Josephine Spangler, 9 Fed. 773); nor for money advanced to pay for the purchase of a vessel (The Sarah Harris, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,346, 7 Ben. 177).

Commissions and profits.—The lender may charge a reasonable commission over and above the actual amount of the bills paid off, and it would have the same dignity as the amount of the bills. The Emily B. Souder v. Pritchard, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 666, 21 L. ed. 683; The Sarah Harris, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,346, 7 Ben. 177. Of course if the lender occupies a fiduciary position he cannot make a secret profit. The Alvega, 30 Fed. 694. Nor can he make two profits, in the shape of commissions and excessive interest, or charges over and above wages paid and superintendence also. The Augustine Kobbe, 37 Fed. 696, 39 Fed. 559. But under ordinary circumstances a materialman can charge a profit on the amount of wages paid. Brady v. The Eva, McGloin (La.) 49.

Under the Alabama code in force in 1863 the proceeds of a cargo of salt, although applied to the payment of crew's wages and other charges against the vessel, do not give rise to a lien. The James Battle v. Waring, 39 Ala. 180.

Under the Arkansas statute money advanced to pay the wages of boatmen does not acquire the privileged rank which such wages have. The P. H. White v. Levy, 10 Ark. 411.

VII. CIRCUMSTANCES UNDER WHICH LIEN ARISES.

A. In General. As to all maritime liens except those of materialmen, the rendition of the service to the vessel or the bringing her into such relations with any one as creates a maritime cause of action against her impresses upon her a maritime lien irrespective of questions of credit or ownership.⁶

B. Liens of Materialmen — 1. IN GENERAL. As to liens of materialmen, on account of the fact that they were long considered in English admiralty law to be scarcely maritime at all, a lien does not arise except under rigid conditions, governed and varied by many circumstances.⁷

2. RULE AS TO FOREIGN VESSELS — a. General Principle. Under the general maritime law a materialman has a lien upon a foreign vessel as security if the requisites hereinafter discussed concur.⁸

b. What Vessels Are Foreign — (i) GENERAL PRINCIPLE. A vessel is foreign when the materialman's service is rendered in a port of the state or country to which the vessel does not belong, or where her owner does not reside.⁹

(ii) CHARACTER OF VESSEL AS AFFECTED BY REGISTRY OR ENROLMENT. The domestic or foreign character of a vessel is presumptively determined by its registry or enrolment. Parties who deal with it on the strength of this, and of its port as painted on the vessel, are entitled to regard this as binding in the absence of actual or constructive knowledge of the real residence of the owners.¹⁰

Under Louisiana code (1825), § 3204 [Code (1870), § 3237], advances of money were not classed as necessities except in one or two instances expressly named (for example loans for the last voyage, and loans on bottomry), and gave no lien. Learned v. Brown, 94 Fed. 876, 36 C. C. A. 524; The Canary No. 2, 22 Fed. 532; Elstner-Martin Grocery Co. v. Lamont, 113 La. 894, 37 So. 868; Owens v. Davis, 15 La. Ann. 22; Hyde v. Culver, 4 La. Ann. 9; Grant v. Fiol, 17 La. 158.

Under the Missouri and Ohio statutes, advances of money do not give rise to a lien. Bryan v. The Pride of the West, 12 Mo. 371; Dewitt v. The St. Lawrence, 3 Ohio St. 325; McGuire v. The Kentucky, 20 Ohio 62.

Under the Pennsylvania act of April 20, 1858, the discount of a note by a bank for a steamer's use gives no lien. The Daniel Kaine, 31 Fed. 746.

Under the South Carolina act giving laborers a privilege and preference, a contractor does not acquire such rights for money paid by him for labor. Butler v. The Julia, 57 Fed. 233.

(III) CHARACTER OF VESSEL AS AFFECTED BY ACTUAL RESIDENCE OF OWNER. But if there are local owners or sources of credit, and this is known or easily ascertainable by the materialman, he is bound by such knowledge or means of knowledge, and the presumption arising from the vessel's papers disappears.¹¹ A "foreign" vessel in this sense includes vessels of other states as well as vessels of other countries.¹²

(IV) CHARACTER OF VESSEL AS AFFECTED BY PLACE OF DELIVERY. As delivery to the ship or within the immediate presence or control of her officers is necessary in order to create a maritime lien, it follows that the question whether the transaction is with a domestic or foreign ship is governed by the relation which she bears to the port where she is lying when the articles are delivered on board or the substantial part of the work done, not by the relation of the parties to each other where the supplies are ordered.¹³

C. 207 (decided in 1803-1804) it was decided that a ship hailing from Alexandria (then in the District of Columbia) was not a foreign vessel as to supplies furnished when in Baltimore. The opinion is meager and does not rest upon any peculiar doctrine as to the District of Columbia. The arguments of counsel would indicate that the court treated the states as not foreign to each other in this sense. If so the case is overruled by the authorities above quoted.

3. RULE AS TO DOMESTIC VESSELS — a. Independent of Statute. Under the general maritime law as administered outside of England and under the early maritime law of England, there was no distinction between domestic and foreign vessels, but materialmen had a lien upon both alike.¹⁴ But in consequence of the warfare of the common-law courts on the English admiralty it became settled in the mother country that materialmen had no lien on either domestic or foreign vessels, except by express hypothecation in the nature of bottomry.¹⁵ Under the influence of this English rule, the American admiralty courts, although not going so far as to deny the right of the materialman to any implied lien at all, construed the general maritime law to deny such lien in the case of domestic vessels where there was no local act creating it.¹⁶

v. The Ship Flora, 6 Can. Exch. 137; Ship-owners' Dry-Dock Co. v. The Ship Flora, 6 Can. Exch. 135.

State statutes.—In this respect the construction of the state statutes varies, as might be expected in view of their widely differing language. In Mehan v. Thompson, 71 Me. 492, where the contract for the timber to be used in the ship was between two citizens of the state and the circumstances showed that the particular vessel was in contemplation of both parties, the statute was held to apply, although the actual delivery of the timber was in another state. On the other hand the Massachusetts act is held to apply only to materials furnished in the state. McDonald v. The Nimbus, 137 Mass. 360. This is also the construction of the Missouri act. James v. The Pawnee, 19 Mo. 517; The Raritan v. Pollard, 10 Mo. 583. The New Jersey act also is construed to mean that the right of lien is governed by the fact that the work is done within the state, although the contract was made in another state. Baeder v. Carnie, 44 N. J. L. 208. This also is the construction of the New York statute. Phoenix Iron Co. v. The Hopatcong, 127 N. Y. 206, 27 N. E. 841 [affirming 6 N. Y. Suppl. 215]; Moores v. Lunt, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 650, 4 Thomps. & C. 154 [reversing on other grounds 13 Abb. Pr. N. S. 166]; Phillips v. Myers, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 184. Under the Ohio statute the fact that the materials were used in Ohio does not give rise to the lien where they were purchased out of the state. Fearing v. Schooner Myrtle, 2 Ohio Dec. (Reprint) 175, 2 West. L. Month. 7. Under the Pennsylvania act, if the materials are used in the state, there is a lien, although the contract therefor was made out of the state, but not if they were furnished out of the state. Low v. The Ship Clarence S. Bement, 2 Pa. Co. Ct. 430, 19 Wkly. Notes Cas. 153; Churchman v. Keefe, 2 Del. Co. (Pa.) 256. Under the Wisconsin act the claim must arise in the state in order for the lien to vest. If the contract is between citizens of the state and the vessel at the time is out of the state, it does not vest until the vessel returns to the state. *Thorsen v. Thé J. B. b. Local Statutes as Creating Lien—(i) GENERAL PRINCIPLE. Since the decision in The General Smith,¹⁷ the right to an implied lien for supplies, repairs, or other necessities furnished to domestic vessels, where there is a local act authorizing such lien, is universally recognized.¹⁸

(ii) VALIDITY OF LOCAL STATUTES GIVING SUCH LIEN—(A) As Giving the Lien. When the cause of action is maritime by nature, although not vested with a lien under the general principles of admiralty law, a local statute can superadd a maritime lien, if the vessel against which it is asserted is within the range of state legislation; and such lien is enforceable in an admiralty court by a proceeding in rem. In other words a local statute can add to a cause of action essentially maritime a lien which it did not have before, as such legislation does not affect the general bounds of admiralty jurisdiction; and the federal court, finding a subject maritime by nature, will enforce it without inquiring into its origin, just as it would do in the case of a common-law or equity cause of action created by a state statute.¹⁹ But a state statute cannot create a maritime lien as incident to a cause of action not maritime by nature, for in such case it would be in the power of the states to enlarge the general scope of the admiralty jurisdiction recognized in the federal constitution.²⁰ Hence a state cannot annex an admiralty lien to a contract for the original construction of a vessel, as that is not under the decisions, maritime by nature, and a state cannot change its nature.²¹ But as the power of the state in this regard is limited simply by the admiralty clause of the federal constitution, it follows that it is free to annex liens to non-maritime causes of action, such liens being ordinary statutory liens and not maritime liens. For this reason it can give a lien enforceable in its own courts on a contract for the building of a ship.²² For the same reason it can give a lien enforceable in its

See 34 Cent. Dig. tit. "Maritime Liens," § 7.

This doctrine was first announced by the supreme court in The General Smith, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 438, 4 L. ed. 609, in a short opinion written by Mr. Justice Story. A strong effort was made to bring about a reconsideration of the question in Rodd v. Heartt, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, 22 L. ed. 654, but Mr. Justice Bradley in delivering the opinion, while not denying that the distinction between foreign and domestic vessels had no warrant in the general law of the sea, held to it as a settled principle of American jurisprudence. And the decisions on the subject are innumerable. The decisions in The Union Express, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,364, Brown Adm. 537, and Taylor v. The Commonwealth, 23 Fed. Cas. Nos. 13,787, 13,788, were based upon a misapprehension of the purpose of the supreme court in reëdicting the 12th Admiralty Rule as it now stands (then just reëdicted). The judges seemed to consider that the right to proceed in rem depended on this rule, whereas the supreme court in Rodd v. Heartt, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, 2 L. ed. 654 (decided just after these cases) based the right to proceed under this rule on the existence of a local statute, as far as the implied lien is concerned.

20. The expressions in The Belfast v. Boon, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 624, 19 L. ed. 266, and in The Universe, 108 Fed. 968, that "state legislatures have no authority to create a maritime lien" must be understood with this qualification.

A state statute can add to a maritime cause of action a lien not incident to it independent of such statute, as is abundantly evident by the cases cited supra, note 19; but it cannot make a cause of action maritime which is not so by nature, nor add to a non-maritime cause of action a maritime lien.

own courts on vessels plying in waters not included in the federal maritime jurisdiction, for instance, waters entirely within the boundaries of a state and not connected with other waters giving an outlet to other states or countries.²³

(b) As Providing Remedies For Its Enforcement—(1) LOCAL STATUTES GIVING PURE PROCEEDINGS IN REM. Article 3, section 2, of the federal constitution provides that the federal judicial power shall extend inter alia "to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction." The first congress which assembled after the constitution went into effect passed the famous Judiciary Act of September 24, 1789.²⁴ Chapter 20, section 9, of this act vested the federal district courts with cognizance "of all civil cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; saving to suitors in all cases the right of a common-law remedy, where the common law is competent to give it. . . . And such jurisdiction shall be exclusive."²⁵ Under the influence of these provisions the courts have held that the effect of a local statute is merely to add the remedy in rem, or lien to a maritime cause of action, which lien, being maritime, is exclusively enforceable as such in the federal district courts. A state statute cannot vest a state court with jurisdiction to enforce such a lien by a proceeding in rem in the strict sense in which that term is used, that is, a proceeding against the thing itself as the real defendant.²⁶

(2) LOCAL STATUTES GIVING COMMON-LAW REMEDIES. But although a state cannot confer on its courts jurisdiction over a proceeding in rem, it can give them jurisdiction over suits against the master or owners. And it can annex to such suit a process of attachment. The proceeding in rem which is forbidden to the state courts is a proceeding against the vessel by name as the real defendant in which the vessel itself is judged and sentenced.²⁷ A proceeding against the owner is not made a proceeding in rem by the fact that it is accompanied by an attachment; for such an attachment is a mere incident to a personal suit, and a mere means of reaching the owner's interest; and in it only his title can be sold, and not a clear title to the property itself.²⁸

(c) Vessels Subject to Such Statutes. Although there is much conflict, the preponderance of authority and the true principle is that a state can by statute give a lien for a maritime cause of action only on domestic vessels. Maritime liens upon foreign vessels arise under the general maritime law and are governed by the principles of that law. It is not within the power of a state to add to or subtract from the liens given by the general maritime law, nor to impose conditions or restrictions upon them, thereby making a foreign vessel subject to a different law in every port. The basis of the state power to legislate is the fact that liens on domestic vessels are not recognized by the general maritime law as con-

28. An examination of the cases cited supra, note 26, will show that the state statutes held void in them authorized proceedings against the vessel itself by name. But there is abundant authority in favor of the validity of the state statutes authorizing attachments as ancillary to a personal suit. The Louisiana decisions on the subject are of special interest. In Young v. The Princess Royal, 22 La. Ann. 388, 2 Am. Rep. 731, in 1870, the court decided that if the process authorized by their statute was a proceeding in rem, it was unconstitutional. In Southern Dry Dock Co. v. The J. D. Perry, 23 La. Ann. 39, 8 Am. Rep. 585, it was held that a proceeding against "Captain A. Baird and the owners of the steamboat J. D. Perry," claiming also a privilege on the steamer, praying for a writ of provisional seizure and that the owners might be cited and condemned to pay plaintiff the sum claimed, was a proceeding in rem and void. The decision was rendered at the January term, 1871. But in Leon v. Galceran, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 185, 20 L. ed. 74, decided about the same time, and probably unknown to the Louisiana court, the supreme court sustained a suit in terms against the owner under that same statute, although it was a suit by seamen for their wages, and was accompanied by a process of sequestration or attachment, on the theory that such a process was only an incident to a suit against the owner. Hence in State v. Judge, 39 La. Ann. 499, 2 So. 37, 4 Am. St. Rep. 274, decided in 1887, the Louisiana court sustained a proceeding under their statute as constitutional. On this same ground the Alabama act is valid, as the proceeding authorized by it is against the owners, not against the boat. Scatcherd Lumber Co. v. Rike, 113 Ala. 555, 21 So. 136, 59 Am. St. Rep. 147. So too the Florida statute. Baars v. Creary, 23 Fla. 311, 2 So. 662. In The Montauk v. Walker, 47 Ill. 335, the Illinois act of 1857 authorizing a proceeding in rem against the vessel by name was sustained on the ground that the vessel was a domestic vessel. The court based its opinion on the ground that congress had no jurisdiction over domestic commerce. The decision is wrong, as the admiralty jurisdiction does not depend on the commerce clause of the constitution, but extends to navigable waters, whether domestic or foreign. Ex p. Garnett, 141 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 840, 35 L. ed. 631; The Norway v. Jensen, 52 Ill. 373. For the same reason Williamson v. Hogan, 46 Ill. 504, cannot be sustained. The court decided that a contract to furnish supplies to a domestic vessel is not maritime at all, confusing the distinction between the maritime character of the contract and the right to a lien. In The E. P. Dorr v. Waldron, 62 Ill. 221, a tugboat, a proceeding against a steamer by name was sustained as the equivalent of an ordinary attachment. It is not reconcilable with the federal decisions. In Turner v. Friend, 59 Me. 290, it was held that an attachment against the master accompanied by process against the vessel is none the less valid from the fact that he owns no interest in the vessel; but it was for a violation of a state statute relating to fishing, not for a maritime cause of action. If the attachment is maintainable, as shown above, only as an ancillary process to reach defendant's interest, a state statute purporting to give a right of attachment against the vessel for a maritime cause of action and to authorize its sale would hardly be helped by the fact that it also authorizes a suit against someone having no interest in the vessel. The Virginia vessel law is now embodied in section 2963 of the code of 1887. It does not authorize a proceeding against the vessel by name, but is in form a suit against the owner or master and authorizes an attachment in such as "a pending suit." Under the above principles it ought to be valid. But in Stewart v. Potomac Ferry Co., 12 Fed. 296, 5 Hughes 372, it was held void as authorizing a proceeding in rem. The attempt of the learned judge to distinguish it from Leon v. Galceran, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 185, 20 L. ed. 74, was not very successful. A state is not limited by this doctrine to the creation of remedies on the common-law side of its courts, so long as it does not create an admiralty proceeding in rem. It may confer the jurisdiction on its chancery courts also. Casey, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Weatherly, 97 Tenn. 297, 37 S. W. 6; Washington Iron-Works v. Jensen, 3 Wash. 584, 28 Pac. 1019. The possessory lien of a shipwright is unaffected. The Two Marys, 10 Fed. 919; Scott v. Delahunt, 65 N. Y. 128.

(d) Construction of Such Statutes. In so far as these statutes create a lien, they are in derogation of the common law and should not be construed retrospectively or as enlarging the lien beyond the terms of the act, although as far as the procedure is concerned they are remedial statutes.³⁰

29. In The Chusan, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,717, 2 Story 455, Judge Story held that the lien for supplies furnished a foreign vessel was governed by the principles of the maritime law, and that the New York statute then in force, which provided that a lien for supplies should cease upon the departure of the vessel from the state, applied only to domestic vessels, and could not affix such a condition to the general maritime law applying to foreign vessels. See also The George T. Kemp, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,341, 2 Lowell 477; Harris v. The Henrietta, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,121, Newb. Adm. 284; Roosevelt v. The C. H. Frost, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 12,033; Wilson v. The Jewess, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,812. In The Lyndhurst, 48 Fed. 839, Judge Addison Brown, following the Chusan case, supra, held that the New York statute requiring a notice of lien to be filed in the clerk's office within thirty days did not affect the lien for supplies furnished foreign vessels. In The Electron, 74 Fed. 689, 21 C. C. A. 12, the circuit court of appeals for that same circuit, although forbearing to pass upon the question whether a state can create a maritime lien upon a foreign vessel, held that it could not change the conditions under which such a lien arose, nor confer a lien where credit was not in fact given to the vessel, being foreign. In Cuddy v. Clement, 113 Fed. 454, 51 C. C. A. 288 [affirming 107 Fed. 978], the circuit court of appeals for the Massachusetts circuit held that such statutes applied only to domestic vessels. In The New Brunswick, 129 Fed. 893, 64 C. C. A. 325 [affirming 125 Fed. 567], the same principle was followed. Even under a state statute supplies are not "furnished" to a vessel in the sense of such a law unless the vessel is at the time in the state. Bennett v. Beadle, 142 Cal. 239, 75 Pac. 843. The Indiana Water-Craft Law is held not to extend to contracts made and broken out of the state. Copinger v. The David Gibson, 14 Ind. 480; The J. P. Tweed v. Richards, 9 Ind. 525. See also Bidwell v. Whitaker, 1 Mich. 469. On the other hand, in McRae v. Bowers Dredging Co., 86 Fed. 344, Judge Hanford, in marshaling the assets of an insolvent corporation, held that the statute of Washington created liens upon foreign as well as domestic vessels, if the supplies were furnished within the state. He made the same ruling in the later cases of The Del Norte, 90 Fed. 506, and The Robert Dollar, 115 Fed. 218. He bases his ruling upon the power of a state to legislate over persons or property within its jurisdiction, whether there permanently or temporarily. Such general power of legislation is of course obvious, but it is subject to constitutional limitations. One of those limitations is that a state cannot add to or detract from the general admiralty law, however extensive its range of legislation over ordinary common-law rights and remedies. He does not refer to the Chusan case, supra, in any of the above opinions. The question is practically settled by The Roanoke, 189 U. S. 185, 23 S. Ct. 491, 47 L. ed. 770. In it the supreme court passing upon the same statute of Washington which was before Judge Hanford held that a state could not as to foreign vessels make supplies not ordered by the master a lien and thereby create conditions not recognized by the general maritime law. And it strongly intimated that such a statute could not affect a foreign vessel at all. See also The San Rafael, 141 Fed. 270, 72 C. C. A. 388; The Golden Rod, 151 Fed. 6; Poole v. Kermit, 59 N. Y. 554; Stedman v. Patchin, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 218; Dowell v. Steamboat Melnotte, 1 Cinc. Super. Ct. 60. The case of Randall v. Roche, 30 N. J. L. 220, 82 Am. Dec. 233 [criticized in Edwards v. Elliott, 36 N. J. L. 449, 13 Am. Rep. 463 (affirmed in 21 Wall. (U. S.) 532, 22 L. ed. 487)], holding that the statute confers liens on foreign vessels, is overruled by the decisions cited supra, this note.

For the sake of avoiding conflict with federal authorities a statute purporting to confer a lien on vessels "used in navigating the waters of the state" will not be construed to cover foreign vessels casually coming there. Ray v. The Henry Harbeck, 1 Cal. 451; Tucker v. The Sacramento, 1 Cal. 403; McQueen v. The Russell, 1 Cal. 165; Souter v. The Sea Witch, 1 Cal. 162; U. S. v. The Haytian Republic, 65 Fed. 120.

The Maine and Massachusetts statutes have been construed to give a lien on domestic and foreign vessels. Perkins v. Pike, 42 Me. 141, 66 Am. Dec. 267 (a case decided in 1856); The John Walls Jr., 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,432, 1 Sprague 178 (Massachusetts act of 1848). In Donnell v. The Starlight, 103 Mass. 227, it was held that attachment under the state law would lie if the actual owner resided there, although she was registered in another state in the name of one who was really a mortgagee.

Under the Tennessee act of 1833, c. 35, if the debt was contracted in the state and the boat was then in the state, the right of attachment existed, no matter where the parties resided. Hill v. Mills, 9 Humphr. (Tenn.) 629.

30. The Chusan, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,717, 2 Story 455; The Kiersage, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,762, 2 Curt. 421 [reversing 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,634, 1 Ware 546]. Hence the Maine

4. RULE AS AFFECTED BY PARTY ORDERING SUPPLIES — a. The Master — (1) AS TO FOREIGN VESSELS — (A) General Principle. This is well expressed by Mr. Justice Johnson. "For these purposes, the law-maritime attaches the power of pledging or subjecting the vessel to material-men, to the office of ship-master, and considers the owner as vesting him with those powers, by the mere act of constituting him ship-master. The necessities of commerce require that when remote from his owner, he should be able to subject his owner's property to that liability, without which, it is reasonable to suppose, he will not be able to pursue his owner's interest." In the same opinion he says: "The whole object of giving admiralty process and priority of payment to privileged creditors, is to furnish wings and legs to the forfeited hull to get back, for the benefit of all concerned; that is, to complete her voyage."³¹ Hence, when supplies or repairs are apparently necessary, and are ordered by the master in a foreign port, the owner being absent and the party from whom they are ordered does not know, and has no reason to suppose, that the master has any other means of credit, the vessel is charged with an implied lien in favor of such creditor.³² act of Feb. 19, 1834, was construed by Mr. Justice Story not to give a lien for merely working upon a vessel as part of a general contract of service, but to presuppose a special contract of employment for the particular vessel. Read v. Hull of a New Brig, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,609, 1 Story 244 [affirming 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,316, 2 Ware 37]. This same construction was placed upon the act by Judge Ware in Sewall v. Hull of a New Ship, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,682, 1 Ware 565. So by Justice Curtis in The Young Sam, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,186, 1 Brunn. Col. Cas. 600. In Drew v. Hull of a New Ship, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 4,078, Judge Sprague construed the Massachusetts act in the same way, following the decision of the Massachusetts supreme court in Rogers v. Currier, 13 Gray (Mass.) 129, to the same effect. But in The Antarctic, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 479, 1 Sprague 206, he held that where the ship was under construction and the lumber was delivered at the yard, it would be presumed to have been intended for her, and there would be a lien for such as was actually used in her. The same ruling was made by Judge Betts in Menzies v. The Agnes, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,430, presumably upon the New York statute, although it is not specifically mentioned in the very brief opinion. See also supra, II, D.

Extent and limits of rule.—As this doctrine of the master's authority is based upon the needs of the vessel, he may in case of such need bind the vessel even when he is operating her on shares or is under contract to furnish such supplies himself, if the furnisher has no knowledge or means of knowledge of such fact. Thomas v. Osborn, 19 How. (U. S.) 22, 15 L. ed. 534; The Cumberland, 30 Fed. 449; The Ellen Holgate, 30 Fed. 125; The New Champion, 17 Fed. 816; The H. B. Foster, 11 Fed. Cas. In fact some cases hold that the vessel is bound, even where the furnisher knew of such agreement, but this is hardly consistent with the rule as to vessels under charter, to be discussed subsequently. The Monsoon, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,716, 1 Sprague 37. The true rule is well expressed in The Columbus, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,044, 5 Sawy. 487. See also Vose v. Cockroft, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 58 [affirmed in 44 N. Y. 415]. This implied power of the master, however, is limited by the usage of trade and the ship's present necessities. The Paragon, 18 Fed.

(B) Necessity For Repairs or Supplies—(1) PRESUMPTION OF. When the vessel is in a foreign port and the supplies and repairs are of a character used in the ordinary navigation of the vessel, and are ordered by the master, the presumption is that they are necessary.³³ In this connection the word "necessary" is not used in the stricter sense of "essential." It merely means "fit" or "proper." Whatever a prudent owner would order if present is necessary in this sense.³⁴ If the supplies or repairs are apparently reasonable and proper, it is sufficient. They need not be absolutely indispensable.³⁵

(2) PRESUMPTION REBUTTED. But when the circumstances themselves are sufficient to negative the real or apparent necessity for the repairs or supplies, the furnisher is chargeable with notice, and acquires no implied lien even for articles ordered by the master.³⁶

No. 17,977, 14 Blatchf. 499 (affirmed in 104 U. S. 180, 26 L. ed. 705)]. Hence he cannot bind the vessel for services previously rendered. The Hattie M. Bain, 20 Fed. 389. A lien does not arise under such usage for valuables deposited by a ship-carpenter with the master while the carpenter is working on the ship, the custody of such articles not being one of the master's duties. Smith v. The Royal George, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,102, 1 Woods 290.

If he is master de facto, although not de jure, he can bind the vessel. The Sarah Harris, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,347, 13 Blatchf. 503; The Lehigh v. Knox, 12 Mo. 508. But the furnisher must satisfy himself that the person holding himself out as master is so in fact. Mannie v. The H. C. Grady, 85 Fed. 239; The Hamilton Morton, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,992, Brown Adm. 40.

The fact that he is a part-owner or charterer does not defeat his power. Thomas v. Osborn, 19 How. (U. S.) 22, 15 L. ed. 534; Revens v. Lewis, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,711, 2 Paine 202.

Burden of proof.—Hence, as there is a presumption of a lien under such circumstances, the burden would be on the party disputing it to show that the vessel was not bound, or that personal credit was intended; but it is a question of fact. The Gracie May, 72 Fed. 283, 18 C. Halbert*, 16 Ind. 256; United Ins. Co. v. Scott, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 106. In The Mary F. Chisholm, 133 Fed. 598, Judge Hale, construing the Maine statute, but on reasoning equally applicable to liens on foreign vessels, held that the vessel was bound for supplies of food ordered by the master in good faith, although articles of the nature of luxuries were included.

A more stringent rule was laid down in The Nebraska, 61 Fed. 514 [affirmed in 69 Fed. 1009, 17 C. C. A. 94], contemplating the existence of stress or necessity. This is hardly consistent with the cases cited in the previous note, and was not necessary to the decision, as the lien was sustained under a state statute.

36. Hence where the master bought groceries much beyond the vessel's needs, which fact was patent to the furnishers, the vessel was not bound, although the master represented that the articles were for her use. Morton v. Day, 6 La. Ann. 762. Nor can he bind the owners for goods bought by him to sell again for profit. Heath v. Vaught, 16 La. 515. So, where a party sold a mast for a vessel, making no inquiry whether it was needed, and in fact another had already been ordered and paid for, he acquired no lien. The Eledona,

(c) Necessity For Credit—(1) PRESUMPTION OF. When the repairs or supplies are necessary, as defined in the previous discussion, and are ordered by the master in a foreign port, a necessity for credit is presumed, where there is nothing to charge the materialman with actual or constructive knowledge that the master has other available sources of credit; and in such case it is also presumed that the credit is given to the vessel, and the implied lien therefore arises in favor of the materialman.⁸⁷ But as the basis of the lien is a credit to the vessel, it must appear, either as a matter of proof or as a presumption of law from the circumstances above named, that credit was actually intended to be given to the vessel.⁸⁸

(2) PRESUMPTION REBUTTED. But if the materialman has knowledge or reasonable means of knowledge that the master has other available funds or sources of credit, or that the vessel owner has made independent arrangements to supply necessary funds for the vessel's purposes, the presumption of necessity for credit and that there was a credit to the ship is rebutted, and the materialman acquires no lien.⁸⁹ The act of a materialman in attempting to bind the vessel under

In The Sappho, 89 Fed. 366, Judge Brawley held that the fact that a vessel is out of commission is some notice to the materialman that the master's powers are limited. This case was reversed (94 Fed. 545, 36 C. C. A. 395), but on the ground that the owner had subsequently ratified the master's acts. See also Gillingham v. Charleston Tow-Boat, etc., Co., 40 Fed. 649.

Where the lien claimant knows the limitations of the master's authority, he of course acquires no lien. *Mannie v. The H. C. When vessel in legal custody.—Under this principle there is no lien on a vessel for supplies or materials furnished while she is in legal custody. Such seizure revokes the master's authority and ends the apparent necessity. All parties dealing with a vessel in such custody have actual or constructive notice of the fact from the attachments and other notices required to be given by the rules of court. The Elexena, 53 Fed. 359; The Augustine Kobbe, 37 Fed. 702; The Esteban de Antunano, 31 Fed. 920. But the owner can by express contract bind the vessel while in custody, subject to the rights of the parties to the suit. The Witch Queen, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,915, 3 Sawy. 17. But if the vessel is only formally arrested and there is no keeper aboard or any other indication of her being under arrest, any materialman acting in ignorance of such arrest will obtain a lien. The Young America, 30 Fed. 789; The Sultana, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,603, Brown Adm. 35. If she is allowed to operate while under arrest, and the materialman knows of her arrest, his claim is postponed to those in suit. The Grapeshot, 22 Fed. 123. The marshal has no authority to bind a vessel while under arrest. Hoffman v. The Nebraska, 61 Fed. 514; The Sultana, supra. The proper practice under such circumstances is to apply to court for an order authorizing such work or

Hence where a fishing vessel came in with a large catch of fish for sale, the materialman, who was familiar with the business, was held chargeable with knowledge that this furnished sufficient funds for the vessel's needs; and he was denied a lien for a small supply bill. *The Bertha M. circumstances showing the master's lack of authority and the possession of necessary funds or sources of credit is condemned by the courts as a connivance with the master in a breach of his trust, and as an act of bad faith.⁴⁰ The presumption that credit was actually given to the vessel may be rebutted by evidence to the contrary.⁴¹

(d) When Act of Crew Considered Master's Act. It is not necessary that the supplies or materials be ordered by the master in person. If they are ordered by other members of the crew for their respective departments, with the knowledge or acquiescence of the master, they will be treated as ordered by the master.⁴²

(ii) AS TO DOMESTIC VESSELS. The general rule as to the master's power to bind domestic vessels under state statutes is based on and assimilated to his powers in relation to foreign vessels, although a lesser necessity for credit exists. If the owner is not in the port where the vessel is at the time, his powers are about as

Fed. 365, 24 C. C. A. 641. This seems to the author rather too rigid. The proceeds of the fish sold may have been necessary to pay the crew's wages or older liens. The presumption from the necessity for the supplies being that there was a necessity for credit, the burden of proving the contrary is on the party denying the lien. To hold the lien claimant to the requirement of satisfying himself how the vessel's money is spent before he can sustain a lien is to impose an extremely difficult condition and impair greatly the pledging of the ship as a source of credit. See also Thomas v. Osborn, 19 How. (U. S.) 22, 15 L. ed. 534; Stephenson v. The Francis, 21 Fed. 715; Phelps v. The Camilla, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,073, Taney 400; *Sutherland v. On the other hand the fact that the charge is in terms against the owner and not against the vessel, while evidence against the intent to credit the vessel may be explained by other circumstances, and is not conclusive against the lien. *The Patapsco v. 44. The scope of state statutes is limited, and they cannot change the basic principles of maritime law. One of these is that there is no lien unless the credit was intended to be given to the vessel. Hence the better authority reads this qualification of the rule into the state statutes, no matter how broadly they may be expressed. Their effect is merely to change the presumption of the general maritime law, as expounded by the English and American courts against the presumption of credit to a domestic vessel into a presumption in favor of such credit; that is, to assimilate the domestic lien to the foreign lien. The Westover, 76 Fed. 381; The Young Mechanic, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,180, 2 Curt. 404. The California statute was so construed by the circuit court of appeals for that circuit in Lighters Nos. 27 & 28, 57 Fed. 664, 6 C. C. A. 493. See also The Columbus, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,044, 5 Sawy. 487. So with the Michigan act by the circuit court of appeals for that circuit in The Samuel Marshall, 54 Fed. 396, 4 C. C. A. 385 [affirming 49 Fed. 754, and disapproving an earlier ruling to the contrary by Judge Hammond in The Illinois, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 7,005, 2 Flipp. 383]. The New Jersey law was so construed by the New York circuit court of appeals in The Electron, 74 Fed. 689, 21 C. C. A. 12. Also by Judge Wales in The Howard, 29 Fed. 604, and very recently by the New York circuit court of appeals in The Golden Rod, 151 Fed. 8. So with the New York statute. The Advance, 60 Fed. 766 [affirmed in 71 Fed. 987, 18 C. C. A. 404]; The Kate, 56 Fed. 614 [affirmed in 164 U. S. 458, 17 S. Ct. 135, 41 L. ed. 512]; Van Pelt v. The Ohio, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,870a. On the other hand in The Iris, 100 Fed. 104, 40 C. C. A. 301 [reversing 88 Fed. 902], the circuit court of appeals for the Massachusetts circuit held that a state could legislate over domestic property, and that the Massachusetts act could and did give a lien on a domestic vessel regardless of the fact whether there was a mutual intention to look to the vessel and this has been followed very recently by the circuit court of appeals for the third circuit in The Vigilant, 151 Fed. 747. So in the Del Norte, 90 Fed. 506, Judge Hanford held that the statute of Washington was intended to create a lien regardless of the question of credit to the vessel and even on the order of a person (the charterer) not recognized by the general admiralty law as an agent of the vessel. In McRae v. Bowers Dredging Co., 86 Fed. 344, he had held under the Washington statute that parties doing work and furnishing supplies to several vessels could hold each vessel for its several part, if they could apportion their work and supplies by proper proof. The fallacy of these cases is that they assume that the right of a state to legislate generally over property under its jurisdiction and its right to create a maritime lien are coextensive. But a maritime lien imports ex vi termini a credit to the vessel. Whatever may be the power of a state to create other kinds of liens, it cannot in the nature of things create a credit to the vessel where the parties show that they did not credit the vessel; for that is a contradiction in terms. Hence in The Kate, 164 U. S. 458, 17 S. Ct. 135, 41 L. ed. 512, the New York statute which, as literally read, authorized the charterer to bind the vessel, was construed to contemplate the general limitations imposed by the maritime law as a condition. And in The Roanoke, 189 U. S. 185, 23 S. Ct. 491, 47 L. ed. 770, it was held that a state statute could not give a person unknown to the maritime law as an agent of a vessel (a contractor) the right to create a secret lien upon the ship. The vessel in the case was foreign, but the decision seems broad enough to cover all.

A lien not maritime and enforceable in the state courts may, however, be created by the language of the state statute.

b. The Owner—(i) AS TO FOREIGN VESSELS—(A) Implied Liens. The basic principle of the lien for necessities is that it is an implied lien, based upon the needs of the vessel as a stranger in a foreign port and the powers of the master as agent ex necessitate rei for those interested in her to supply those needs, in order to enable her to carry out the purposes of her creation. But such powers of an agent cease when his principal is present. The presence of the owner in other words negatives the implied necessity for credit, as he is presumed in the absence of evidence or peculiar circumstances to be in possession of the funds to supply the vessel's needs, and hence the presumption of a lien is rebutted. This is all that Mr. Justice Johnson means when he says that it is not in the power of any one but the shipmaster, not the owner himself, to give these implied liens on the vessel.⁴⁵ Hence as to foreign vessels the presumption is against a lien (that is to say, the implied lien does not arise) when the necessities are contracted for by the owner and nothing is said by the parties about pledging the vessel, and no pledge is inferred either from previous course of dealing or other special circumstances. The mere ordering of the necessities in such case does not give rise to the implied lien.⁴⁶

(B) Express Liens. But this doctrine does not mean that the owner cannot agree to pledge his vessel for a maritime lien, if he chooses. It merely means that he will be presumed not to have done so, in the absence of evidence of such intent. In England, as has been seen, he can only do so by a formal agreement in the nature of a bottomry bond.⁴⁷ In America he can pledge his vessel for a maritime lien not only by a bottomry bond but by an ordinary contract with the materialman, whether that contract is express or proven by previous course of dealing, conduct, or circumstances showing a common understanding or meeting of minds between the materialman and the owner.⁴⁸ But even the owner can only create a maritime lien on his vessel when there is a maritime necessity therefor. However extensive his right to create ordinary liens on his property, they would not be maritime if this requisite is lacking.⁴⁹ But this understanding must

(II) AS TO DOMESTIC VESSELS—(A) Where There Is a Local Statute. The better opinion is that here also the mere furnishing of the supplies does not create a lien, but that the broad language of local statutes purporting to create a lien must be subject to the further condition that credit was actually given to the vessel; and the fact that the owner ordered the supplies does not obviate the necessity for such proof.⁵¹

(B) Where There Is No Local Statute. As the effect of a local statute is to rebut the presumption that credit was not given to the vessel, it would seem that the owner can by express contract create a lien for a maritime cause of action, on a domestic vessel even where there is no local statute. And although there is no remedy given by the local law for its enforcement, it is nevertheless enforceable in any other forum where such remedy exists; for a maritime lien follows a vessel around the world, and a lien may arise, although no remedy is given for its enforcement.⁵² In the federal courts such a remedy would exist to enforce a maritime lien unless expressly forbidden. By the act of congress of August 23, 1842,⁵³ power was given the supreme court to regulate by rule the practice of the admiralty courts. Accordingly at the December term, 1844, the admiralty rules of practice were promulgated. No. 12 of these rules gave a right of procedure in rem for supplies to a foreign ship and denied it for supplies to a domestic ship unless given by the local law. But this was construed merely to adopt the then

The fact that the necessities were charged against the vessel on the materialman's books is but a circumstance showing an intent to credit the vessel and is of itself insufficient to create the lien. Alaska, etc., Steamship Co. v. Morland, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 435, 19 L. ed. 772. A careful reading of the authorities will show that the supreme court in denying a lien unless there is a local statute was alluding simply to the implied lien. Thus in The General Smith, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 438, 4 L. ed. 609, which was the first supreme court case to deny the lien on domestic vessels, Mr. Justice Story expressly says that in such case no lien is implied unless recognized by local law. So in Rodd v. Heartt, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 558, 22 L. ed. 654, Mr. Justice Bradley is evidently discussing the implied lien throughout. Both cases admit that the subject-matter is maritime and could at least give a right to libel in personam. Under the general maritime law there is no difference between foreign and domestic vessels as to supplies ordered by the owner. No implied lien arises in either case. Yet we have seen that the right of an owner to bind his vessel by express contract in case of maritime necessity in a foreign port is clear. The same reasoning allows him under similar circumstances to bind his vessel in a domestic port. His right to do so is no more dependent on a state statute than it would be for salvage, wages of seamen, or any other confessedly maritime cause of action. See a brief discussion of this question in The Underwriter, 119 Fed. 713. Even where the state gives a statutory lien, the owner can by contract create a lien depending on the contract and not on the statute. Donald v. Hewitt, 33 Ala. 534, 73 Am. Dec. 431.

existing law and not to establish any new rule.⁵⁴ It must have been intended to apply simply to the implied lien, not to liens expressly contracted for, as otherwise, if literally construed, it would give a right of procedure against a foreign vessel for supplies ordered by an owner independent of express contract for a lien. Yet the supreme court expressly holds that in such case no lien arises by implication, but may arise by express contract.⁵⁵ Under the same principle it could not have been intended to forbid the enforcement of a lien on a domestic vessel given by express contract. This rule was amended by the supreme court in 1859, leaving untouched the provision as to foreign vessels, but limiting the procedure against domestic vessels to a procedure in personam. This too must have been intended to regulate simply the implied lien and not to forbid the enforcement of express liens even on domestic vessels; for the Kalorama and Guy cases just cited⁵⁶ arose and were decided while the rule was in this form, and recognized the right of the owner to bind his vessel by express contract. This change in the rule was also declared by the supreme court to have been made on account of the conflicting and complicated provisions of the state laws. In its opinion the implied lien alone is discussed, not the right of the owner to bind his vessel by an express contract.⁵⁷ The rule remained in this form until 1872, when it was given its present form and made to read as follows: "In all suits by materialmen for supplies or repairs, or other necessities, the libellant may proceed against the ship and freight in rem, or against the master or owner alone in personam." This change has been stated by the supreme court to have been intended simply to remove all obstructions and embarrassments in the way of instituting proceedings in rem in all cases where liens exist by law, and not to create any new lien.⁵⁸ It draws no distinction between foreign and domestic vessels in express terms, creates no liens of itself, but provides a method for the enforcement of a lien for repairs or supplies, whether that lien is implied under the general maritime law or under the provisions of a local statute, or whether it is created by an express agreement therefor.

(III) CHARACTER OF OWNER'S TITLE AS AFFECTING RIGHT TO BIND VESSEL
—(A) As Between Owner and Builder. The question when title passes to a ship in process of construction depends on the same principle as that which governs any other chattel. It is a question of intent. In the absence of special agreement, title does not pass until the article is completed and delivered, although payments on account have been made.⁵⁹ Hence the builder is usually the owner adopted in America. The question is too far beyond the domain of admiralty law to justify discussion. See also The Abby Whitman, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 15; Harbeck v. The Francis A. Palmer, 11 Fed. Cas. The opinion of Mr. Justice Nelson in Udell v. The Ohio, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,322, implies that title passed as payments were made. But he cites no authorities and the above later cases must be considered as overruling it. See 34 Cent. Dig. tit. "Maritime Liens," § 4.

till completion, and he alone can create liens on the vessel. But even he cannot create a maritime lien before completion, for it has already been seen that contracts relating to the original construction of a vessel are not maritime.⁶⁰

(b) As Between Vendor and Purchaser. Here the principle is that the ostensible owner in possession is treated as the owner as regards parties dealing with him, and that the actual or record ownership in such case vests him with power to bind the vessel.⁶¹ This is true, although the purchaser holds under a conditional sale and the condition is broken. Such breach does not relate back to divest liens contracted in the meanwhile.⁶²

(c) As Between Owner and Mortgagee. This stands on practically the same footing as a conditional sale. Possession taken by the mortgagee, although under a court decree, does not divest liens contracted by the owner.⁶³

e. The Charterer—(i) POWERS IN GENERAL. Where the charterer merely hires the use of a vessel, and she is manned, supplied, and operated by the owner, he is simply a freighter and no question of his right to bind the vessel for supply liens could arise. However, numerous cases have arisen under charter-parties giving the charterer the right to operate the vessel on his own account, but requiring him either expressly or impliedly to furnish necessary supplies. In such case the charterer as such has no power to bind the ship for supplies ordered by himself, where the furnisher has knowledge or reasonable means of knowledge that he is a charterer only.⁶⁴

There are some cases holding that a charterer has power to bind the vessel, but either they turn upon special facts or must be considered as overruled. In The Lime Rock, 49 Fed. 383, the charterer was the husband of the real owner, and she accompanied him when the repairs were ordered, and did not

tion against a credit to the ship arises as if they were ordered by the owner,⁶⁵ for the charterer is at most but an owner pro hac vice, and supplies ordered by him are presumed to have been furnished upon his personal credit.⁶⁶

(III) POWERS AS AFFECTED BY MATERIALMAN'S KNOWLEDGE OF CHARTER. It has been held that a vessel is not bound for necessities ordered by the charterer, even though the materialman had no actual or constructive knowledge that the vessel was under charter. This is on the theory that the only person having any implied power to bind the vessel as against the owner is the master, that the charterer is not the agent of the owners for the purpose, and that materialmen deal with him at their peril.⁶⁷ But the preponderance of authority has only gone to the extent of holding that the vessel is not bound if the materialman had knowledge, or means of knowledge, of the fact that the vessel was under charter.⁶⁸ Actual knowledge of the charter undoubtedly defeats any claim for a lien.⁶⁹ And it is equally clear that if the materialman could ascertain the facts by inquiry, he

No. 6,082a, 5 Hughes 474; and The Lucia B. Ives, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,590, 10 Ben. 660, are inconsistent with the later cases. In The Bombay, 38 Fed. 512 [affirmed in 38 Fed. 863], the supplies were ordered by the charterer. The main question discussed was whether the charter was a demise of the vessel. The court held that it was, and then held the vessel bound for the supplies, assuming that the vessel was bound if the supplies were received by the master on board, although ordered by the charterer. The materialman did not know of the charter and made no inquiries. The case was decided eight years before the Kate and Valencia cases, cited above, and is hardly consistent with them.

English and Canadian Acts.—Under the English Admiralty Act of 1861 there is no admiralty right of procedure in rem for necessities, if there is an owner domiciled in England or Wales. Under the Colonial Courts Admiralty Act of 1890 and the Canada Admiralty Act of 1891, the "owner" in the English act is held to mean "registered owner," and "Canada" must be understood instead of "England or Wales." Hence an action in rem will not lie for goods ordered by a charterer, he not being a registered owner. The Ship Garden City, 7 Can. Exch. 34, 94.

Special agent of charterer.—This limitation of the charterer's power to bind the vessel applies with yet more force to his special agent, as such agent has no implied powers like those of the master, and persons dealing with him are put upon inquiry as to his powers. This is well settled as to supplies ordered by ship-brokers or consignees. The Burton, 84 Fed. 998; The Suliotte, 23 Fed. 919; The Joseph Cunard, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,535, Olcott 120.

The assignee of a surety on a bond given by the charterer to the owner to perform the conditions of the charter-party, including the condition against debts for supplies, cannot assert a lien for coal furnished the vessel.

No. 6,492, Newb. Adm. 308. See 34 Cent. Dig. tit. "Maritime Liens," § 12. In The Robert Dollar, 115 Fed. 218, the district court held that the charterer, having obtained necessary supplies on the credit of the ship, cannot set up this violation of its contract with the owner to defeat the lien. But the court in reversing it (116 Fed. 600, 54 C. C. A. 56) held that the charterer could come in and defend the case by denying the lien. As the question at issue was whether credit was actually given to the ship or to the party ordering the supplies, it is difficult to understand why the latter cannot plead such a defense. When an owner orders supplies, he is not estopped from contending that they were ordered on his personal credit; and the charterer ought not to be subject to a more stringent rule.

cannot acquire a lien by shutting his eyes and forbearing from inquiry.⁷⁰ Under some circumstances the owner, by holding out the charterer as having power to bind the vessel, might be estopped from denying such right. But this question usually arises where the charterer is also the master, and turns rather upon the powers of a master than upon any question of the powers of a charterer.⁷¹ And although the supreme court in the two recent cases⁷² so often cited in this connection has carefully limited itself to the actual question before it, which involved only the powers of a charterer where the materialman had means of knowledge, it is believed that the law when necessarily presented to the court for decision will be settled against the right of a charterer to bind the vessel for supplies ordered by him and not by the master, even when the materialman is ignorant of the existence of a charter.⁷³

(iv) CHARTER-PARTY AS AFFECTING IMPLIED POWERS OF MASTER. As the master has the implied power in case of maritime necessity to bind the vessel under the conditions heretofore discussed,⁷⁴ it follows that, when the supplies are ordered by him and not by the charterer, and the materialman has no actual or constructive knowledge that there is any limitation upon his powers as master, the vessel is bound. But, if the materialman has such knowledge or means of knowledge, the implied powers of the master cease, and the attempt of a materialman to create a lien upon the vessel originating in such fraud of the master upon the owner or in such breach of his duty to the owner would not be upheld by the courts.⁷⁵

(v) CHARTERER'S POWER UNDER LOCAL STATUTES. The scope of state statutes in shifting the presumption of credit and the method in which they are construed have already been discussed in connection with the power of the master to bind domestic vessels. It has been shown that under the weight of authority these statutes are not construed literally, but the general limitations of marine law must be considered as qualifying them, as for instance the principle that there must have been an actual credit to the vessel.⁷⁶ Under the same principle, as a Loughran, 12 App. Cas. (D. C.) 430, where a bank advanced money to a corporation which chartered the vessel, and the treasurer of the corporation was the cashier of the bank, it was held that his knowledge was the knowledge of the bank and hence that the latter had no lien for its advances.

Knowledge of the existence of a charter puts on the materialman the burden of ascertaining its terms, and whether the charterer or his agents have power to bind the ship. The Stroma, 53 Fed. 281, 3 C. C. A. 530 [affirming 41 Fed. 599]; Neill v. The Francis, 21 Fed. 921; Beinecke v. The Secret, 3 Fed. 665.

73. This for the reason that the master is the only person known to marine law as having power to create implied liens. The very fact that supplies are ordered by any one else makes a prima facie case against an intent to charge the vessel and ought to put the materialman on inquiry as to the extent of such person's powers.

It cites The Monsoon, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,716, 1 Sprague 37, as authority. See the comments of Judge Lowell on this case in The Underwriter, 119 Fed. 713, 763. The Neversink, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 12,079 [affirmed in 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,133, 5 Blatchf. 539], the charterer was also master, and there is nothing to show that the materialman had any actual or constructive knowledge of the charter. See also supra, VII, B, 4, a, (I), (A), (C).

charterer is not an agent known to general marine law, he has no power as such to bind a foreign vessel at all, even in a port where there is a local statute, as such statutes do not apply to foreign vessels under such circumstances.⁷⁷ As to domestic vessels, the doctrine limiting the powers of the master ought to apply with yet stronger force to a charterer. Even a state statute, no matter how broad its terms, would hardly be construed to give him the power to bind a domestic vessel where credit was not in fact given to the vessel, or where the charter-party expressly limited his power to bind the vessel and the materialman had actual or constructive knowledge of such limitation.⁷⁸

d. The Ship's Agent. Where the ship's agent is held out by the owner under his general course of dealing as having authority to purchase supplies for the ship, he will bind the ship, but he has no implied authority like that of the master.⁷⁹ Hence any one acting as agent for the ship or the owners does not bind the ship unless he has special authority, either express or inferred from previous course of dealing or proved as any agency is proved.⁸⁰

e. Persons Not in Privity — (i) GENERAL PRINCIPLE. As to foreign vessels, it is settled by a recent decision of the supreme court that persons not in privity are not agents for the purpose of binding the vessel, and cannot be made so by state statute.⁸¹

(ii) EFFECT OF LOCAL STATUTES. The doctrine as to the effect of such statutes, often repeated in previous connections, is that they cannot annex a maritime lien to anything that is not a maritime contract. And they are construed as far as possible as subject to the qualifications of the general maritime

78. This follows necessarily from The Kate, 164 U. S. 458, 17 S. Ct. 135, 41 L. ed. 512 [affirming 56 Fed. 614], decided Nov. 30, 1896. There the New York statute (set out in full in the opinion) gave a lien for any debt "contracted by the master, owner, charterer, builder or consignee of any ship or vessel, or the agent of either of them within this State." Yet the supreme court held that this could not be construed to give a lien for coal ordered by the charterer, when the materialman had actual or constructive knowledge that the charter-party limited his powers. In The Alvira, 63 Fed. 144, the facts showed that, although the supplies were contracted by the charterer, the materialman did not know of the charter and the owners on the other hand did know of the work that was being done upon the vessel and forbore to inform the materialman of the charter. The opinion is interesting as showing how far liens on domestic vessels under local statutes are limited and qualified by the general principles of marine law. In The Samuel Marshall, 54 Fed. 396, 4 C. C. A. 385 [affirming 49 Fed. 754], the court had under consideration a claim of lien asserted under the Michigan statute which made all craft over five tons burden "subject to a lien . . . for all debts contracted by the owner or part owner, master, clerk, agent, steward of such craft." The supplies were ordered by the master. The vessel was under charter and the materialmen knew it. They contended, however, that the language of the local statute was broad enough to give them a lien regardless of this fact. But the court held that the limitations of the maritime law

If a state can create any lien at all contrary to the limitations of marine law, it would be a state statutory lien, not a maritime lien. Lawrenceburgh Ferryboat v. Smith, 7 Ind. 520.

The inclination is to construe such statutes against the power of a charterer to bind the vessel. Guffey v. Alaska, etc., Steamship Co., 130 Fed. 271, 64 L. ed. 517. But the Tennessee statute is construed by the court of last resort of that state to bind the boat for supplies ordered for the use of the lessee. Greenlaw v. Potter, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 390.

law so as to assimilate them to liens on foreign vessels.⁸² Hence these state statutes are rigidly construed whenever they seem intended to modify as to domestic vessels the principles regulating liens on foreign vessels.⁸³ But when their language is so clear as to force upon the court the conclusion that they were intended to create a lien in favor of subcontractors and regardless of all considerations of privity, the question still remains whether they will have such effect in the admiralty courts. That the states can create such liens on domestic

2 Curt. 416]. Hence a trespasser or intruder who does work upon a vessel acquires no lien therefor. The City of Salem, 10 Fed. 843, 7 Sawy. 477; Glover v. Ames, 8 Fed. 351; The Augusta, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 647. But even a trespasser or intruder may bind a vessel if the owners knowing of his work stand by and say nothing. This is illustrated by The Superior, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,627, 5 Sawy. 346. There a vessel was stolen from the custody of a sheriff who held her under an attachment, and the party thus acquiring possession was entered on her papers as master. He contracted maritime liens. The sheriff recovered possession, paid the liens, and took assignments. Then the vessel was sold under the attachment. The sheriff then attempted to assert the liens against the purchaser. The court held that they might have been asserted by the original materialmen against the owners, but could not be asserted by the sheriff against the purchaser at his own sale. In The City of Salem, and The Augusta, cited supra, Judge Deady held that the mere act of employing a contractor was holding him out by the owners as having authority, and that his employees had a lien against the vessel under such circumstances, irrespective of the state of accounts between the owner and contractor. The general doctrine as to the owners being estopped by their course of conduct from denying an agency is clear; but this application of it is not sustainable. Under general legal principles a contractor is not an agent, and merely seeing his employees at work is certainly a far-stretched application of the doctrine. The Roanoke, opinion cited supra, practically overrules this. In The Sappho, 89 Fed. 366, Judge Brawley held that no power existed in a contractor to bind a vessel for work ordered by him, and that a federal inspector of hulls had no such power. The case was reversed in 94 Fed. 545, 36 C. C. A. 395, not on these points, but on the facts, the appellate court holding that the owners had authorized the employment. In The Wandrahm, 67 Fed. 358, 14 C. C. A. 414 [affirming 62 Fed. 935], it was held that in the absence of anything to show an apparent agency the materialman is put upon inquiry and cannot assert a lien for supplies or machinery furnished upon the order of one who was practically a contractor. It is impossible to ascertain from the brief report of The Emma V., 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,468, 2 Hask. 374, by whom the work was ordered. It is clear that it was not ordered by the contractor. In The Whitaker, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,524, 1 Sprague 229, Judge Sprague held, as to a claim asserted by subcontractors against a vessel, that a contractor could not bind the vessel to such subcontractors. In The Marquette, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,101, Brown Adm. 364, Judge Longyear made the same ruling. In Squire v. One Hundred Tons of Iron, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,270, 2 Ben. 21, Judge Blatchford made the same ruling as against a claim asserted by one who had hired certain material to parties who were endeavoring to save the vessel. These last three cases were all for services in the nature of salvage, but the principle is the same. See also Southwick v. The Packet Boat Clyde, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 148; Ames v. Swett, 33 Me. 479; Burst v. Jackson, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 219; Hubbell v. Denison, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 181.

82. See supra, VII, B, 4, a, (II), text and note 44; VII, B, 4, b, (II), (A), note 51. Hence in Smith v. The Eastern Railroad, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,039, 1 Curt. 253, Mr. Justice Curtis construed the Massachusetts act of May 9, 1848, giving a lien in broad terms for any debt contracted in connection with necessities for a vessel as not intended to give a lien to a subcontractor after the principal contractor had been paid, but as designed simply to assimilate liens on domestic and foreign vessels. In Woolly v. The Peruvian, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,031, 3 Ware 154, the later Massachusetts act of 1855, enlarging that of 1848 above referred to, was construed by Judge Ware as creating a lien only for work directly contributing to the construction of a ship and not for mere collateral work. The decision was before the law had been settled against the maritime character of construction work. In Bates v. Emery, 134 Mass. 186, a lien in favor of a sail-maker under the state law was denied when the debt was contracted by a party who had an agreement with the owner to furnish the sails and who ordered them from the sail-maker, as such party was not an agent of the owner, or a contractor in the sense of the statute.

Maine statute.—In Purinton v. Hull of a New Ship, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,473, 1 Ware 556, Judge Ware, although holding that these acts must be strictly construed, felt constrained by the explicit terms of the Maine act then in force to uphold a lien in favor of a subcontractor, and Mr. Justice Curtis, who decided Smith v. The Eastern Railroad, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,039, 1 Curt. 253, reluctantly followed him. The same construction was given to the act by the state court, even where the main contractor had been fully paid. Atwood v. Williams, 40 Me. 409.

vessels enforceable in their own courts on the assumption that they are non-maritime is settled.⁸⁴ But the question is, whether they are so far maritime as to be cognizable by an admiralty court. The decisions of the inferior courts⁸⁵ in which some of these statutes were applied in the admiralty courts were rendered before the Roanoke case⁸⁶ was decided. That was a case where a state statute attempted to make a contractor an agent of the owner for the purpose of binding his ship even in a foreign port, and the court, cautiously limiting its opinion to the case before it, held that it could not be done. But the reasoning of the opinion is equally decisive against an attempt to create such a lien against a domestic vessel. It holds that the proper marine agent of a ship is the master, and that a contractor as such is unknown to maritime law. Now it has been seen that a state can annex a maritime lien only to a contract maritime by nature. It is difficult to see how a contract can be maritime by nature which is made by a person acting in a capacity unknown to the maritime law, as for instance, a contractor; and which in fact is not a contract at all as respects the vessel or owner, for want of privity. Hence such a cause of action, not being maritime, ought not to be enforceable in the admiralty court, even against a domestic vessel. If a state can give such a lien to a subcontractor at all, it can give it to him, no matter how remote from the main contractor, as that would be a mere question of degree. For instance not only the dealer from whom the lumber was bought but the mill from which he bought it, the man from whom the mill bought the logs and the workmen who cut them could by a broadly worded state statute be made maritime lienors and the vessel could be made to pay for the same service in indefinite succession.

5. NECESSITY OF DELIVERY TO SHIP — a. Independent of Statute. The basis of

The Mississippi statute, however, is construed to give no lien for work ordered by an independent contractor, as he is not the agent of the owner. Valverde v. Spottswood, 77 Miss. 912, 28 So. 720.

The Missouri act in force in 1855 is construed not to give a lien for work ordered by one not representing the owner. Bersie v. The Shenandoah, 21 Mo. 18; Childs v. The Brunette, 19 Mo. 518.

The New York statute in terms gives a lien only for debts contracted by the master, owner, charterer, builder, or consignee or the agent of either of them. The strict construction put upon this statute in The Kate, 164 U. S. 458, 17 S. Ct. 135, 41 L. ed. 512, has already been mentioned (see supra, VII, B, 3, c, (v), note 78). An independent contractor has no authority to bind the vessel under the terms of this act. The Idle-hour, 84 Fed. 358, 28 C. C. A. 426; Fralick v. Betts, 13 Hun 632. In cases decided before construction was held to be non-maritime, the builder was held to create a lien for material ordered by him. Concklin v. The Sylvan Shore, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,090; Egleston v. The Agnes, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,308. One who contracts directly with the owner is a builder under the state decisions. King v. Greenway, 71 N. Y. 413; Kenyon v. Covert, 7 N. Y. Suppl. 34. Whatever may be the effect of these decisions as to the right of enforcing a state lien on a non-maritime cause of action in the state courts, they are difficult if not impossible to reconcile with The Kate, supra, when the attempt is made to make them cover maritime causes of action.

[VII, B, 4, e, (ii)]

The Ohio act was construed in an old case decided in 1840 to give a lien to subcontractors. Webster v. The Andes, 18 Ohio 187.

Pennsylvania acts.—Under the old Pennsylvania act of March 27, 1784, Judge Hopkinson held that workmen of a contractor acquired no lien. Harper v. The New Brig, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,090, Gilp. 536. But under the later act of April 20, 1858, a contractor was entitled to a lien for the balance due him. Petrie v. The Coal Bluff No. 2, 3 Fed. 531; The Dictator v. Heath, 56 Pa. St. 290.

The Rhode Island act was held to give no lien for services of an inspector upon a dredge, and such services were held to be non-maritime. The Saratoga, 100 Fed. 480.

Virginia acts.—The Virginia Mechanic's Lien Law was construed not to apply to a vessel under construction, such not being a "building" under the terms of the law. Stewart v. Gorgoza, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,428, 3 Hughes 459. The Virginia statute regulating liens on vessels, however, is found in the attachment laws of the state, not in the mechanic's lien laws. Va. Code (1887), § 2963.

The Washington statute, although it purports to make a contractor an agent of the owner for the purpose of binding the vessel, is construed to give no lien for materials furnished generally and not for any particular ship. Callahan v. Aetna Indemnity Co., 33 Wash. 583, 74 Pac. 693.

a lien for necessities is a benefit rendered the vessel. Hence, in order for such lien to arise, the necessities must be either delivered on board the vessel or brought into immediate relations to her, as by being delivered on the wharf or into the custody of someone authorized to receive them. No lien attaches to a breach of a contract to furnish supplies.⁸⁷ This requirement of delivery does not mean that the materialman must see to their actual incorporation into the vessel or actual use upon the vessel.⁸⁸

b. Under Local Statutes. As a contract to furnish supplies is maritime and at least enforceable in personam, it follows under principles often discussed in previous connections that a local statute can add the remedy in rem, even for necessities not delivered. The question whether the special statute in question does this is a question of construction in each case.⁸⁹

6. STEPS NECESSARY TO PERFECT OR PRESERVE LIEN — a. Under General Maritime Law. The previous discussion has shown in many connections that the only thing necessary to create a lien under the general maritime law is the rendition of the service to the vessel or bringing her into such relations with any one as to create a cause of action against her.⁹⁰ As to liens of materialmen, the only thing necessary under the general maritime law is to furnish the necessities on the order of someone having power to bind the vessel, on the credit of the vessel, under an apparent necessity.⁹¹ Hence as to liens under the general maritime law, there are no requirements as to recording or as to proceeding within any given time. And the better opinion is that local statutes cannot make such provisions apply to foreign vessels.⁹²

b. Under State Statutes — (1) NECESSITY OF COMPLIANCE WITH REQUIREMENTS. As there is no implied lien on a domestic vessel independent of statute,⁹³ it follows that a state in conferring such a lien has as included in such power the

The Illinois act is construed to require the use of the supplies for the vessel or someone performing a service for her benefit. Hence where they were ordered and used by an owner living upon it while tied up to the dock for the winter, a lien was denied. The Gordon Campbell, 131 Fed. 963.

The Maine act contemplates an actual furnishing of the materials to the vessel, but not necessarily its incorporation into the vessel. Mehan v. Thompson, 71 Me. 492;

Fuller v. Nickerson, 69 Me. 228. The older act required their incorporation into the vessel. Perkins v. Pike, 42 Me. 141, 66 Am. Dec. 267; Taggard v. Buckmore, 42 Me. 77; The Kiersage, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,762, 2 Curt. 421 [reversing 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,634, 1 Ware 546].

Massachusetts.—In The Antarctic, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 479, 1 Sprague 206, Judge Sprague held that the Massachusetts act of 1848 contemplated that the articles should be actually used in the ship. The Massachusetts supreme court held the same way. Young v. The Orpheus, 119 Mass. 179; Barstow v. Robinson, 2 Allen 605.

New York.—In Brown v. The Alida, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,989, it was held that the New York act of 1855 contemplated that the vessel should actually receive the benefit of the articles before a lien arises. This also is the construction placed upon the act by the state courts. Veltman v. Thompson, 3 N. Y. 438; Hiscox v. Harbeck, 2 Bosw. 506; Phillips v. Wright, 5 Sandf. 342.

The Ohio act also contemplates an actual use of the materials by the vessel. The Muskegan v. Moss, 7 Ohio St. 377.

The Pennsylvania statute creates no lien unless the articles are actually or constructively delivered. Hays v. James Rees, etc., Co., 93 Fed. 984, 36 C. C. A. 45; Dalzell v. The Daniel Kaine, 31 Fed. 746.

On the other hand the Illinois act⁹⁸ is construed to give the lien by force of the statute, independent of a seizure under attachment.⁹⁹ And under the limitation provided in the act the lien remains in force for the period of three months named in the act after the indebtedness becomes due, irrespective of proceedings to enforce subsequent liens.¹

(2) TIME OF FILING SPECIFICATION. Under the older forms of the statute the specifications were required to be filed within a given time after the vessel left the port at which the debt was contracted; and there were a number of decisions construing the statute in this form.²⁶ But the Laws of 1904²⁷ substitute a provision that the lien must be filed within thirty days after the debt is contracted, so that these old decisions have lost their importance. The qualification in the older and present form of the act prescribing a different time of filing as to vessels navigating the western and northwestern lakes does not apply to vessels making occasional short trips into the lakes, or to vessels navigating the canal and other tributaries of the lakes.²⁸

(3) VESTING OF LIEN. The lien vests from the rendition of the service, even though the vessel is not then complete.²⁹ And it continues even without any specification until the expiration of the time allowed for filing it.³⁰ Thereafter, if the specification is properly filed, it continues till the expiration of the period allowed for enforcement, which period is binding on the lien claimant.³¹

The debt was "contracted" in the county where the services were rendered. Brown v. The Alida, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,989; Crawford v. Collins, 30 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 398.

Filing before departure.—As the specifications had to be filed within a given time after the vessel's departure, they were invalid if filed before departure. Squires v. Abbott, 61 N. Y. 530. It was not necessary to file any specification where the vessel had not left the port. The Julia L. Sherwood, 14 Fed. 590. Where process to enforce the lien is issued and served before the departure of the vessel from port, the filing of specifications was not necessary. The Henry Trobridge, 11 Fed. Cas. (K) Ohio. The Ohio statute³² is an act creating a lien by its own terms, and requires none of the steps prescribed by the Mechanic's Lien Law of the state.³³

(L) Oregon. The Oregon act³⁴ prescribes elaborate provisions for enforcement but requires no record of the lien. The lien, however, is lost if not enforced within the statutory period.³⁵

(M) Pennsylvania. The act of April 20, 1858,³⁶ gives a lien and limits the same to two years from the date of the last item of the account. This applies to a continuous account, and two separate accounts cannot be linked together to preserve the lien.³⁷

(N) Tennessee. The Tennessee statute³⁸ gives a lien, without any requirements as to recording, to continue for ninety days from the completion of the work or furnishing of the materials.³⁹

(O) Washington. The Washington act⁴⁰ requires no recording and is construed by the state court to give a lien to the owner of the materials for such as were furnished for the construction of the vessel and intended for her.⁴¹

(P) Wisconsin. The Wisconsin act⁴² is construed to give a right of attachment for causes of action arising out of the state, as well as within it.⁴³

VIII. LOSS OF LIEN.

A. By Waiver—1. IN GENERAL. A lien once vested may be lost in various ways. One of the most common is by a waiver of it. But the burden is on the party asserting such waiver to prove it, as this would be a matter of defense.⁴⁴ Such a waiver may be either by express agreement,⁴⁵ or implied from the conduct of the parties or other circumstances.⁴⁶

2. BY EXPRESS AGREEMENT. The right to waive by express agreement is so obvious as to go without saying, the only question in a given case being whether such agreement has actually been made.⁴⁷

3. IMPLIED FROM ACTS INCONSISTENT WITH LIEN—a. Giving Credit—(1) IN GENERAL. The mere allowance of credit for a maritime service unaccompanied by other acts inconsistent with an intention to claim a lien is not a waiver of the lien, the necessity for credit being in fact one of the essentials for the vesting of a lien.⁴⁸ But the allowance of credit may be connected with other circumstances negating the existence of a lien; and in such case the lien would be held to be waived. For example, many local statutes require court proceedings to enforce the lien within a given time. In such case the extension of credit beyond the statutory period would constitute a waiver of the lien.⁴⁹

(n) TAKING NOTE OR BILL. This is governed by the same principle as the extension of credit in general. The mere giving and receiving of a note, draft, or bill of exchange is not inconsistent with the existence of a lien, nor a waiver of it, in the absence of other circumstances showing an intention to waive the lien.⁵⁰ The principle applies equally to statutory liens on domestic vessels.⁵¹ Nor is the principle altered by the fact that the note is the note of a third person, not the note of the original debtor.⁵² The fact that the creditor, on receiving the note,

No. 8,310, 2 Gall. 483. This latter case, however, does not turn upon the giving of credit at all, and the later decisions of Justice Story announce the doctrine of the text. No. 14,342, 3 Woods 182, Mr. Justice Woods held that taking the note of a third party was a novation of the debt, receipted the original account in full, or receipted it as "paid by note" is not a waiver of the lien, but is subject to explanation.⁵³ But a maritime creditor who has taken a note for his account and who proceeds on his lien must produce such note in court for cancellation, if the property sells for enough to pay the lien in full, or for the indorsing of a proper credit if it does not.⁵⁴ The reason of this requirement is the protection of the debtor against an assertion of the note in the hands of an innocent third party.⁵⁵

b. Delay in Asserting Lien—(i) AS BETWEEN ORIGINAL PARTIES. General statutes of limitation are not binding on the admiralty when there is a question of enforcing a lien arising under the general maritime law. But admiralty has its rules on the subject, the general principle being that such a lien must be enforced within a reasonable time, depending on the equitable circumstances of each case. Hence, as between the original parties, a lien will survive much longer than where interests of third parties have intervened.⁵⁶ If there has been reasonable diligence in enforcement, a libel would be entertained after the lapse of time named in a statute of limitations.⁵⁷ But where there are no exceptional circumstances calling for special equitable consideration, an admiralty court would incline to follow the state statutes of limitation by analogy.⁵⁸ Where, however, the question arises on a domestic lien under a state statute the special limitation named in that is binding;⁵⁹ but if the local statute does not contain a limit of time for basing his ruling on Louisiana and Massachusetts cases. In Taylor v. The Commonwealth, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,787, Mr. Justice Miller held that taking a note with an indorser was a waiver. And in the old case of O'Hara v. The Mary, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,467, Bee 100, it is intimated that taking a draft on the owner evidenced an intent to look to his personal security alone. On the other hand in The Chusan, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,717, 2 Story 455, Mr. Justice Story held that taking a note of one of the owners did not constitute such waiver. The doctrine stated in the text seems best supported by principle and authority.

The New York decisions hold that taking a note is presumptively a waiver. Hall v. Stevens, 116 N. Y. 201, 22 N. E. 374, 5 L. R. A. 802; Noel v. Murray, 13 N. Y. 167.

Maine and Massachusetts doctrine.—In Carter v. The Byzantium, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,473, 1 Cliff. 1, Mr. Justice Clifford discusses this doctrine in the light of the Maine and Massachusetts decisions. In these states contrary to the common-law rule and the preponderance of authority elsewhere, taking negotiable paper is presumptively a waiver of the lien, on the theory that a subsequent holder of such paper might make the debtor pay a second time. He holds, however, that even in these states such waiver is only prima facie and may be explained, and that the danger of a second payment may be prevented by requiring the production of the note in court. See also Page v. Hubbard, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,663, 1 Sprague 335, for a discussion of the Massachusetts doctrine by Judge Sprague.

enforcement, liens arising thereunder depend in this respect on the same principles as liens under the general maritime law.⁶⁰ Under some circumstances there may be special equities in favor of the vessel owner which would shorten the time of enforcement as to him, and cause him to be treated not as one of the original parties, but as a third party.⁶¹ A long absence of the vessel from the country will excuse delay in enforcement.⁶²

(II) AS AGAINST SUBSEQUENTLY ACQUIRED INTERESTS—(A) Innocent Purchaser. A much shorter period will bar a maritime lien when the vessel has passed into the hands of an innocent purchaser where there has been reasonable opportunity to enforce it. Such liens being secret, the reasonable diligence required as against a purchaser is more rigid than that required as between the original parties.⁶³ Under such circumstances a lien not enforced after reasonable opportunity is waived as against an innocent purchaser.⁶⁴ In fact some cases hold that the lien must be enforced before the beginning of a second voyage.⁶⁵ But even as against an innocent purchaser the lien is not lost by mere lapse of time. There must be an element of negligence on the part of the lien claimant, such as failure to exercise a reasonable opportunity of enforcement. If the vessel has during the interval been out of his reach and he acts upon the first opportunity after she comes within his reach the lien is not waived.⁶⁶ In view of the increased facilities of modern communication, the lien claimant does not discharge the obligation of diligence resting upon him by waiting for the vessel to return to the jurisdiction where the lien was contracted. He should follow her into neighboring districts or states or even abroad, if her home port is abroad.⁶⁷ On the Great Lakes the rule is established that a lien claimant must proceed during the current season of navigation or at the first opportunity thereafter.⁶⁸ The fact that the purchaser has a covenant of warranty from his vendor does not debar him from the right of setting up this defense as against a lien claimant, nor remit him to a suit against the vendor on his covenant.⁶⁹ But this doctrine of waiver or laches on behalf of the lien claimant can be invoked by a purchaser only where he is ignorant of the lien and has no such means of knowledge as to put him on inquiry. A purchaser having actual or constructive knowledge of the lien stands in no better position than his vendor.⁷⁰

(b) Mortgages A prior mortgagee or mortgagee for an antecedent indebtedness has no greater equity as against a lien claimant than the owner. In fact a prior mortgagee is practically an owner as far as the lien of a lien claimant is concerned, for the theory of a maritime lien based on contract is a benefit conferred on the res; and it is as much the interest of the mortgagee as the owner that services tending to the preservation of the res be recognized.⁷¹ But a subsequent mortgagee comes under the same principle as an innocent purchaser. In fact he is an innocent purchaser under the same circumstances and conditions as those governing the holder of a bill of sale.⁷²

(c) Later Lienor. The relative rank of lienors is rather a question of priority than of waiver. The original admiralty rule is that necessities furnished for a late voyage rank those for a prior voyage, as contributing more directly to the preservation of the res.⁷³ But this rule cannot be applied as among frequent short voyages and overlapping running accounts. On the lakes and canals the liens are classified by seasons, the later season being preferred.⁷⁴ In New York harbor work, claims less than forty days old are preferred.⁷⁵ Various periods

The lien claimant has his remedy in personam left against the owner, although he has waived his remedy against the property in the hands of the purchaser. It is as easy for him to sue the owner as it is for the purchaser on the warranty. And the lien claimant having rested on his rights, is the one on whom the burden of a suit against a solvent owner or the risks of a suit against an insolvent owner should fall.

70. An unsecured creditor who takes a vessel to save a debt without inquiry is not an innocent purchaser. The Alfred J. Murray, 60 Fed. 926 [affirmed in 63 Fed. 270, 11 C. C. depending on special circumstances have been fixed in different decisions as dividing later and earlier liens in regard to rank.⁷⁶

c. Surrendering Possession. One of the striking attributes of the maritime lien is that it is not dependent on possession and follows the res into other hands; the only exception being the lien of the vessel owner on the cargo for freight.⁷⁷ Hence a maritime lien is not lost by the mere surrender of possession. But care must be taken to distinguish this from the common-law lien of a shipwright, which is lost by surrendering possession.⁷⁸

d. Permitting Departure of Vessel. As a general maritime lien does not depend on possession, and is based on the necessity of credit, permitting the vessel to depart is not of itself a waiver of such lien.⁷⁹ But some of the local statutes require certain action on the part of the lien claimant before the vessel is allowed to leave. In such cases the failure of the creditor to take such action is a waiver of the lien.⁸⁰ Hence, where such statutes provide that such lien shall cease on the departure of the vessel from the state, or be enforced before she leaves the state, or use similar phraseology, a departure of the vessel in regular course of business ends the lien.⁸¹ But a surreptitious departure not in the line of business and without the knowledge of the materialman will not be permitted to defeat the lien.⁸² And, independent of any intentional fraud, a shifting of the vessel during the work, a trial trip, a resort to the port of another state from stress of weather or circumstances, or acts of this nature not in the ordinary course of business are not departures.⁸³

e. Taking Collateral Security. Whether the taking of additional and different security is a waiver of a maritime lien is a question of intent turning on the circumstances of the particular case. As the maritime lien for necessities is an implied lien, the proof of an express agreement to take some other security would go far toward negating the existing of an implied lien.⁸⁴ Taking a mortgage

In The Thomas Sherlock, 22 Fed. 253, Judge Sage, although declining to lay down any fixed rule, drew the line as between claims less than six months old, and those more than six months old. In The Nellie Bloomfield, 27 Fed. 524, a materialman's claim was preferred to that of a mariner who had postponed action for over two years.

84. See cases cited infra, this note.

Where the contract is made with the owner, the presumption is against an implied lien anyhow, and hence where an additional security is contracted for with the owner and nothing is said about a maritime lien the presumption of waiver is irresistible.

on a vessel unaccompanied by other circumstances, such as permitting it to run too long a time, is not inconsistent with the existence of a maritime lien, according to the great weight of authority.⁸⁵ But taking a mortgage accompanied by other acts inconsistent with the lien will be a waiver of it.⁸⁶

f. Instituting Suit in Non-Marine Forum. A holder of a maritime lien who seeks his remedy, not by an action in rem, but by resort to some other form of action and pursues his remedy so far as to result in a sale of the vessel, is prevented by obvious principles of justice from subsequently asserting any lien against the vessel.⁸⁷ So the assertion of a claim in a state court and its reduction to judgment is a merger of the claim in the judgment and a waiver of any maritime claim for it.⁸⁸ But this principle does not apply to an absolutely void proceeding involving no change of possession or title.⁸⁹ However, the mere institution of a suit in another forum, which is dismissed or not pushed, constitutes no waiver.⁹⁰

g. Other Inconsistent Acts. It may be stated in general that a party cannot occupy inconsistent positions, and cannot assert a maritime lien after having

86. In The Nebraska, 69 Fed. 1009, 17 C. C. A. 94 [affirming 61 Fed. 514], the mortgage extended the time beyond the period allowed on the lakes for enforcing maritime claims, and this fact was held to constitute a waiver, although the notes secured by the mortgage contained an express reservation of the lien. In The Wexford, 7 Fed. 674, the allowance of a two years' credit by the mortgage was held a waiver, although the judge intimated that the mere taking of the mortgage might have the same effect. In Kornegay v. Styron, 105 N. C. 14, 11 S. E. 153, a lien claimant who consented to a sale and agreed to accept notes secured by mortgage was held estopped from asserting his lien against an innocent purchaser, although the notes were actually not executed. There is a dictum in The Ann C. Pratt, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 409, 1 Curt. 340, to the effect that taking a mortgage is a waiver. It is based on the following decisions: Fish v. Howland, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 20; Boos v. Ewing, 17 Ohio 500, 49 Am. Dec. 478; Manly v. Slason, 21 Vt. 271, 52 Am. Dec. 60; Little v. Brown, 2 Leigh (Va.) 353; Case of an Hostler, Yelv. 66. Of these the Ohio case at least does not bear out the principle for which it is cited. See The D. B. Steelman, 48 Fed. 580, for a discussion of this doctrine.

Taking a mortgage on other property and on long time if expressly understood as collateral security only is not a waiver. The Theodore Perry, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,879.

Nor does taking the vessel's papers in the creditor's name, with an express reservation of a lien, constitute a waiver. Stewart v. Rogers, 19 Md. 98.

In The Cerro Gordo, 54 Fed. 391, a seaman sued a part-owner in a state court and sold his interest on execution, subject to a mortgage. It was held that he could still proceed in admiralty for an unsatisfied balance against one who subsequently purchased the mortgage and the remaining interest in the vessel. Sed quære. adopted a course of conduct or having been party to a proceeding in a capacity in conflict with the retention of such a lien.⁹¹

B. By Destruction of Vessel. The total destruction of a vessel extinguishes a maritime lien, as there is no longer any res to which it can attach. But if any part is saved or can be reached, the lien still holds to such part.⁹²

C. By Forfeiture of Vessel—1. LIENS CREATED PRIOR TO FORFEITURE. A forfeiture for violation of a statute does not affect liens accrued prior to the illegal act.⁹³

2. LIENS CONCURRENT WITH OR SUBSEQUENT TO FORFEITURE. Here too the forfeiture does not affect the lien if the party claiming it was innocent of any participation in the illegal act.⁹⁴

D. By Judicial Sale of Vessel—1. BY ADMIRALTY PROCEEDINGS IN REM. It is the basis of admiralty law that the ship is itself treated as a responsible thing and hence that a libel in rem is against the ship as such regardless of questions of ownership.⁹⁵ It follows from this principle that an admiralty proceeding in rem when carried to a sale sells the thing itself, and hence passes to the purchaser a good title to the thing itself, free from all prior liens, no matter what their rank may be as among each other or as against the creditor who put in motion the machinery of the admiralty court.⁹⁶ But this doctrine applies only to admiralty

Illustrations.—Hence a party who claims part of the res as owner and obtains possession of it on bond cannot then set up a maritime lien against the res and claim to share in the bond. Hawgood, etc., Transit Co. v. Dingman, 93 Fed. 1011, 36 C. C. A. 627. So repairs done while in possession of a vessel under claim of ownership do not give rise to a lien. Glover v. Ames, 8 Fed. 351. So a builder who has agreed to build and deliver the boat by a certain date and has done so, cannot, where the boat has passed into possession of a third party, proceed against it to assert a lien under a state statute which does not keep his lien alive as against others than the original parties. Canal-Boat Etna v. Treat, 15 Ohio 585.

Taking a bottomry bond is a waiver of the lien, as it substitutes an express lien for an implied one. The Ann C. Pratt, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 409, 1 Curt. 340 [affirmed in 18 How. 63, 15 L. ed. 267]. In this case the bond was held void for fraud, and that was the main ground of the decision, but there is a strong intimation that even a valid bond is inconsistent with the implied lien.

But a credit to the wrong account is not a waiver of the lien and may be corrected. Roxbury v. The Lotta, 65 Fed. 319.

proceedings in rem, not to every proceeding in an admiralty court, as is manifest from the reasons on which it is based. A proceeding not in rem in which the vessel is involved as incident to questions of ownership or possession does not, although consummated by sale, divest all liens, for in such cases maritime claimants would have no right to intervene and hence could not be bound.⁹⁷

2. BY NON-MARINE PROCEEDINGS. On the other hand a proceeding in a non-maritime court, although authorized by a local statute to be brought against a vessel by name, is but a proceeding to reach the interest of the owner. Hence it sells only his interest. Maritime claimants who do not participate are not bound thereby and can still proceed in admiralty to enforce their liens against the boat in the hands of a purchaser at such sale.⁹⁸

E. By Extrajudicial Sale of Vessel—1. BY THE MASTER. An inherent power of the master exists to sell the vessel when she has met with such a disaster that no possibility of saving her either by means of raising funds on bottomry or otherwise remains, and it is necessary for the benefit of all concerned. Such sale divests all existing liens, which are thereby transferred to the proceeds of sale.⁹⁹

2. BY THE OWNER. An ordinary sale by the owner does not divest a maritime lien, although the purchaser was ignorant of its existence, unless there are some circumstances of laches or estoppel on the part of the maritime claimant.¹ The Cases reviewed and criticized.—In Ashbrook v. The Golden Gate, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 574, Newb. Adm. 296, Judge Wells held that a sale under process of a state court does not divest liens arising under the general maritime law. As to liens under the local law, he held that they are divested if the local law clearly shows such intent, on the theory that as the state need not give them at all, it can prescribe the conditions under which they will vest or divest. This is true as to local liens non-maritime by nature. As to maritime liens arising under local law, they are enforceable, not because created by state law, but because they are maritime; and it is difficult to understand how a state statute can deprive an admiralty court of its jurisdiction to enforce them, or make a clear title against a maritime claim. There is a dictum to the same effect in Woodward v. Dillworth, 75 Fed. 415, 21 C. C. A. 417. On the other hand in Moran v. Sturges, 154 U. S. 256, 14 S. Ct. 1019, 38 L. ed. 981, it was held that maritime liens could not be divested by a receivership proceeding in a state court. It was a case where both domestic and foreign liens were under consideration. The decision of Judge Campbell in Auther v. The Atlantic, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 668, holding that a sale under state process extinguishes prior maritime liens is not sustainable in the face of the authorities above cited.

F. By Release of Vessel on Bond. A bond given to release a vessel from attachment is in contemplation of law a substitute for the vessel itself, and hence all who have intervened in that case up to the giving of the bond must look to the bond; and the vessel is discharged from their liens.³ But it does not discharge those who did not intervene. The vessel returns to the owner cum onere, and claimants who had liens at the time of giving the bond and did not intervene can proceed against the vessel, leaving those who did intervene to their bond.⁴ Nor does it affect liens subsequently arising. The vessel when released on bond

No. 11,713, Brown Adm. 76. The report is not clear whether the property was actually in the possession of the government at the time of the seizure. If so, it is hard to see how the lien could be enforced even though it existed, if the proceeding involved dispossession of the government.

can contract new debts and be held therefor.⁵ But by express statute in the United States a vessel owner, when his vessel is arrested, may give bond in double the amount of the claims asserted against her and have her discharged from causes of action then asserted. He may also protect her from causes of action thereafter asserted so long as he keeps the penalty of his bond double the amount of the libels.⁶ And, by the provisions of the Limited Liability Act and the rules of court prescribing the method of securing its benefits, a vessel owner may surrender his vessel, have her appraised, give bond for her appraised value and thereafter hold her free from all claims against which that act is a protection, and relegate such claimant to such bond.⁷

G. Effect of Bankruptcy or Other Change of Owner's Status. As an admiralty lien is a claim against the thing itself, regardless of questions of ownership, it ought to be clear on principle that a discharge of the owner under the operation of bankrupt⁸ or insolvent⁹ laws would only release his personal liability and would not affect the lien. And such is the result of the authorities.¹⁰

H. Revival of Lien. A lien barred by staleness is not revived by a new remedy given by law so as to affect other rights vested in the meanwhile.¹¹

IX. ASSIGNABILITY OF LIEN.

A. By Express Assignment. The better authority is that an ordinary maritime lien is assignable, and may be enforced either in the name of the lien claimant or his assignee.¹² But there is quite a line of cases holding that such a lien is personal and cannot be assigned.¹³

The difference between a pure proceeding in rem and an attachment in a common-law court as incident to a claim against defendant has been pointed out in a previous connection supra, VII, B, 3, b, (II), (B). State statutes which are merely such attachment proceedings are valid, as there shown. It is true that when there is no appearance, the judgment goes simply against the attached property, but where there is an appearance the suit becomes a personal one against defendant with the bond simply remaining as security. *Pennoyer v. St. at L. 1354, added the provision as to subsequent claims.

7. The original Limited Liability Act of March 3, 1851, constitutes U. S. Rev. St. (1878) §§ 4282-4289 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901) p. 2943]. It was extended by the act of June 26, 1884, 23 U. S. B. As Incident to Assignment of Note or Draft. An admiralty lien is not only expressly assignable, but if a note or draft is given for it, and that note or draft is transferred, the lien passes with it as an incident.¹⁴

X. PRIORITIES.

A. As Between Maritime and Non-Maritime Liens — 1. IN GENERAL. As a maritime lien is a claim against the res as a res, regardless of separate interests therein, a maritime lien takes precedence of non-maritime interests or claims.¹⁵

2. AS BETWEEN LIENS UNDER GENERAL MARITIME LAW AND NON-MARITIME LIENS OR CLAIMS — a. As Against Mortgage — (i) IN AMERICA. It is settled by numberless decisions that a maritime lien, irrespective of questions of waiver or staleness, takes precedence of a mortgage whether prior or subsequent thereto. If the mortgage was prior, the ordinary maritime lien arising on contract, being based on the necessities or maritime use of the vessel, is for the benefit of the mortgage as preserving or bettering the res. If the mortgage is subsequent, it vests subject to the lien, there being no requirement of recording as to general maritime liens.¹⁶ This doctrine is not affected by the section in the federal statutes providing that no bill of sale, mortgage, hypothecation, or conveyance of any vessel or part of any vessel of the United States shall be valid against any person other than the grantor or mortgagor, his heirs and devisees, and persons having actual notice thereof, unless recorded in the office of the collector of the customs where such vessel is

In addition to the above cases, cited pro and con and which are directly in point, there are a number of dicta or intimations in other cases, assuming the assignability or non-assignability of such liens on the mere authority of those cases or without discussion. These are reviewed by Judge Brown in The Emma L. Coyne, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,466, and by Judge Lowell in The Sarah J. Weed, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,350, 2 Lowell 555, which are the leading cases in favor of assignability. The leading cases against assignability are The R. W. Skillinger, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,181, 1 Flipp. 436, and The Champion, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,583, Brown Adm. 520.

14. The Chelmsford, 34 Fed. 399; The Pride of America, 19 Fed. 607.

But the holder of a note or draft, although an innocent holder, acquires only such a lien as the original lien claimant had. If items are included which are not maritime he acquires no lien for such items, although the draft purports to cover only maritime claims. Fechtenburg v. The Woodland, 104 U. S. 180, 26 L. ed. 705 [affirming 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,976, 7 Ben. 110, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,977, 14 Blatchf. 499]; The Joseph Cunard, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,535, Olcott 120.

Decisions on the assignability of liens include some cases holding seamen's wages to be assignable.—This is modified by section 61 of the act of June 7, 1872 (U. S. Rev. St. (1878) § 4536 [U. S. Comp. St. (1901)

No. 12,483c] (mortgage prior in date); Zollinger v. The Emma, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,218 (mortgage prior in date). In the E. M. McChesney, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,463, 8 Ben. 150, and Wilson v. The Jewess, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,812, the priority of the maritime liens was upheld on the ground that the mortgagee, either by passive or active conduct, had held the boat out as worthy of credit. See also Crosby v. The Oriental, 6 Fed. Cas. No.

registered or enrolled, and excepting bottomry from its provisions.¹⁷ This act is a mere registry act, intended to regulate the relative rights of those interested in questions of title connected with the vessel, and does not apply to maritime liens.¹⁸

(II) IN ENGLAND. In England it is held that, independent of statute, a materialman has no implied lien, but can protect himself only by an express contract of bottomry, and that the recent English jurisdictional statutes do not give the materialman a lien but only a right of arrest which is subject to liens existing at the time of such arrest.¹⁹ Hence in England a mortgage ranks claims of materialmen.²⁰ But the sole reason for this ruling is that materialmen have no implied lien at all. In England as in America claims which constitute maritime liens are prior to mortgages or other non-maritime liens.²¹

b. As Against Execution Lien. An execution from a common-law court cannot displace a maritime lien.²²

c. As Against Receiver's Title. A maritime lien may be incurred while a vessel is being operated by a receiver of a court, and will be good against the claims asserted in such court, even receiver's certificates.²³

d. As Against Homestead Claim. This is also a common-law title and is subsequent to maritime liens.²⁴

e. As Against Construction Claim. A construction claim not being maritime in its nature is postponed to a maritime lien.²⁵

f. As Against Express Non-Maritime Hypothecation by the Owner. Such a hypothecation is subsequent to a maritime lien.²⁶

3. AS BETWEEN STATUTORY AND NON-MARITIME LIENS — a. Independent of Express Statutory Regulation. It is now settled, despite an early conflict of decisions, that maritime liens arising by virtue of local statutes rank a mortgage; for they

The constructive notice given by recording the mortgage does not affect maritime claimants, their rights being independent of such knowledge. Wilson v. The Jewess, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,812.

19. See supra, III, B, 2, f, (III).

This is true as to an ordinary attachment in a state court not purporting to enforce a lien. The mortgage would be prior. Perkins v. Pike, 42 Me. 141, 66 Am. Dec. 267.

21. Raikes & K. Adm. 122, 126; The Hope, 1 Aspin. 563, 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 287; The Orelia, 3 Hagg. Adm. 75; The Aline, 1 W. Rob. 111.

22. Phillips v. The Thomas Scattergood, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,106, Gilp 1. The above was an execution in favor of the United States. Even such an execution does not divest liens already accrued. Conard v. Atlantic Insurance, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 386, 7 L. ed. 189; In re Hambright, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,973; U. S. v. Charleston, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,276, Bee 196.

23. The Willamette Valley, 62 Fed. 293 [affirmed in 66 Fed. 565, 13 C. C. A. 635], 76 Fed. 838. The receiver in the above was a foreign receiver and this fact greatly influenced the decision, but the relative priorities would be the same in the case of a receiver of the same state.

24. The Guiding Star, 9 Fed. 521 [affirmed in 18 Fed. 263]. See also Johnson v. Ward, 27 Ohio St. 517, holding that the owner of the vessel by contracting a debt which made a lien under the state vessel law prevented himself from claiming a homestead out of the boat.

25. The Guiding Star, 9 Fed. 521 [affirmed in 18 Fed. 263].

26. The Native, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 10,054, 14 Blatchf. 34. This was an express pledge of the boat by the owner to secure funds ad-are maritime by nature, regardless of their origin.²⁷ The same principle applies as against other common-law liens or claims.²⁸
